Recalling the Motor Car Twenty-One Years Ago

(H. V. O'Brien in Chicago Daily News) Never before in human history has it been possible for a middle-aged man to look back on his youth and see antiquity.

I had this experience the other day when going through an old account book. In it was a detailed record of automobile ownership, "way back in 1915. My Maxwell car of that year got 12.3 miles to the gallon, but after the attachment of various "gas savers" the mileage went up to 20.6, with an annual average of 17.3. That is better than any car of my recent experience has done. Incidentally, my account book shows repeated investment in devices for increasing gas mileage.

It is interesting to note that in 1915 gasoline (untaxed) cost 20 cents a gallon, while oil was only 16 cents a quart. To-day gasoline costs about the same, despite heavy taxation; while the price of oil has practically doubled. Among the entries in my account book I find such quaint items as "ether for starting," "belt dressing," and "talcum powder." This last was used for dusting the inside of the castings. In those days we fixed our own flats. For more difficult jobs we paid mechanics 85 cents an hour.

The most expensive item of motoring, back in that pioneer era, seems to have been tires. According to my records, a life or 3200 miles was high. One "shoe," as they were called, lasted only 1330 miles. It cost $7.20. One of the most revealing pages in this book concerns a trip in a Ford from New York to Chicago in February, 1919. The first day's run was to Pittsfield—144 miles. The second day we made Utica—120 miles. The third day, by reckless speed, we reached Geneva—125 miles. The runs on succeeding days were Geneva to Buffalo, 104 miles; Buffalo to North East, Pa., 90 miles; North East to Cleveland, 130 miles; Cleveland to Bryan, O., 180 miles; Bryan to LaPorte, Ind., 150 miles; LaPorte to Chicago, 78 miles. Nine days were required for the trip; the staggering average was 124 miles per day.

To be Faced with Charge of Permitting Drunkenness

Acting on a complaint from a Hollinger avenue resident, police yesterday paid a visit to 79 Hollinger avenue and found there five men, said to have been very much under the influence of liquor. They sobered up in the cells and were still there this morning, no bail having been provided. The tenant of the place, Adelard Brazeau, will appear in police court next Tuesday, charged with permitting drunkenness on his premises.

Temiskaming M.P. to Take Members North

Walter Little, M.P., has About Thirty from Dominion House to Come to See Gold Mines.

Word from Ottawa is to the effect that Walter Little, M.P., has arranged with a number of members of the House of Commons to pay a visit to the North. The member for Temiskaming of course will take them to Kirkland Lake, his own home town, and where some of the mines have agreed to show them around. At the same time it would be a good thing for all concerned if the members had the chance also to visit Timmins and the Porcupine while in the North. It is reported that already more than 30 members have accepted Mr. Little's invitation and expect to see the Kirkland Lake gold mines the end of next week. If they make the trip they will not be able to say that they have really visited the real North unless they manage somehow or another to make a trip to Timmins. The purpose that Mr. Little has in mind is to stimulate interest in Northern Ontario's gold mines. This is a worthy purpose and its practical carrying-out should mean advantage to all parties in the deal. To see the North will give the M.P.'s a completely newer and truer conception of the North—especially if the thriving city of Timmins is included in the itinerary.

A Few Thousand Dollars Would Save Lives in North

The Northern Tribune, of Kapuskasing last week had the following: "Mr. James Marconi of Opatatika has called our attention to a recent case which illustrates that the public health administration in Northern Ontario falls far short of meeting popular sentiment, in that it signally fails to provide for emergencies which continually arise; and the result often is that undue suffering is imposed upon persons in outlying sections who suddenly need medical or surgical care, as well as considerable expense and anxiety to their relatives and friends. At a time when so much sympathy has been stirred up by the dramatic rescue of two men from a Nova Scotia mine, it might be quite in order to call attention to the inadequacy of governmental provision for handling such cases. In connection with the Moose River mine rescue, Premier Hepburn is quoted as saying: 'What is a few thousand dollars when human life is at stake?' Mr. Marconi pertinently asks if this praiseworthy sentiment should not be applied to governmental medical services in the North so as to safeguard the health and lives of thousands of settlers regularly, instead of being given spectacular interpretation in one special case. 'It is a matter of record that as soon as the Hepburn government took office, drastic curtailment of the work of district medical health officers in the North was attempted. There has been some modification of this overhasty diminution of the very necessary work of these officials; but it will be generally admitted that there should be much more done, when it would not cost very much more.

The case that Mr. Marconi cites is that of his son, Ernest, who severely gashed his foot while cutting firewood four miles west of Kapuskasing on April 6th. After a copious flow of blood was staunches as well as possible by those near at hand, he was brought to town to get medical attention. After several days it was seen that he required hospital attention, so his father arranged to take him to Hearst, being the nearest public hospital. The lad bled so profusely before the train left here that he swooned several times; in short, he was manifestly unfit to make such a trip, but there seemed nothing else to be done then. Mr. Marconi is probably right in his contention that his boy's life was endangered through being forced to take a train journey while in his precarious condition. We are not at all calling into question the competence of what medical care he received here—we could not go that; the points is the hands of even the doctors, as well as provincial constables and others, are tied in such cases as this, where they surely ought to be vested with discretionary powers.

