Kiwanis Carnival was a Great Success
Two Lads Hurt
Only two injuries marred the otherwise perfect ice carnival. In the obstacle race Keith Cook and Lloyd Beaudin received scratches. Going through one of the barrels Lloyd Beaudin caught his arm on a nail and tore off a strip of skin and some flesh from wrist to elbow of his left arm. His right arm was also scratched but not nearly so badly. Keith Cook received scratches on his arms also in the obstacle race. Both boys were immediately attended to by the St. John Ambulance Brigade.

St. Joseph's School Win Relay
The St. Joseph's separate school relay team had no trouble winning the relay for school. This fighting little team of French-Canadians, coached by "Chris" Charron who was a few years back a speed artist himself, easily captured the event and now have possession of the George Taylor Hardware trophy for one year. Each of the boys received a medal as well. They finished half a lap ahead of Matagami school and a lap ahead of Central school and the other two entrants in the race. The race was twelve laps around, each man skating three laps.

Many in Costume
A surprising number of people appeared in costume and many of the costumes were very well represented. Of a hundred or so that had costumes only eight received prizes. The costumes were well-judged and the judges Mrs. P. T. Molesley, Mrs. E. H. King and Rev. Bruce Millar, are to be complimented.

Lady of 62 Gets Special
A special prize was awarded to Mrs. Weir of Government road who was dressed as an old lady. Mrs. Weir had to make pretence of the "old" part, though entered as 62 years of age, but could skate with anybody on the ice. She skated as long and as well as any of them.

A second special prize was awarded to Dr. S. L. Honey, as Father Time. This attractive costume was well presented, having the long whiskers, seville and all.

The first in the ladies' comic went to a couple of mice, Mickey and Minnie, who turned out to be Anita Doucet and Gladys Cooper. Boys' comic first went to Arthur Orr dressed as a Chinese laundryman.

Charlie Green and Bob Chalmers were the winners of the first prize in the men's fancy dress. They were dressed as an Arab and a Spanish Caballero. The first in the ladies' fancy dress went to Miss Emma Dubreuil, as a lady of 1860.

Mocassin Dance
The mocassin dance at the end was slow in starting. Evidently everyone wanted to dance but no one wanted to start. Finally "Fee-wee" Chantier and Myrtle Cook got on the ice and danced for five minutes or so alone. Soon another couple started and another until in fifteen minutes the ice was well filled with dancers. They kept on dancing till about 11:30 when the ice was cleared. Institute Honours Heroes of the Mines

Second Gallant Hero of Mining Industry Honoured by Canadian Mining Institute This Year.
The mineral industry of Canada wages a most vigorous campaign to safeguard the men engaged in this industry. In spite of precautions there arise, from time to time, emergencies when men, to save others from injury or death, must risk their own lives. The men in this industry take these risks instinctively, valiantly and with no thought of praise or reward.

For many years the members of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy have urged that the Institute cite and acclaim such acts of heroism; that, just as the highest distinction of the British soldier is the Victoria Cross, so some significant emblem perhaps of little intrinsic value, should be conferred by the mineral industry upon the hero in the ranks of that industry.

Two years ago this matter was brought to the front through the medium of the Canadian Mining Journal and the editorial on the subject inspired many expressions of approval. It was decided that such a medal should be founded and through the efforts of Mr. E. A. Collins, of the International Nickel Company, funds were secured for the foundation of this award.

The first presentation was made at the annual meeting of the C.I.M. and M. held at Winnipeg in March, 1935. The recipient was Patrick Meehan, an employee of the Central Manitoba Mine. The citation was as follows:
"On September 15, 1930, Patrick Meehan and his helper had lighted the fuses for a round of shots in a stope of the Central Manitoba mine. The helper fell from the ladder as they were leaving the stope and was stunned. Their lights were extinguished. Patrick Meehan descended in the darkness to rescue the unconscious man. The first shot exploded as Meehan carried him away and, although severely injured, Meehan succeeded, at the risk of his own life, in rescuing his helper."
"This truly heroic act, done in the darkness, deep down below the surface of the earth, should be brought to the light that all men may know and praise it."

