NEW TOWN HALL—MAYBE

The memory of the oldest old-timer of the town can scarcely go back to the time when Timmins didn't need a new town hall. The first building used as a town hall in Timmins was located on the present site of the Central public school. At that time it was admitted that Timmins needed a new town hall. While the present structure was receiving improvements, the town offices were located in the Courtemanche building. These quarters being only for temporary occupancy, the need for a new town hall was very apparent. Then when the town offices were moved into the present town hall building, it was not very long before it was evident that the town needed a new town hall. With all the alterations and additions made to the present town hall building in the past twenty years, there is, perhaps, little of the original building left, but still the cry has been through all the years for a new town hall. So often has the call been made for a new town hall that people will hesitate to believe there is going to be a new town hall until they actually see the new town hall completed. There are swanky folks who apparently believe that Timmins will have a city hall and never have a new town hall at all.

A couple of years ago the ratepayers of Timmins voted to have a new town hall. Some of the authorities believed that they wouldn't vote in favour of a new town hall. Some of those who voted for the project didn't expect that a new town hall would be built no matter how they voted. Last year the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board did not approve the building of a new town hall for Timmins. The delay in building the new town hall, however, cannot be laid at the door of the Municipal Board. Last year the issue was confused by reference to turning the Central public school into a town hall—an absurd proposition. It may be that the proposal was made with the plan of delaying work on a new town hall. This year, however, the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board has actually approved the building of a new town hall for Timmins and if something does not happen to upset the applecart, there is a chance that Timmins will have a new town hall.

Another sign of the possibility of a new town hall is the fact that a delegation has been sent from Timmins to interview a Toronto architect in the matter. If it were any other building in town, the plan would surely have been to interview a Timmins architect. But a new town hall for Timmins is another matter altogether. Perhaps, Timmins architects and builders will be kept so busy planning ways to meet their taxes, that they will have no opportunity to do anything else about a new town hall for Timmins.

The fact that tenders have been called for the wrecking and removing of the old town hall may be taken as a further sign that there is to be a new town hall. None of these omens, however, are conclusive. Just as there were people who didn't believe that the Duke of Windsor would be married this month, or if married, that it would be anything very permanent, so there are folks who cannot convince themselves that a new town hall will be an actuality this year.

The people of Timmins voted in favour of a new town hall. Practically every citizen recognized the need of a new town hall. There has been a general demand for a new town hall. Perhaps there will be a new town hall. Time will tell.

TO CONSERVE FISH AND GAME

Only a few years ago there was an abundance of fish and game in this district. In recent years, however, it has been necessary each year to go farther and farther away from Timmins for good hunting or fishing. Settlement of a country naturally reduces the fish and game, but the depletion in this district has been far beyond a natural decline, and moreover it has been largely due to what can scarcely be termed natural causes. In its efforts to replace fish and game in the district and to conserve this form of the country's natural resources, the Porcupine Fish and Game Protective Association has done a notable service. The majority of the people of the country have been careless and indifferent. The Fish and Game Protective Association has given thought and effort to preserving some measure of the country's resource of fish and game. While emphasis has been given to the value of the association's work in re-stocking the waters of the district, perhaps even more good has been accomplished by the efforts to arouse public interest and support. The success of the work for conservation of fish and game really depends upon the attitude of the public in general. For this reason, the organization of a junior fish and game protective association is a genuine patriotic service. If the boys and girls understand the situation, realize the value of conservation, and develop a love of nature and the wilds, it will not be long before public opinion will be so well informed that the work of conservation of fish and game will be assured. There should be general approval and fullest support given the Porcupine Fish and Game Protective Association in the formation of the junior society for the conservation of the wild life of this part of Ontario.

GRAVEL AND SAND—AND PLACER

There is a rumour that Mayor J. P. Bartleman is planning to be the Conservative party candidate in the next provincial election. Although the mayor in recent years has been a prominent member of the C.C.F. with high office in that party, he kept the books for the District Conservative party for many years.

