Warning Against Keeping Stray Dogs

Humane Society Points Out That There is a Serious Penalty.

In the course of its work here the Timmins Humane Society has found that there is considerable theft of dogs, though the guilty parties perhaps do not intend any theft, but are just thoughtless in many cases. The theft, as it is looked upon by the law, consists in keeping valuable dogs that happen to stray away from their legal homes. Last week there were actually twelve such cases in Timmins. Dogs strayed away from their homes and could not be located by their owners. Later it was found that people had taken in these dogs and kept them, saying nothing about it. Inspector Oscar Robertson, of the Humane Society, points out that the law is quite severe against this form of appropriation. He asks all those who "find" dogs or to whose places dogs may stray to notify the Society at once. In such a case owners may soon recover their dogs that stray away, and in case there is no owner to claim the animal the people to whose place the animal has strayed may be able to acquire a legal claim to the dog by the help of the Society. In every case where dogs stray onto other premises the Society should be promptly notified. Inspector Robertson emphasizes this fact as much for the protection of those finding dogs, or having dogs find them, as for the benefit of the actual owners. Many of the dogs that manage to stray away are quite valuable. At the present time there are very many valuable dogs in town. Sometimes they do not appear valuable to the ordinary eye, but by reason of breed or pedigree have a high cash value. In practically all cases they have a sentimental value and in this the law upholds the owners. Those found harbouring dogs owned by others are liable to heavy penalties, so it would be a good plan—even if the stray dog makes special appeal—to notify the Humane Society and so escape any responsibility in the matter.

The wedding announcement was handed to reporters at the Chateau's spiked gates at 3.30 p.m. (9.30 a.m. E.D.T.) as they huddled in wind that drove rain in wild gusts. It was the worst day of spring; worse than any in years, the peasants of Monts said.

Mayor to Perform Rites
Dr. Charles Mercier, mayor of Monts and physician to the Chateau de Cande, probably will perform a civil ceremony in the presence of the British Consul at Tours, Ian Macdonald.

Immediately after the marriage—the third for Mrs. Warfield—the couple probably will leave in the Duke's black limousine for the Carinthian Mountains in Lower Austria to spend their honeymoon at Wasserlaeburg Castle. They will motor to Wasserlaeburg by way of the French Riviera.

The hour of the wedding was not revealed in the announcement. Some reports said it would be in the morning; other reports fixed it for afternoon.

Mrs. Warfield had her wedding gown—a blue of Edward's favourite shade—sent from the Paris house of Mainbocher. The other costumes of her wedding wardrobe have been brought by fitters of the Paris couturier Schiaparelli.

Sporting Wild Goose Passed Crack Train

Other Samples of Speed of Birds and Animals.

(From Canadian Forest and Outdoors)

Passengers and trainmen bound for New York were diverted the other morning by a sporting wild goose which matched its wing power successfully against a Central Railroad of New Jersey train in a race between Point Pleasant and Long Beach. The bird was first sighted flying low alongside the train at 5.45 a.m. Just north of Point Pleasant. In a burst of speed it passed the train, which was travelling at fifty miles an hour or better. Exhibiting a spirit of fair play the goose circled while stops were made at Asbury Park, Elberon and Long Branch, waited for the train to get a head start, and each time easily outstripped it. Railroad men said that on the preceding day the goose won a race with train 702 of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which uses the same tracks. In May of last year residents of Santa Rosa, California, reported that a white pigeon raced a fast freight train into town every afternoon for two weeks, flying beside the locomotive cab. Early risers said that the bird escorted a passenger express in at 6.45 a.m., rested a while in the station and fluttered north again to return on schedule with the fast freight.

The records kept by naturalists and other scientifically minded persons in an effort to determine the fastest living creature revealed that the swift, a species of swallow, can fly 200 miles an hour. An American duck hawk in pursuit of prey was clocked by Donald D. McLean of the California Fish and Game Commission at 180 miles an hour. Compared to this an antelope, whose maximum speed is fifty-two miles an hour, seems slow. Mr. McLean said that with an automobile he had paced a desert fox at a top speed of forty-six miles an hour, a coyote at forty-four and a mule deer at thirty-seven.

Pigeon racing has a great following in South Australia and more ambitious contests are held in that state than in any other in the Commonwealth. In a 1934 event from Marree in the far North to Adelaide, a distance of 368 miles, 1160 pigeons were entered. The winner, a blue chequer hen, covered the distance in slightly under five and one-half hours, recording a speed of nearly 1059 yards a minute. Colonel R. Meinerzhagen, who has spent much time in studying the methods of travel and rates of speed of birds, says that lammergeyers or bearded vultures are even faster than pigeons and travel 110 miles an hour. The golden plover attains sixty miles, swallows 106, quail fifty-seven.

Five terns taken from the bird rookery of the tip of the Florida peninsula were carried by a round-about steamer route to a position off Cape Hatteras, where they were released. Three days from the date of capture three of them were back on the nesting grounds, where they were identified by the bands on their legs. The distance from Cape Hatteras to Bird Key by coast line flight is 1081 miles. The terns thus broke the record flight for trained pigeons, 1010 miles.

