Says Treatment May Help the "Curing" of Criminals

Dr. Margaret Patterson Tells Kiwanis Club of Some of Her Experiences in Women's and Morals Court in Toronto. Interesting "Ladies' Night" at Kiwanis Club on Monday

Medical treatment to control the thymus gland might have a great deal to do with the "curing" of criminals, Dr. Margaret Patterson, formerly magistrate of the women's and moral police court in Toronto told the Kiwanis club on Monday evening.

Millions of dollars have been spent inquiring into the causes of cancer, tuberculosis, diphtheria and other diseases, she said, yet there has not yet been any scientific investigation into the cause of crime in Canada. A "tremendous reduction" in crime would be sure to follow such a treatment, with a consequent saving to the Canadian taxpayer in the costs of maintaining police, courts, and jails, she believes.

Girl Stole Glittering Objects
She told the story of a girl who had appeared before her in the Toronto court; she had been found stealing from a store and later took a detective to her room where she had laid out the articles she had stolen in the past. All were bright and glittering. All her life she had been attracted to these glittering things and had not been able to resist the impulse to steal them when the opportunity came. In a careful inquiry into her early life it was found that her mother, in order to quiet her, had simply hung a diamond ring before the child, just out of reach.

The desire for glittering objects became a fixation with the young woman, and from that fixed desire of her younger days, the girl had developed into a thief who had no control over her desire. The thymus gland had been found to be at fault in this case, Dr. Patterson told the Kiwanis. It had not shrivelled as it should have when she attained more mature years, but had continued as a large, healthy gland, feeding the blood a "hormone" that so affected her reactions that she satisfied her craving for glittering objects by stealing them.

Medical Treatment Removed Desire
Medical treatment was given; there was no surgery, no pain of any kind; medicine did the trick of reducing the thymus to its proper size and function. The girl was cured. She lost her desire to steal and in Dr. Patterson's experience, never appeared in court again.

She had suggested at the time of Red Ryan's death that a post mortem be (Continued on Page Eight)

T. & N. O. Roundhouse to be Ready at Early Date

Garage for T. & N. O. Buses May Also be Built at Timmins One Unconfirmed Report Says. Ninety-foot Turntable for Locomotives Almost Completed Now.

Within a couple of weeks the T. & N. O. locomotives will be able to use their new home in Timmins, it is expected. Work on the big new shed, capable of housing six big railway engines, is now in the final stages. Cold weather has been somewhat of a handicap to the T. & N. O. workmen—breaking and digging through frozen sand in zero weather is not a job that can be quickly done.

Paint, the T. & N. O.'s own shade of brown, is going on the new roundhouse and shop now. In the sunshine at the south side where the big doors are, it's not an unpleasant job, but around at the sides in the cold north light, it is not only unpleasant but slow.

Turntable Nearly Ready
The 90-foot turntable is almost ready for use. The big steel frame has been placed on its pivot and the solid flooring for its beams, tarred and tamped up on edge is being laid quickly. Excavation to give the great beam clearance in its circle is almost finished. Tracks leading to the turntable from the north section of the railway yards cannot be completed until the old water tower is removed.

No longer will there be a water tower in the yards, for with all the new equipment, water will be supplied directly from a big town water main, through a stand pipe. No longer will Timmins

Stormy! Unsettled! Now!

Weatherman's Forecast for the Next Few Days Not So Good.

"Generally stormy, unsettled and changeable," the weatherman says the next few days in the Porcupine will be. The thermometer will continue to rise and fall spasmodically as it has in the past week. ### Clothing and Shoes Required by Legion

President of Legion Refers to Need for Supply to Assist Worthy Families.

