How One Householder Added to the Convenience of His Home.

It is surprising the number of corners available in the average home for the installation of bathrooms. The householder wishing to take advantage of modernization schemes under the Home Improvement Plan has doubtless been giving considerable thought to one of the most serious deficiencies, the lack of an extra bathroom.

How Old City House was Modernized in Apartments

The owner of an old city house decided to turn it into small apartments The problem was to make each apartment as distinctive as possible and keep them from being uniform.

Plans were made for one and tworoom apartments. The architect who planned the remodelling of the building designed the one-room apartments with a maximum amount of floor space in the living room, and small bathrooms and kitchenettes. When the owner furnished the apartments she selected plain furnishings and through simplicity gained an effect of smartness as well as spaciousness.

One apartment had walls of plain grey, with a white Grecian design on one wall. The ceilings were high and long windows were uncurtained and had white venetian blinds. Floors were painted black and the woodwork white. The room had no central illumination, but numerous lamps gave adequate
