THERE MUST BE ORDER

There must be law and order and decency in all walks of life and in all activities if mankind is to live in any sort of comfort and safety, indeed if man is to live at all. There are people who try to conceal this fact, but sooner or later it makes itself evident in very emphatic way. In provincial, Dominion and municipal politics, there are always a few who pretend that law and order may be flouted, but once they achieve place of responsibility they do not take very long to understand that some sort of orderliness must be maintained and soon they are likely to be more insistent upon forms and ceremonies than those who always viewed them as but means to an end. There have been Dominion, provincial and municipal examples of the truth that order must be maintained or the interests of all will suffer, but the present session of the Ontario Legislature has given one of the most striking proofs of the truth that disorderly tactics eventually will overwhelm even the disorderly themselves.

Since the present government took office the Ontario Legislature has shown a tendency to disregard the amenities of debate and to disrespect order and the courtesy owed to opponents. When protest was made against some of the expressions used and the disorderly tactics adopted the reply was to the effect that the days of the reactionary Tory had passed and that it was the day of the common people. It was useless to respond with the fact that this really implied an insult to the common people—that it suggested the common people were vulgar, abusive, unreasonable, disorderly. Perhaps the chief offender in the Ontario Legislature was the premier, an emotional fellow, with a great deal more self-assurance than experience or knowledge. This session, however, brought its own remedy. Not only did his followers pattern after the premier in rashness and noise, but the opposition adopted somewhat similar tactics. Then to cap it all, the spectators followed the example of the Legislators, and there was soon such a disorderliness that even the premier could see that such a condition could not continue. When spectators, who had been allowed to applaud the premier or some of his followers, so far forgot themselves as to cheer the opposition or to boo the government, even the government of to-day realized that some sort of orderliness is essential even in a provincial legislature. The Speaker of the Ontario Legislature has had a difficult time. The necessity for enforcing some form of order has been forced upon him. It has been made very evident why there are rules of debate and laws of order in the House. It has been proved that these rules and laws must be enforced without fear or favour and upon all concerned. Anything else means such disorder that the business of the House cannot progress. Hon. Mr. Hippel, Speaker of the Ontario House, should be congratulated on taking a firm stand and letting all know that he will insist upon the rules of law and order being maintained by all—the Government, the opposition, the spectators. In this the Speaker should have the full support of all. Without order there can be no progress. The Legislature is no show, no circus, no entertainment for the masses, but a business organization that must observe law and order to carry on its proceedings with any success or satisfaction.

WHAT IS LOYALTY?

"What is loyalty?" The Northland Post of Cochrane asks, suggesting that The Advance give answer.

The answer may be found in any dictionary, but better still in the hearts and lives of honest and honourable men.

"Loyalty," says the King's English Dictionary, "is the state or quality of being loyal; fidelity to the sovereign, the state or to one's country; fidelity to law, duty, marriage vow, etc."

The definition of the word "loyal" is still more pertinent to the query of The Northland Post "Loyal" is defined as:—"Devoted to the maintenance of law; faithful to the lawful government; faithful to the sovereign; faithful to a lover or friend, especially under trying circumstances."

Attention might well be called to that phrase, "especially under trying circumstances." There are many who are very loyal when it is only a matter of flag-waving or celebration, but under the "trying circumstances" of paying taxes, or observing laws objectionable to them personally or making sacrifice of one sort or another for the common good, they lose all loyalty and have instead a volume of chicanery such as has been the excuse of the traitor from time immemorial.

It would seem from the dictionary definitions that newspapers should not need to tell anyone what constitutes loyalty. Loyalty should be learned in the home, the school and in the very heart of men themselves.

The Northland Post apparently has been finding the game of life a difficult one to play. Instead of blaming the player, it would stop the game to change the rules to suit itself. It doesn't look very sporting. Indeed, it is no more sporting than the incident that prompted The Northland Post to ask "what is loyalty?" This incident was that of the town councillor who said he took the oath of allegiance to the new king "under protest," whatever that might signify. How any oath, that distinctly specifies that it is taken without equivocation, evasion or reservation, can be taken "under protest" is a puzzle, indeed. The truth seems to be that those who quibble about such matters as loyalty and allegiance are anxious for all the advantages of British citizenship, but wish to avoid any obligations. Town councillors who do not wish to be loyal British citizens can scarcely expect the British privilege of holding public office in a British country. It is doubtful if there would be much objection made if they cavilled at being British subjects without seeking at the same time all the blessings of British citizenship. That, however, is the trouble: they want to be British subjects for their own protection and profit, but ask for British tolerance when there are any responsibilities or duties to be done. At this moment it is pertinent to ask: In what other country under the sun has a man the liberty to say he is taking an oath under protest? The Advance would not advise anyone to try such a trick even in the United States, the much-heralded "land of freedom."

The fact of the matter is that the loyalty of a people is essential to the maintenance of any country. "Loyalty" is simply playing the game by yourself and others. If the laws, the system, the government does not suit you, you have every liberty to criticize, to seek by all peaceful means to change, to overthrow. But until there is a change, there must be loyalty. Anything else is treason to the majority, to the men who lived and laboured and died to build the structure of the nation. Those who think there is something broad, tolerant, modern, in disloyalty and disaffection deceive themselves. Disloyalty is mean, narrow, selfish, and older than Judas Iscariot.