Some newspapers that are in the habit of howling about freedom of speech, liberty of opinion, the freedom of the press, are complaining at the present moment because the brewing industry of Canada is publishing a series of advertisements explaining the industry's attitude towards temperance and the use—not the abuse—of liquor. If the logic and arguments of the brewers are false, then newspapers have right to refute them. But to debar a legal industry from expressing its opinions in space for which it is ready to pay seems to be a negation of the idea of a fair interpretation of the theory of the freedom of the press.

Provincial Police Inspector Frank Gardner is credited by The Northern News with using a setter in police work. It is a bird of an idea to dog the criminal.

There are fashions in nearly everything, but it is rather alarming to hear from Cobalt this week that there is a new model in mosquitoes. The 1937 mosquito is only half the length of the ordinary mosquito, and with a waistline equally reduced. While smaller than the usual mosquito, the 1937 variety is fully up to former standards in viciousness. Whether it is streamlined or not deponent sayeth not. Its very size makes it the greater curse, as ordinary screenings will not keep it out. But ordinary screening never yet kept out the fattest of mosquitoes. In any case the 1937 mosquito will never become a popular mode.

on the floor in the shape of crosses, danced the sword dance in a pleasing way. This dance, intricate and interesting, was also accompanied by Pipe Sergeant O'Neill.

"At Your Service" presented pretty little girls in bell-boy suits of red with pleated skirts and shining silver buttons, while Barrie Ormsby, Billie Richards, and Roger Ethier wore the original costume with the long pants. The girls were Veronica Caesar, Shirley Thompson, Barbara Bowie, Beverly Cooke, Norma Smith, June Trumble and Anita Ericson, and their rhythmic tap seemed to say "at your service, at your service."

Lovely little Helen Rhea Channen was one of the evening's "extra specials," her smooth grace and litheness being a pleasure to behold. In her ballet "Coquette," attired in a frilled gown of yellow net with a bonnet, to match that delicately framed a pretty face, the little lady looked as if she had stepped out of a picture to delight her audience with her graceful youth and perfect dancing.

"Sailor's Hornpipe," a classic number presented by Barbara Honey, Gweneth Robb, Jessie Scullion, Lalia Webber, Mary Elizabeth McGowan, and Kay MacMillan in sailor suits, was a pleasing tap number for which the specialty was an additional tap by Kathleen and Gwendolyn Lake, who were stealing the show.

In shorts and blouses with green polka dots, large bows at their throats and high top hats to match, Lucille Tisdale, Joyce Ryan, Jean Plaut, Monica Shrager, Dorothy Edleston and Sheila Harper presented "Minstrel Strut," a rhythmic tap, that showed talent and excellent training.

Jack Easton carried out on the floor three dolls, and such very pretty dolls in their dresses—the first of dark rose,

"Glasses are a blessing to me...."

"For some years now, I have spent most of my time doing fancy work and reading. A few months ago my eye bothered me so much I had to give up my pleasures. How discontented I became, how irritated!

"My daughter suggested that I see Mr. Curtis. How glad I am that I took her advice! Now with my new glasses, I read and work for hours at a time and have no trouble whatever."

The Fred Astaire of the town, Jack Easton, brother of Miss Margaret Easton, next presented "Rhythm." And rhythm it was, tape being perfectly timed. The applause that ensued at the close of the dance demanding an encore proved the exceptional ability of this dancer.

A ballet, "Light as Thistledown," again brought those two versatile young ladies, Elsie Yates and Helen Rhea Channen. They wore ballet skirts, one of blue, the other pink, and twirled on their toes in perfect harmony.

In red flared skirts, red tams, and red "spats" Barbara Honey, Isabel Flowers, Jean Plaut, Dorothy Edleston and Sheila Harper presented "Minstrel Strut," a rhythmic tap, that showed talent and excellent training.
