

BRITAIN EXPERIENCES TROUBLE WITH TRIBES IN INDIA

The Faqir of Ipi is sparing no efforts to incite the tribesmen in Southern Waziristan against the British Government, presumably in the hope that they will embarrass the authorities who are trying to control the situation in Northern Waziristan. British and Indian troops have constantly bombarded the area and our pictures, taken on the Indian battlefront, show top, British officers watching a bombardment in progress to cover the retirement of British and Indian troops from a position. There were a dozen casualties during the retirement. Below are some light tanks in the Lower Khaisora which have done very useful work.

Ten Day Term for Being Drunk in Charge of Car

Case Fought but Conviction Registered. Other Liquor Cases at Police Court Here on Tuesday This Week. Three Months Term for Illegal Sale of Beer.

Found guilty of driving a car while in an intoxicated condition, when he appeared before Magistrate S. Atkinson in the weekly police court Tuesday afternoon, Jack Dunbar, of Timmins, was sentenced to ten days and ordered to pay court costs. Dunbar, who was defended by Dean Kester, entered a plea of not guilty but the evidence of four witnesses, two of the police force and Drs. Kelly and Buell, was conclusive.

Constable A. Guolla testified that Dunbar had appeared to be apparently asleep behind the wheel. When Dunbar's car had been stopped by the police car, driven by Sergeant H. Walker, Dunbar was told to get out and walk. He could not walk straight and was brought to the station.

Sergeant Walker said that what had aroused his suspicions about the car was the fact that the car which Dunbar was driving had stopped behind a parked car before a "hand pig" and on catching sight of the police car coming had swung out and started away again.

When asked by Mr. Kester if there was anything about the police car to identify it from any other, Sergeant Walker said that he knew of nothing but the markers, but that "plenty of people seemed to know it."

Dunbar had been taken to Dr. Kelly's office for examination and on his return to the town hall asked to see Dr. Stahl. Dr. Stahl being unable to come, Dr. A. L. Buell had come in his stead and had made an examination of the man.

In his testimony, Dr. M. J. Kelly stated that having examined Dunbar, employing his regular routine for such examinations, he had come to the conclusion that the man was drunk. On being asked by Mr. Kester to explain his routine for examinations, Dr. Kelly explained that he tested the breath for the odor of liquor, the pupils of the eyes which were usually widely dilated, pulse which was over 100 in an intoxicated, speech for dictation and clearness and a test presumably for balance which consists of placing the subject's feet together and closing his eyes. A man in a normal condition can maintain a vertical position. A check on the gait is also made. Referring to Dunbar, Dr. Kelly said that his breath smelt of alcohol, the pupils were widely distended, his pulse was over 100, speech incoherent and thick, gait staggering, and that he had poor co-ordination between mind and muscles, which was consistent with the formula.

Dr. Buell had made an examination after coming to the town hall shortly after 3 a.m. and after some balking on the word "intoxicated," he finally stated that in his opinion Dunbar had been in an "intoxicated condition."

Phillip St. Aubin was found guilty of having liquor in a public place and was fined $100 and costs. In his own defence, St. Aubin declared that he had been instructed to drive to the place where he had been picked up and that he knew nothing of what was transpiring when the beer had been placed in the car. However, he admitted to being the driver of the car and Constable Devine had testified that he had seen the driver sitting with his arm over the case of beer in the front seat.

Hubert Brunette, who had been standing guard while the beer was being transferred from a garage to the car and who was the lessee of the garage in which seven full cases of beer and five empties were found, was found to be the principal in the case and was assessed $200 and costs.

Albert Fulop, charged with illegally selling beer, had been picked up by Provincial Constables G. E. White and J. W. F. Pretorius on April 7th. He pleaded not guilty but was found guilty on the evidence of the two officers and the fact that he did not know the names of the men found drinking in his place, and was sentenced to three months. The beer was seized and the house was declared a public place under the Liquor Control Act.

Constable White testified that with the aid of a search warrant they had entered Fulop's residence and there had found a number of men, all intoxicated and one woman who was not intoxicated. In addition, one hundred and twenty-four pints of beer were discovered. On his way to the police station, Fulop, according to the officers' evidence, stated that he sold his beer for twenty-five cents a pint while the professionals sold it the year round for thirty-five.

According to Constable Pretorius, Fulop had had the odd job digging graves in the South End cemetery. He kept begging insistently for another chance all the way to the police station.

In his own defence, Fulop declared that he knew the men and had four who would testify. But the men were not present and the court decided that he had had lots of time to procure his witnesses.

Arthur Desautels, charged by Oscar Delorme with stealing a dog harness, was ordered to return the harness.

A case of theft against James Vallier was dismissed owing to lack of evidence. A Mr. Chenier testified that he had seen two men take a suit of clothes from the foot of a bed in which he was at the time reclining, but he could not identify them.

Charles W. Pecton, arraigned on two charges, that of acting as an insurance agent without the license required by the Insurance Act and charge 2—that he paid commissions or compensation to certain persons for placing or negotiating insurance when they did not have license as required by the Insurance Act, was remanded on request of Dean Kester, his attorney, for one week.

Two local men appearing on a charge of offence under the Master and Servants Act, were remanded until April 27.

Ten men about town charged with being drunk were fined $10 and costs while three others who were second offenders paid $50 and costs. James Berrigan who was up in court for the third time on the same offence was given three months.

Ten offenders under the traffic act were assessed $1 and costs for illegal parking. Five more were fined the same amount for failing to stop at an intersection. Four others were fined $10 and costs for driving four in the front seat and speeding.

Paul and Provain Ethier paid $10 and costs for disorderly conduct.

Price of Gold Not Likely to Go Down in Near Future

(From Sudbury Star)

The price of gold, which was fixed in the United States devaluation law of 1934, has been the subject of considerable comment and conjecture during the last few days. Some existing uncertainty with regard to it has resulted in widespread losses in gold securities, as well as the metal stocks in general. It is of interest, however, that on two occasions President Roosevelt has stated definitely that he is not contemplating any change in the price of gold, and twice also Secretary Morgenthau has endorsed the denials.

Expression of opinion on the part of men competent to speak has from time to time indicated that a cut in the price of gold was unlikely. The latest view to be given is that of Jules S. Bache, president of the Dome Mines Limited. It might be thought on some sides that the opinion would be biased because he is head of the gold producer, but

Mr. Bache is a member of the New Yorker Stock Exchange, and also a leading figure in industrial life in the United States.

The Dome president says that gold is more valuable today than ever and that it is ridiculous at this stage to conceive that the Roosevelt administration will reduce the gold value and thereby wash up its major asset. There are two laws that will never be repealed. The first is that of supply and demand. The second is the historical fact that gold has never gone down in value, for the simple reason that those who have gold don't want their assets depreciated. Those who have not gold have nothing to sell, and therefore are probably originators of the rumour that gold is to be cut in price. It is a ridiculous argument that has become one of the myths in man's mind that gold is going to be lowered in value, Mr. Bache observes.

Holder of Canadian gold stocks of late have had the jitters, but there is no reason for it, in the opinion of such men as Mr. Bache. It seems reasonable, even to those who are not in close touch with monetary matters, that if the price were lowered it would cost the United States billions and other nations would grab for the supply. The price of gold is not apt to decline because if it did everything else would also decline, both wages and commodities, and materially and permanently halt the progress of recovery.
