POPPIES

(by W. A. D.)

"Emblems of Remembrance."
 Why?
 Because Canada has adopted the Poppy as a symbol of Remembrance, along with the British Empire and the U.S.A.
 Remember what?
 The 60,000 graves of Canada's young manhood in Flanders Fields; and also the 170,000 Canadians who through volunteering to serve King and Country are at present disabled one way or another.
 Remember also:
 Those who by miracle escaped death and have been lying in patients at the various military hospitals across the Dominion. Some have never seen the outside of their present domain since the day they were placed in ambulances and transported to their present, and perhaps, their final home.
 Remember also:
 The thousands who are not in receipt of pension—the "unemployables"—men who in a spirit of patriotism enlisted for service at an age when they should have been thinking of "settling down"—some thirty-five, others even forty-five, years of age, who nineteen years later find doors of employment closed to them. "Too old at forty-five" has been the cry, yet they served for Freedom and Right. The government fully realizes the great problem and the War Veterans' Allowance Act gives these some measure of assistance. We also must remember them.

Let us Remember:
 The smaller-class pensioner. Let us take an illustration. In civilian life he was a clerk and with a very promising future. Patriotism or adventure secured him a uniform, and training made him a soldier. Hit by shrapnel and shaken in body by high explosives, we find him at the close of hostilities minus thumb and first finger and as nervous as a kitten. He is awarded a pension but his disability does not permit him returning to his calling. Vocational training has come to his aid. Yes, he was successful for a time! Then the depression, out of work and only the small monthly cheque coming in. His nerves begin to get shaky again, and his plight is learned by members of Canadian Legion Service Bureau. His case is taken up and eventually a further disability is added and the man's worry is over.
 You Remember All These and More. When you Wear a Vetrcraft Poppy on Poppy Day.
 Next week's article will be of special interest to the younger people of the camp.

Horse Stages Sit-Down Strike at Malartic Dock

(From Val D'O'R-Lamaque News)
 Moving operations of a Northern Diamond Drilling Company outfit from the Cummings-Trudel ground in Malartic required that a horse be esconded on the barge being drawn by the M.S. Marion.
 The gangplank tipped quite steeply at the Malartic wharf and Mr. Dobbin could not be coaxed by either hay, oats or a two-for-a-quarter cigar. Leverage was applied from the rear but he objected and sat down on his haunches.
 After an hour's pushing and shoving he was gradually shoved down the incline, but still sitting. When he finally arrived on the barge bottom, there reposing right in front of him was the hay used previously as a "come-on". Quite satisfied with things Mr. Dobbin started to munch hay, but still sitting down. It was only after he had consumed most of the hay that he was content to stand up and take his place in the boat.

PRACTICALLY NUDE
 (From the Royal Bank Magazine)
 Smith: "You looked absentminded when I spoke to you."
 Jones: "I was probably wrapped in thought."
 Smith: "It's a wonder you didn't take a cold."
 New York Times—Crisis after crisis has swept over Europe, but the ultimate horror of a general conflagration has been averted. That much should be said for a continent which otherwise fails to command admiration. None of the big powers wants a war, at least a war with a fellow its own size.

Police Raid on Cartier Club Brings Woe to Many

Patriek McCormick Sentenced to $100 and Costs or Sixty Days. Six Fined $20 and Costs Each. Club Charter is Cancelled. McCormick Old Acquaintance Magistrate Says.

A number of men were sitting in the Cartier Club, located above 6 Cedar street north, in the early hours of a morning last week. They were around a table playing cards. On the table was money. The door opened and three police officers walked in.

Not result—Patriek McCormick was fined $100 and costs or given the alternative of sixty days in jail, in police court on Tuesday, when he was convicted of operating a common gaming house. Six men were each fined $20 and costs.

Two of the three officers testified in court. Constable Guolla said that they walked in at 2:15 o'clock in the morning. There were nine players sitting around a table each with a sum of money before him. McCormick admitted that he was the proprietor.

On request he produced his provincial club charter. It named him as manager and Mandoza Leclair as secretary-treasurer. Investigation disclosed that there were 53 members in the club, each of whom had paid a membership fee of $1.

Hanging on a fyle on the wall were some slips. Asked what they were McCormick said at first that they were his "take-off" and then amended his statement to say that they were voluntary contributions to him from the players.

The Constable read a list of notations taken from the slips showing that the "take-off" or contributions from players amounted to as much as $20 on an evening's play. There were records of many nights' play when amounts ranged from $7 to $20.

Police Sergeant Devine corroborated the evidence of Constable Guolla and added that McCormick had had no other means of maintenance outside of the money he received from the gamblers.

Appearing in his own defence, McCormick said that he never said that he received a "take-off" from the players. If he did say it it had escaped his memory.

During games he was in the habit of going around periodically. The players would give him money to get food, smokes, a new deck of cards or drinks, and then tell him to keep the change. Pressed by questions from the magistrate, McCormick finally said that players often gave him twenty-five cents voluntarily.

The magistrate scoffed at the last statement. Cross-examined, McCormick said that he was supposed to get a salary of $100 a month for managing the club. He admitted that there was no record of any salary paid him, the club had no bank account and no surplus. It had not been operating long enough, he said.

When the accused man, who is tall, white-haired and distinguished looking, was released from the witness stand he gave a huge, gusty sigh.

Arguing for his client, Mr. Seguin said that even golf clubs have to have a caretaker and someone to look after the place.

"I have heard they do," said his worship. "I have heard a lot about golf clubs. However we are not dealing with them $100 and costs or sixty days. And chief, you better see that that charter is cancelled."

Later during the court those found in the Cartier Club were called. They were all taken in one group. Lined up were Mandoza Leclair, Pete Shelton, Stanley Griffiths, John Chaput, William Torchyn, Robert Rama and Fred Melnick. Two others, Gordon Brown and Alfred Polonich, were not called as they had not been served.

Leclair, Griffiths, Chaput and Melnick pleaded guilty. Shelton said that he was not gambling, Rama said that he was gambling but did not know the place was a common gaming house. Torchyn pleaded not guilty.

Constable Guolla said that all of the men with the exception of Shelton were sitting around the table playing with money on the table in front of them. Shelton was sitting in a front room reading.

Dominion-Wide Plan for Increased Health

Health League of Canada Organizes for Better Health.

Launching out in a Dominion-wide campaign for better health and physical fitness, the Health League of Canada has, through its president, the Honourable Mr. Justice Riddell, asked newspaper editors and mayors of towns and cities to serve on or appoint representatives to the General Council of the League.

The Council will have as its members representatives of all important interests in Canada in order to provide a means for the discussion of health problems to all communities. All representatives will be kept constantly in touch with the developments of the League's educational programme in the promotion of better health and the prevention of disease.

The desire of the Health League in its Dominion-wide plan is to follow the lines of Great Britain's new campaign for physical fitness which was launched September 30th. That campaign has at its disposal ten million dollars for a health programme which will run a wide gamut, from setting up exercises to maternity and child welfare services, from organized games to health films and better care of the teeth.

Already many editors of daily and weekly newspapers in Canada have advised the Honourable Mr. Justice Riddell that they will serve on the General Council of the Health League of Canada.

300 Canadian mayors were asked to serve on the Council, many have accepted.

It is planned to organize small Committees in every municipality which will co-operate with local health officers and local organizations in the extension of educational measures to promote the health of Canada and to reduce the toll of sickness and death from disease.