This week President Austin Neame of the local Legion has called special attention to the need for clothing and shoes for men, women and children. For years past the Legion has been looking after the families of men who served overseas, and if there were any need, the wants were supplied as far as possible. With the approach of winter the need for overcoats, suits, underwear, shirts, boots, hats—indeed, any and every kind of clothing—is apparent. In past years the good people of Timmins have been very generous in this matter, Mr. Neame asks for the same generosity this year. Anyone who has any sort of discarded clothing should leave the same at the Mines Rescue Station or at the fire hall. If this is done, President Neame will see that it is given to some needy person. At the present time the need is great—and quite pressing—and it is to be hoped that the response to the appeal will be generous and immediate.

Third Toxoid Treatment at Clinic Next Monday

Owing to the inclement weather on Monday a number of mothers were unable to bring their children to the clinic for the third treatment of toxoid against diphtheria. The third treatment of toxoid will be available on Monday next, Nov. 23rd, at the clinic, Fifth avenue, opposite the St. Mary's hospital. Next Monday between 3.30 and 4 p.m.

Boycott Talk Deferred

At the meeting of the Northern Ontario Associated Boards of Trade yesterday at New Liskeard the representatives from all part of the North decided to pin their hopes on the delegation being sent from the North to the Ontario Associated Boards at Oshawa. In the meantime the idea of "boycott" that has gained much strength recently was deferred for the present. If the delegation is successful in impressing the South the needs of the North, and if the South responds, the boycott idea will undoubtedly be dropped altogether. Otherwise, however, it will be revived and will be stronger than ever. It will not be easy to retard it in the next time.

Consumers Guild to Have Event To-night

Regular winter activities of the Consumers, Social and Educational Guild have commenced again. The committee has decided to continue with the social nights, so successful last winter. Bingo will be introduced among other modes of entertainment, although these evenings are of an impromptu character, at which those participating can freely decide on any way they wish to amuse themselves. At some occasions waist and chess have been played.

Mingled with the social entertainment at the evening s are numbers of educational importance. Usually someone is invited to present a short talk on some live topic, which is accompanied by general discussion during the serving of refreshments.

A fund for providing summer recreation to the little folk of the Consumers' Co-op, either in the form of outings, or a summer camp, has been planned by the committee.

The Guild has use of the comfortable Consumers Assembly hall, located in the Main Store building of the Consumers Co-op Society. Recently the hall was supplied with a piano to facilitate musical entertainment.