Loyalty is simply observing the rules of the game, until the rules are changed. All the silly and selfish talk in the world will not alter that fact. It is a mild word to call the disloyal man a poor sport. But he is that—and more. Those who adopt disloyalty as a pose they imagine to be modern or clever are not only giving themselves a poor advertisement, but they are also imputing a discreditable want of perception to the ordinary honest citizen. Industry, business, the home, the family, the community, the state, the country, the people, all rest upon loyalty, and it is a sad case when a young fellow with a little education asks the question:—"What is loyalty?"

GRAVEL AND SAND—AND PLACER

For gentle irony the cake for last month goes to The Toronto Mail and Empire's editorial note:—"Well, if Halle Selassie has been wounded it is more than you can say for Mussolini."

The New Liskeard Speaker, the Haileyburian, the Timmins town council, are right in saying that what the North needs in the way of radio is a government radio relay station to make radio available in the North.

Of the making of excuses there is no end. A number of local men claimed to have missed church on Sunday morning so that they could listen to King Edward VIII's address to his people. Probably they missed church in the evening, because they missed church in the morning.

Last week in the Ontario Legislature one member tried to create a sensation by charging that some forest fires during the time of the Henry Government were started by men who expected to be hired to fight the fires. The same thing happened under the present government. In neither case was the government to blame. In both cases prosecutions took place to seek the punishment of those charged with setting fires.

What is the League of Nations doing to stop the war in Tokio? It appears as if a lot of people would be killed in Japan if the present war there spreads. Isn't it rather funny that pacifists should be so horrified at a man being killed by his second cousin, but apparently be little concerned over brothers slaying each other? Apparently the pacifists, including the communists, are against all war but civil war.

The chairman of the public school board has suggested the early need for additional room for pupils. There is likely to be accommodation for 300 more pupils he thinks. The people of Timmins have been generous and far-sighted in providing school facilities. This is one special reason why at this time the interests of the people should be the first consideration. Every possible effort should be centred on meeting whatever need there may be with the least possible cost. A new school building in the northern part of the town seems to be the logical solution. The authorities, however, should not be wheedled or stampeded into any rash action in the matter. The best plan would seem to be to determine the need, select the ideal site for the new school, and then by expropriation proceedings secure that particular site if there is any disposition to force a less desirable site upon the board.

Appreciation Expressed to the Dalton Bus Service for the Carefulness and Attention that Protected Public.

Timmins, Ont., Feb. 29th, 1936 To the Editor of The Advance, Timmins.

Dear Sir:—Believing as I do, that a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver, I would ask you through the medium of your valuable paper to convey to the Dalton Bus Drivers on behalf of all who travel thereon, our sincere thanks and appreciation for their very careful driving during the period when the roads were very dangerous and which called for every precaution on their part to prevent an accident which might easily have happened with very sad results.

I am sure, sir, that the public feels as I do on this matter, so on their behalf I again extend to them "A great Big Thank you" for safe and trustworthy driving. I remain, sir, Yours sincerely, John Higginbotham.

Many Here Listen to Address by King

His Majesty Clearly Heard in Timmins and District Yesterday in Inspiring Words.

Continuing in his father's way of speaking directly to the people of the British Empire, His Britannic Majesty King Edward VIII yesterday expressed not only to the British but to the people of every nation his own, his mother's and his family's gratitude for "the tribute of sorrow from every side." His message did not end there. The King will do his utmost to reign in the same spirit his father did. "May the future bring peace to the people of the world; prosperity and happiness to the British people; and may we be worthy of the heritage that is ours," he said, concluding the ten-minute address that went around the world.

As the great gong of Big Ben struck the afternoon hour of four o'clock in London and clocks in Timmins pointed to 11 in the morning, the first stirring notes of God Save the King brought the Empire's new King into the homes of thousands here and millions all over the earth. There was no fanfare or flourish. A simple "London calling the Empire" and the statement that His Britannic Majesty would give "a message to his people" made the whole introduction.

King Edward's high regard for his father, his father's work and sincerity, and his determination to carry on from where his father left off, made the theme of the brief address, delivered in that manner of speech, "but finds favour over the whole wide Empire where a hundred and one 'accents' distinguish its people. "He set a high example in his devotion to duty. In time of adversity his calm confidence was an inspiration to his people and he shared alike in their joys and in their sorrows," the King said.

To India, the King Emperor sent a special message in which he recalled his father's fine ideals in helping to preserve the peace and unity of the Indian Empire. "It is my solemn trust to maintain and strengthen those associations."

It is no mere fancy that the late King "ruled in the hearts of his people," said King Edward, and the long years of unstinted labour were rewarded last year by the people of the Empire in the demonstration in connection with the celebration of his twenty-fifth year on the throne.

"It falls on me to succeed him and to carry on his work," said the King in bringing his address to a conclusion. "I am better known to most of you as the Prince of Wales. I have had the opportunity, during the war and since, of getting to know the peoples of nearly every country in the world under all conditions and fortitudes. Though I now speak to you as the King, it is the same man who will continue to promote the wellbeing of my fellow men."

The King's last sentence, quoted in the second paragraph, was as a benediction to his people, as well as a sincere hope that the people of the Empire will under his reign work as faithfully for peace and happiness throughout the world as they did during his father's life on the throne.

Kirkland Lake had an all-time record police docket for that town on Thursday last, there being 72 cases before Magistrate Atkinson. This is along the same size of courts that made records in Timmins some years ago. Kirkland's large number of cases, however, included 20 taken in a raid on an alleged gambling club. These cases were all adjourned for a week, the man charged with being the "keeper" being out on $500 bail.