Therefore, the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy in recognition of this valiant deed has conferred upon Patrick Meehan the Institute Medal for bravery.

At the thirty-sixth annual general meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy being held this week in Ottawa, and concluding this evening, Alfred Ball, of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company receives this medal. The circumstances of the deed which won this medal for Mr. Ball are as follows:
"Fireboss Ball, while inspecting his district in "B" seam, Michel Colliery, detected a piece of apparently bad rock and, immediately detailed three men named William Jenkins, Joseph Zanon and James Travis to reinforce the timbering at this place. While these men were preparing to do this work, a large rock "bell" or "spot" fell from the roof and covered Jenkins completely except for his head; both Zanon and Travis declared that Jenkins saved their

Petition in Kentucky Asked Repairs to Road to Tipperary
(Kincaid's Review)
From Providence, Rhode Island, comes a surprising and amusing story of the carelessness of legislators over public expenditures.

A group of persons, who believed that a non-existent soldier could get a bonus from the state legislature, prepared a bill for the payment of a bonus of $100 to Private Eval O. W. Tnesba, of the 12th Machine Gun Company in recognition of his services to the state and nation. A Republican senator introduced the bill in the State Senate and no objection was raised to its immediate consideration. It was not until it had passed that one of the senators noticed that the unusual name, when reversed, spelled "Assent W. O. Leave," and obtained reconsideration of the bill.

(Winnipeg Free Press)
When the remarks of Lord Tweeds-muir, the Governor-General, "in these days of super-abundant legislation the lawyer has usually to clear up the mess that the politicians make" fell under the eagle eye of The Ottawa Journal, the reaction was immediate. The Journal by the way, habitually defends the politicians as a class and declares that they are not half so black as they are painted. But that was not just the point in this case.

The Journal shows how new legislation before enactment is examined and passed by the lawyers and adds that they "are not made by politicians who are notoriously incompetent, but are made in practically every case—made from beginning to end—by the ablest of our lawyers."

It is a good argument. Any question as to the correct or defective drafting of legislation—which is evidently what Lord Tweeds-muir had in mind—is largely a matter between lawyers themselves. When lawyers outside of Parliament criticize the quality of legislation they are criticizing their brethren in Parliament or in the service of the Government.

Thinks North Needs R.R. Branch Lines

Jack Hammell Believes the Railways Better than Truck Roads. Other Highlights from Meeting.

The meeting last week of the Ontario Prospectors' and Developers' Association gave the Toronto newspapers lots to write about though none of them "covered" the convention fully. All of them, however, gave considerable space to the sessions of the association and the prospectors certainly proved excellent "copy." One Toronto despatch noted in particular the able address of John E. Hammell at the annual banquet of the Ontario Prospectors' and Developers' Association on Friday evening last at the King Edward hotel.

Comment was made on the fact that the prospectors defied all superstitious ideas of jinx or ill-luck by holding the banquet on Friday the thirteenth. However, it wasn't the thirteenth banquet—just the fifth annual affair of the organization.

Six hundred members of the Ontario Prospectors' and Developers' Association cheered John E. Hammell to the echo when he said:

"What the North Country wants is plenty of branch lines to develop it." In advocating railway branches as the most convenient and the most economical means for opening and developing new country, Hammell, who ought to know a lot from experience about opening new country, was more than doubtful about the economy of building and maintaining motor roads. For mining country roads had to stand the traffic of heavy trucks, unless there were railway facilities for handling heavy machinery and supplies. Trucks were certainly hard on roads, and to maintain roads that were used by trucks was a costly proceeding.

Continuing his argument, Mr. Hammell said:—

Get Away From Red Tape
"We've got to get away from all this red tape, pussy-footing and stuffed shirts, he continued. "I was talking to the railways about a line and they figured it would cost $6,000,000 to build an 80-mile branch line. Why, I could build the best railroad in the North Country for $1,000,000."