New Nazi Encyclopedia Voices Peculiar "Facts"

According to information coming from Berlin, Germany, the Nazi government has issued a new encyclopedia, where all the "facts" are coloured with a view to making propaganda. The Russian Soviet at its worst never issued a more prejudiced or twisted book. The new Nazified encyclopedia is "Meyer's Encyclopedia," which at one time was the nearest equivalent the Germans had of the Encyclopedia Britannica. Now, it is about as unlike the latter as Euclid is from Walter Winchell. The whole encyclopedia has been re-written from beginning to end with a view to being suitable reading in present-day Germany rather than for scientific reliability.

The "S.A. Mann," official organ of the Nazi Storm Troops, reveals that there were many storm troops among the thousand men working on the new edition. It describes it as "the first National Socialist reference book," and declares that all the articles have been written "in the spirit of the new Germany."

The "nazification" has been done with great thoroughness. On nearly every page appear references to the party, Nazi slogans and Nazi pictures, while pre-Nazi Germany is only brought in so that a contrast may be

Wedding of Duke of Windsor on June 3rd

None of Royal Family to Attend Event at Monts, France

According to despatches from Monts, France, this week, the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield announced on Tuesday that they will marry on June 3—the birthday of the late King George V, who bitterly opposed his son's association with the American-born divorcee.

The ceremony will be solemnized quietly in the sixteenth-century library of the Chateau de Cande there, without any blessing from the British Royal Family.

None of the Royal Family will attend—not even the Duke of Kent who it was said, was to be the Duke's best man.

Herman Rogers Is Spokesman

The announcement, typewritten on thin, pale blue paper, was handed to 180 newspaper people, representing newspapers of every language around the world, by Herman L. Rogers of New York, spokesman for the Duke and Mrs. Warfield.

"His Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor announces that his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Teakle Warfield of Maryland, will take place at the chateau at Monts on June 3," the communique said.

Only those who have been with Edward and Mrs. Warfield since the abdication will attend the ceremony, it was disclosed.

"Invitations to the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield will be confined to those who have been with them in the past months," the announcement continued. "No member of the Royal family will be present."

Few Guests Indicated

The wedding announcement indicated that the only guests will be the following companions of the Duke and Mrs. Warfield:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rogers, who were Mrs. Warfield's hosts at Cannes when she fled from England last December 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux of New York and France, their hosts at the Chateau de Cande.

Baron Eugene de Rothschild and his American-born wife of Enzesfeld Castle, near Vienna, who afforded seclusion to the Duke when he went into exile to await Mrs. Warfield's final divorce decree on May 3.

Lieutenant Dudley Forwood, Grenadier Guards, equerry to the Duke.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman of Washington, D.C., grey-haired "Aunt Bessie" of Mrs. Warfield, who is en route to France aboard the United States liner Roosevelt.

The British Minister to Austria, Sir Walford Selby, and Lady Selby, who were closely associated with the Duke during his Australian exile, will attend if the British Foreign Office permits.

Women Needed but Too Many Men Here

Hundreds of Men Unable to Secure Work. Demand for Experienced Houseworkers Greater than the Supply.

Apparently some of the young unemployed men about town should take lessons in cooking and general housework. The women's departments of the employment bureau reports that there is a large demand for experienced houseworkers, cooks and general help—much larger than the number of women who are desirous of filling the positions. It seems that there are plenty of younger women who would gladly take work, but who are not qualified for the positions offered. However, it is certain that any women who have had experience, and who are good workers would not long search for positions in town.

Travelling by Canoe In Flooded Long Lac

Further Rise in Waters Is Feared in New Mine Town

Despatches from Long Lac yesterday said that flood conditions in that Northern Ontario mining community remained unabated and townfolk believed the swollen waters of Long Lac, that inundated the town, had not reached the peak.

Experiencing the first flood in the history of this town, 175 miles north-east of Port Arthur, residents went about the flooded streets in rowboats and canoes. Communication lines were down and electrical power was discontinued when the power plant was flooded. Heavy week-end rains and sudden melting of snow in the bush caused the unprecedented rise of Long Lac. The town is situated near the lake at the extreme north end.

Houses on the outskirts have been isolated by the flood. The Canadian National Railway station, situated on a rise of land, is the only structure not affected by the high waters. Estimate of property damage is impossible until the water recedes. Damage to mining property appeared most serious and officials said mining operations will be held up one week or longer if the rains continue.

The C.N.R. tracks remained under water and precautions were taken to prevent washouts.

Many prospectors' shacks along the shores of Long Lac have been damaged. Edward Joanis, life-long resident of the mining district and well-known prospector, returned to his shack south of here to find it under six feet of water, the furniture floating in the lake.

Antics of amateur canoeists are proving bright spots in the flood scene. Two girls attempted to paddle from their