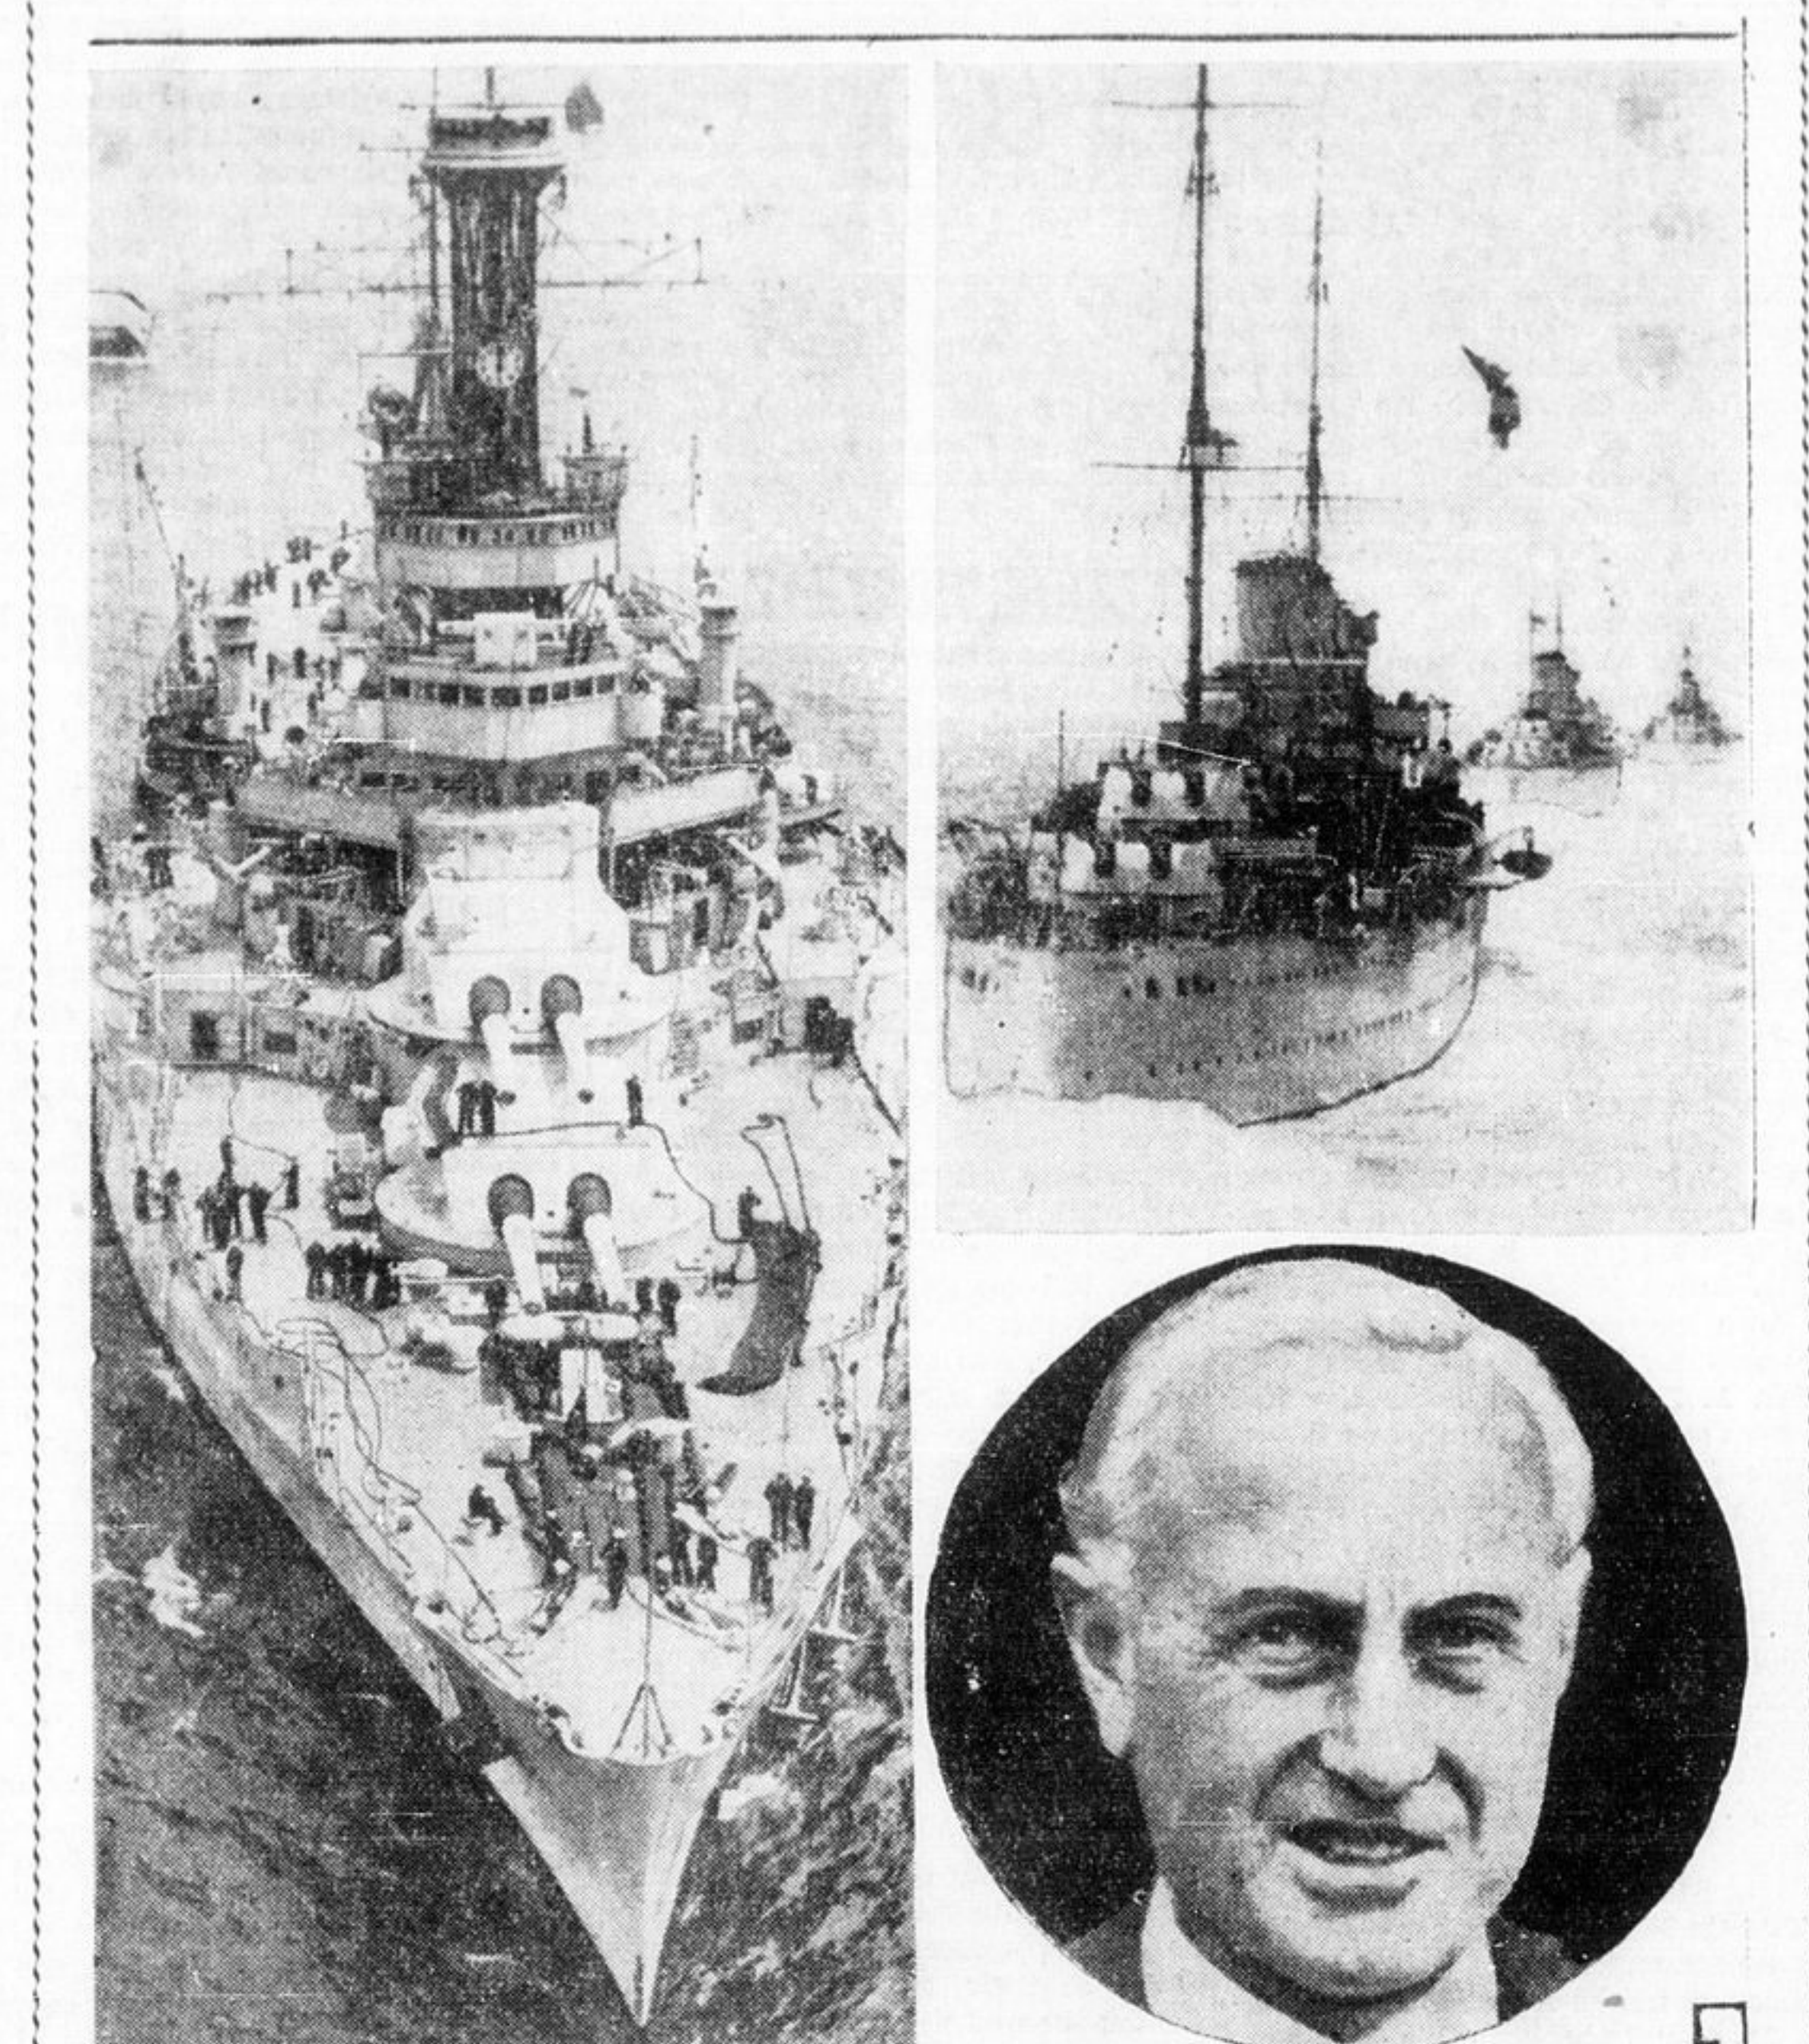

Next on the schedule of social nights is to-night, the event commencing at 8 p.m. In addition to the ordinary diversion of bingo and possibly cards, there will be musical numbers featured by Mr. W. A. Devine and a quarter hour of discussion based on information given by Mr. C. M. Haapanen, manager of the Consumers Co-op.

An interesting item will be the sampling of a new shipment of "Old Country" Co-op tea, the tea that is "filling the nation's teapot," just arrived from the English and Scottish Joint Co-operative Wholesale Society.

No admission is charged to these social evenings and all members or customers of the Consumers Co-op are invited to attend. One purpose of these functions is the "getting together" of the co-op customers and acquainting them with each other in a social and educational way. Needless to say, there are so many matters of common interest to the consumers, that the Guild has a broad field for its social and educational activities.

Born-to Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Spencer, 25 Vimy road, on November 12th—a son.

HOARE SUGGESTS ANGLO-AMERICAN COALITION

World peace, assured by the combined sea strength of England and United States, was visualized in a speech by Sir Samuel Hoare (LOWER RIGHT), first lord of the admiralty, in London. He indicated that Britain would pursue her announced policy of building up the fleet in co-operation with increased air efficiency, so that "when supported as it may be by the other great naval power, it will once again make a world war impossible." The "other great naval power" was interpreted to mean United States Units of the two fleets that may some day work together include the big U.S.S. Arkansas at LEFT, and 1st British cruiser squadron moving in battle formation at RIGHT. Starting at BOTTOM the British ships are H.M.S. Shropshire, Devonshire and London.