"They talk about truck roads in the North Country. I saw a road up there that the Northern Development Department had been working on for two years and there was a big sign on it, 'Impassable.' They can lay down a railroad for half the money and maintain it for an eighth of what it would take to keep up the truck road."

"The government has all the rolling stock it needs for these branch lines. About all it would cost would be for labour, and wouldn't it be far better to put the young men to work on the railroads than put them in relief camps? A college graduate going into one of these relief camps comes out a bum," he said.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Ontario Minister of Mines, emphasized that despite the efforts of the Government to cut expenditures the mining industry has been considered of such prime importance that the estimates for his department had been increased by 30 per cent. "The increased money will go toward furthering the mining industry and not to supply jobs for the friends of the party of which I am a member," he declared.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion Minister of Mines, assured the mining men that in the proposed consolidation of his department "mining will not lose its identity." He said Canada had produced $116,000,000 in gold last year and $100,000,000 in base metals.

"I take my hat off to the prospectors of Canada; they hold first place in the industry," he went on. "And let me appeal to the men who put capital into the mines to see that the man who discovered the mine gets his fair share."

Gilbert La Bine, president of the association, said 90 per cent of the present gold output was coming from mines discovered 10 to 20 years ago and "the finding of new properties is not keeping up with the depletion of the old."

Prospector Restless
"I wonder if it wouldn't be better if the prospector went back to his canoe and went a little more slowly," declared R. J. Ennis, president of the Ontario Mining Association. "It seems to me that the aeroplane has made the prospector restless and he may be flying right past likely looking prospects."

John E. Hammell drew a big laugh when he suggested prospectors' hardships are vastly overrated. "We were never so happy as when we had to sleep under the stars and yank some fish out of the lake for food. It's tougher being in an office where 15 people come in every day and weep on you for a touch," he said.

There were many colorful men present at the banquet. Gilbert La Bine, the new president, and his brother, Charlie, were discoverers of the Great Bear Lake radium-bearing ore. Russell Cryderman, 64, dean of prospectors, said to be one of the oldest still on the trails, has been prospecting 45 years and has yet to set foot in an aeroplane.

Tom Montgomery, another veteran from New Liskeard, made his first appearance since he had his leg broken in the Sturgeon River area, and was brought out to "the steel" by dog-team, but insisted on being brought on to Toronto before having his leg set.

Jay and Jack Kenty and Len Brookbanks, early stakers in the Sturgeon River area; Greg Brennan, of Porcupine, Gowganda and Kirkland Lake fame, also were present.

W. W. "Hard Rock Bill" Smith, who made the first strike in the Long Lac area, and who is credited with starting more gold rushes than any other Ontario prospector, said he was all ready for the spring workout. Then there were Bill Fairburn, Walter Segworth, Karl Springer, past president; Bob Jowsey, past president; Dr. Chas. Cam-sell, federal deputy minister of mines; Alex and Murdoch Mosher, Jack Munro, one-time mayor of Elk Lake and who fought Jeffries for the world's championship during his Montana prospecting days; Bill Couchenour, Ed Darrough, of Haileybury, who has been prospecting 36 years, but never learned to swim, and Jim Boyle.

One prospector led a duck through the hotel lobby on a string, but was refused admittance to the banquet because he lacked a ticket for the duck.

Floods Again Threaten Loss and Death to Johnstown

The older generation will remember the serious floods at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, in 1889, when 2300 lives were lost and immense damage done. The tragedy at Johnstown was so devastating that it became a by-word and to mention the Johnstown flood was to recall a disaster of major proportions. Sympathy and money poured into stricken Johnstown from all quarters of the globe.

History has again repeated itself this week, although fortunately neither the property damage nor the loss threatens to assume the staggering proportions of 47 years ago. Yesterday the city was reported as under 12 feet of water.

The tournament alleys were crowded with the best pin hitters on the continent.
