Life Term in Prison for "Lion of North"

Joseph Lentigne, Widely Known in North for His Strength, Pleads Guilty to Manslaughter

Joseph Lentigne, well known in the area west of Cochrane, as well as in Cochrane itself as "the Lion of the North," entered a plea of guilty to a charge of manslaughter at the Supreme Court sittings at Cochrane on Tuesday. He was sentenced to life imprisonment for the crime.

Lentigne was charged with murder following the death Nov. 10th of Raoul Roderigue, following a blow delivered by Lentigne.

According to evidence at the preliminary hearing, Roderigue had not interfered with Lentigne when the blow was struck, and did not strike back in defence. Medical witnesses said the first blow by Lentigne landed in a vital spot on the head.

W. C. Inch, appearing for Lentigne, asked that the charge of murder be amended to one of manslaughter, saying Lentigne was willing to plead guilty to the reduced count. Amending the charge, after Crown counsel's consent, Mr. Justice Chevrier said that in the evidence of the preliminary hearing there was a lack of evidence of motive or malice.

Admits Reputation
Mr. Inch admitted Lentigne, called "the Lion of the North," had a reputation for pugnaciousness and declared he was convinced Lentigne was mentally unsound. Defence counsel declared that had the blow which resulted in death been delivered an inch in any direction away from where it landed it probably would not have killed Roderigue.

A term not exceeding ten years was suggested by Mr. Inch as suitable.

Previous Convictions
Crown Counsel Joseph Sedgwick pointed out Lentigne since 1930 had been convicted three times on charges of violence and assault. Charging Lentigne was a menace to the society in which he moved, Mr. Sedgwick asked that he be imprisoned for a long period.

Declaring great strength was no excuse for his act, Mr. Justice Chevrier told Lentigne he was "a dangerous man because you do not realize the effect of your own strength."

"In the few minutes in which you have been before me," added his Lordship, "I can see that there is something lacking in you. You must be protected against yourself and society must be protected from you."

Lentigne showed no emotion as he was led from court to the cells.

Last November when Raoul Roderigue passed away after being struck by Lentigne there was considerable speculation as to whether or not the "Lion of the North" would put up a battle when the police went after him. He was arrested without any difficulty, however, and went along with the provincial officers as meekly as a lamb. It is said, however, that on some other occasions when the police attempted to restrain him he had caused considerable trouble and in at least one case succeeded in injuring an officer attempting to put him under arrest.

Pants Burglar Makes $177 in Kirkland Lake Hauls

A "pants burglar" is again operating in Kirkland Lake. Last week he made a fine few nights' business in hauls from a couple of hotels. It is said that his game is to study the hotel he favours as well as its guests and it is suspected that he uses a skeleton key to enter some of the rooms when he thinks the guests are out or very sound asleep. The police have been on his trail, but so far have not had any luck. It is the pants burglar who has had all the luck so far, two hotels reporting that he netted at least $177 in the hauls he took from their rooms. This burglar touches nothing but money (except of course the not had any which he takes the money). Sometimes he carries the pants away with him, cropping them wherever suits his convenience, but usually he doesn't even leave the clue of stolen pants to trace him by.