'May we offer this brief comment now, without any prejudice: We are all delighted that the lives of two Toronto men were so thrillingly saved by the courage and skill of a band of many rescuers who laboured at great risk for days to effect their rescue. But if the province of Ontario saw fit—from a considerable distance from the tragedy—to spend "a few thousand dollars" to supplement the efforts of scores of rescuers already on the scene doing all they could, then this province should not on the other hand try to save "a few thousand dollars" by neglecting to take medical measures in Northern Ontario which quite conceivably would save quite a number of lives each year up here, while also reducing disease, suffering and grief."

Death at Perth of Father of Mrs. F. Huckerby, Timmins

A despatch on Tuesday of this week from Perth, Ont., tells of the death of T. W. James, father of Mrs. F. Huckerby, of Timmins. The despatch says:—

Tribute to the memory of Thomas Wesley James, who died at his home at Perth on Friday, was paid at his funeral held from his residence, 4 North street, Monday afternoon. Rev. Dr. D. N. Moorden, minister of St. Paul's United Church, officiated and interment was made in Elmwood cemetery. Pallbearers were John Crockery, Robt. Parks, L. H. James, James Montgomery, T. A. Poole and J. Gallagher.

Born 79 years ago in the Second Line of Drummond, he was a son of the late John James and Sarah Tietock, pioneer residents of Drummond township. Coming to Perth at an early age, he followed the contracting business. Many of the Perth landmarks stand as monuments to his work. He was a devout member of St. Paul's Church, serving on the board as an elder.

In addition to his widow, the former Miss Wilhelmina Crockery, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frank Huckerby, of Timmins; Ruby, at home; and two sons, John C. James, of Montreal, and Robert, at home. Also surviving are two brothers, W. H. James, of Chatham, and C. A. James, Perth.

Testifying to the high esteem in which he was held, were the many floral tributes received.

GOVERNMENT TO CONSIDER RE-OPENING OF N. S. MINE

Whether or not the Magill mine at Moose River, Nova Scotia, is to be reopened depends on what sort of proposals the management of the mine submits to the Province of Nova Scotia, it was reported this week.

Attractive Address on Poetry to C.G.I.T.

Miss Carthy Interests Gathering of Girls with Original Form of Talk on Poetry.

Last Tuesday evening the Canadian Girls in Training of the Timmins United Church listened to a particularly interesting and instructive address on poetry, given by Miss Carthy. As head of the English department of the Timmins High School Miss Carthy is in a position to really understand and appreciate poetry, and she left with the C. G. I. T. some thoughts about it which they had not entertained before. Miss Carthy opened her talk with W. H. Davies' "Leisure," and then went on to explain to the girls the meaning of poetry. "The baby who beats a tattoo with its spoon" is a poet," said Miss Carthy. This was a new idea to the girls and they listened eagerly as she read, "A Garden is a Lovesome Thing" by Browne, "The Seed Shop" by Muriel Stuart, and the "Tulip" and "The Mystery" by Hodgson. When Miss Carthy had completed her explanation about these flower poems, the girls began to see with her the close connection between flowers and poetry. One poem which Miss Carthy recited seemed particularly lovely and appropriate—"The Cherry Tree" by A. E. Housman, the English poet who died last week, and who was famous as the author of "A Shropshire Lad," Shelley's "The Cloud," Noyes' "Come Down to Kew in Lilac Time," and Wilson's "The Evening Cloud" all in their turn contributed to a fuller understanding and love of poetry.

try. Miss Carthy conclude her delightful talk with Keats' "Endymion." Plans were continued for the "Tea on Deck" of the C. G. I. T. Ship leaving the United Church Dock on Saturday, May 16th, three to six p.m. One call will be made at Home-baking Island. Proceeds in aid of Girls' Camps. All friends of the C. G. I. T. are welcome.

Church of the Deaf to Have Minister of Its Own

Toronto's church for the deaf is to have a minister who will "talk" to the deaf people of that city in their own language. An endowment fund of $25,000, given by Sam Carter, of Guelph, provides part of the expenses of keeping a minister at the Evangelical Church of the Deaf, a part of the United Church of Canada. While repairing a tractor at his farm near Calgary a few days ago Adam Schmalz accidentally set the machine in motion. It ran over his legs, crushing them terribly. Despite his injury, Schmalz crawled to his motor car, started it, and drove four miles for aid. He died in hospital.

Brampton Conservator:—Springtime is a season of joy and a rejuvenation of material things but it has its pests also. And probably the worst of all spring pests is the chap who just can't stay on the sidewalk, but must "cut corners" across lawns that are soft and full of moisture. That chap is in a hurry or thinks he is. He saves a few seconds by cutting across that corner and after he has saved them he has no use for them, does not know what to do with them, does not need them and never did need them.
