Was Struck But Unable to Determine Striker

William Pennington Saw Blackness. Had Broken Nose, Swollen Eyes and Possible Jaw Fracture as a Result. No One Saw Him Attacked. Was Coming Out of Hotel.

Who struck William Pennington? The fact that he was struck was proved beyond doubt in police court on Tuesday when he came into court with a broken nose and a possible fracture of the jaw to testify to the strength and accuracy of his mysterious assailant's punch.

The charge of assault was against Fred Davidson but neither Pennington or his companions saw the punch delivered so Magistrate Atkinson dismissed the charge.

Pennington said that he and some friends were sitting in the Lady Laurier hotel drinking beer. Davidson was going from table to table and finally he joined Pennington and his companions. They decided to leave.

Three of the men went on out the door and Pennington and Davidson followed. As they stepped out, Pennington said, he was hit and all was blackness with not even a star to lighten the gloom. He was temporarily blinded by the blow.

Cross-examined, Pennington said that he came to the hotel from the Legion hall. At the hall he had two bottles of beer. He denied that he was drunk.

Dr. Peter Wenger examined Pennington after his contest with his assailant, who, perhaps, was from the spirit world. He said that both eyes were swollen and that the bridge of his nose was fractured. The jaw might be broken. It could be definitely ascertained when an x-ray was taken.

A member of the party, Leslie Mason, said that he walked out of the hotel ahead of Pennington and Davidson. When he turned around he saw Pennington lying on the street. Ross McDonald, another witness, did not see any blow struck. Again Pennington was asked if he saw anyone hit him. He said that he did not. He stepped out of the Lady Laurier hotel into oblivion.

Barrister Leaves Court
 When he and the Magistrate disagreed over the method of questioning the witness and his right to look back over the court record, J. T. Jackson walked out of the courtroom in the middle of the hearing into a charge of property destruction against his client, George Johnston.

The charge of property damage against Johnston was laid by Jerry Robitaille, who himself was charged with illegally selling liquor, but whose case was remanded for a week.

Robitaille said that Johnston came to his house, and after he had had a bottle of beer, refused to leave. Johnston said that Robitaille could not put him out, so Robitaille said, "I put him out and fast too".

Expelled but undaunted Johnston, after heaving a chunk of wood at Robitaille, came back and started to batter the door. While Robitaille was telephoning for police he entered, a rock in his hand.

"That's not fair," Robitaille said when he saw the stone in his hand. Apparently wishing to oblige, Johnston threw the stone away. He threw it out the window but the window was not open.

Taking up the cross-examination, Mr. Jackson asked several questions about the distance Johnston was from the house when he threw the wood. Not satisfied with the reply he questioned several more times and drew a diagram. His Worship pointed out that the witness had already answered. Mr. Jackson said that he was conducting the defence.

In reference to another question Mr. Jackson said that he wanted the former reply read from the record. Said His Worship, "You will take my word." He ordered the stenographer not to look back.

Mr. Jackson turned on his heel and walked out. He had lost interest in the case, he said.

Remodelling a Home to Suit Conditions

What May be Done Under Home Improvement Plans

Many rambling old houses have at least some of the bedrooms on the first floor, and in small houses and country places this is again the case. Of course, the bungalow has always been popular among suburban residents, but the two-storey house today is frequently arranged so that the family can live on one floor if it so desires.

One family, in remodelling a house, decided to turn the dining room into an extra bedroom and combine the living room and den into a large combination living-dining room.

This story concerns itself with the newly decorated bedroom. A wainscotting which reached to the window sills was painted white, as it had been in the original dining room. A closet, which had held shelves for dishes and linen, was made into a clothes closet. The door to the room led from the hall, fortunately, and did not have to be changed. The walls were papered and the suspended ceiling light was replaced by a small bedroom fixture. Powerful bulbs were used so that the room could be brightly lighted.

With the background of the room complete, the housewife furnished it with her own funds. Because the wallpaper had vivid colouring, furnishings and accessories were kept in neutral shades. The four-poster bed, night table, dressing table and bench, chest of drawers and two small chairs were of mahogany. The carpet and draperies were a grey-green, and a barrel chair, placed by the window for reading or sewing, was a grey and green colour. The mahogany chairs had seats of grey.

Funds for modernization may be obtained from your bank under the Home Improvement Plan.

Christian Science Monitor:—New York court has ruled that members of Father Divine's flock in Harlem cannot vote under their spiritual names, such as Truth Delight, Glorious Illumination, and Joy Praise. It would be most disillusioning to read that Radiant Veracity and Honour Unshined had been pinched by Patrolman Michael O'Hara for voting twice.

He watched the liner's stem ploughing the foam.
 He felt her trembling speed and the thrash of her screw;
 He heard her passenger's voices talking of home.
 He saw the flag she flew!

And now it was down. He rose strong on his feet,
 And strode to his ruined camp below the wood;
 He drank the breath of the morning cool and sweet;
 His murderers round him stood.

Light on the Laspur hills was broadening fast,
 The blood-red snow-peaks chilled to a dazzling white;
 He turned, and saw the golden circle at last,
 Cut by the Eastern height.

"O glorious Life, Who dwellest in earth and sun,
 I have lived, I praise and adore Thee!" A sword swept,
 Over the pass the voices one by one Faded, and the hill slept.

The Dominion and the Provinces, which indicated that the plan will be well over the $10,000,000 mark at the end of the twelve month period. From September 16th to September 30th loan totals jumped by 1,676 in number and $686,078.25 in amount. The plan is expected to advance more rapidly during the fall, when people are engaged in making repairs and improvements before winter sets in.

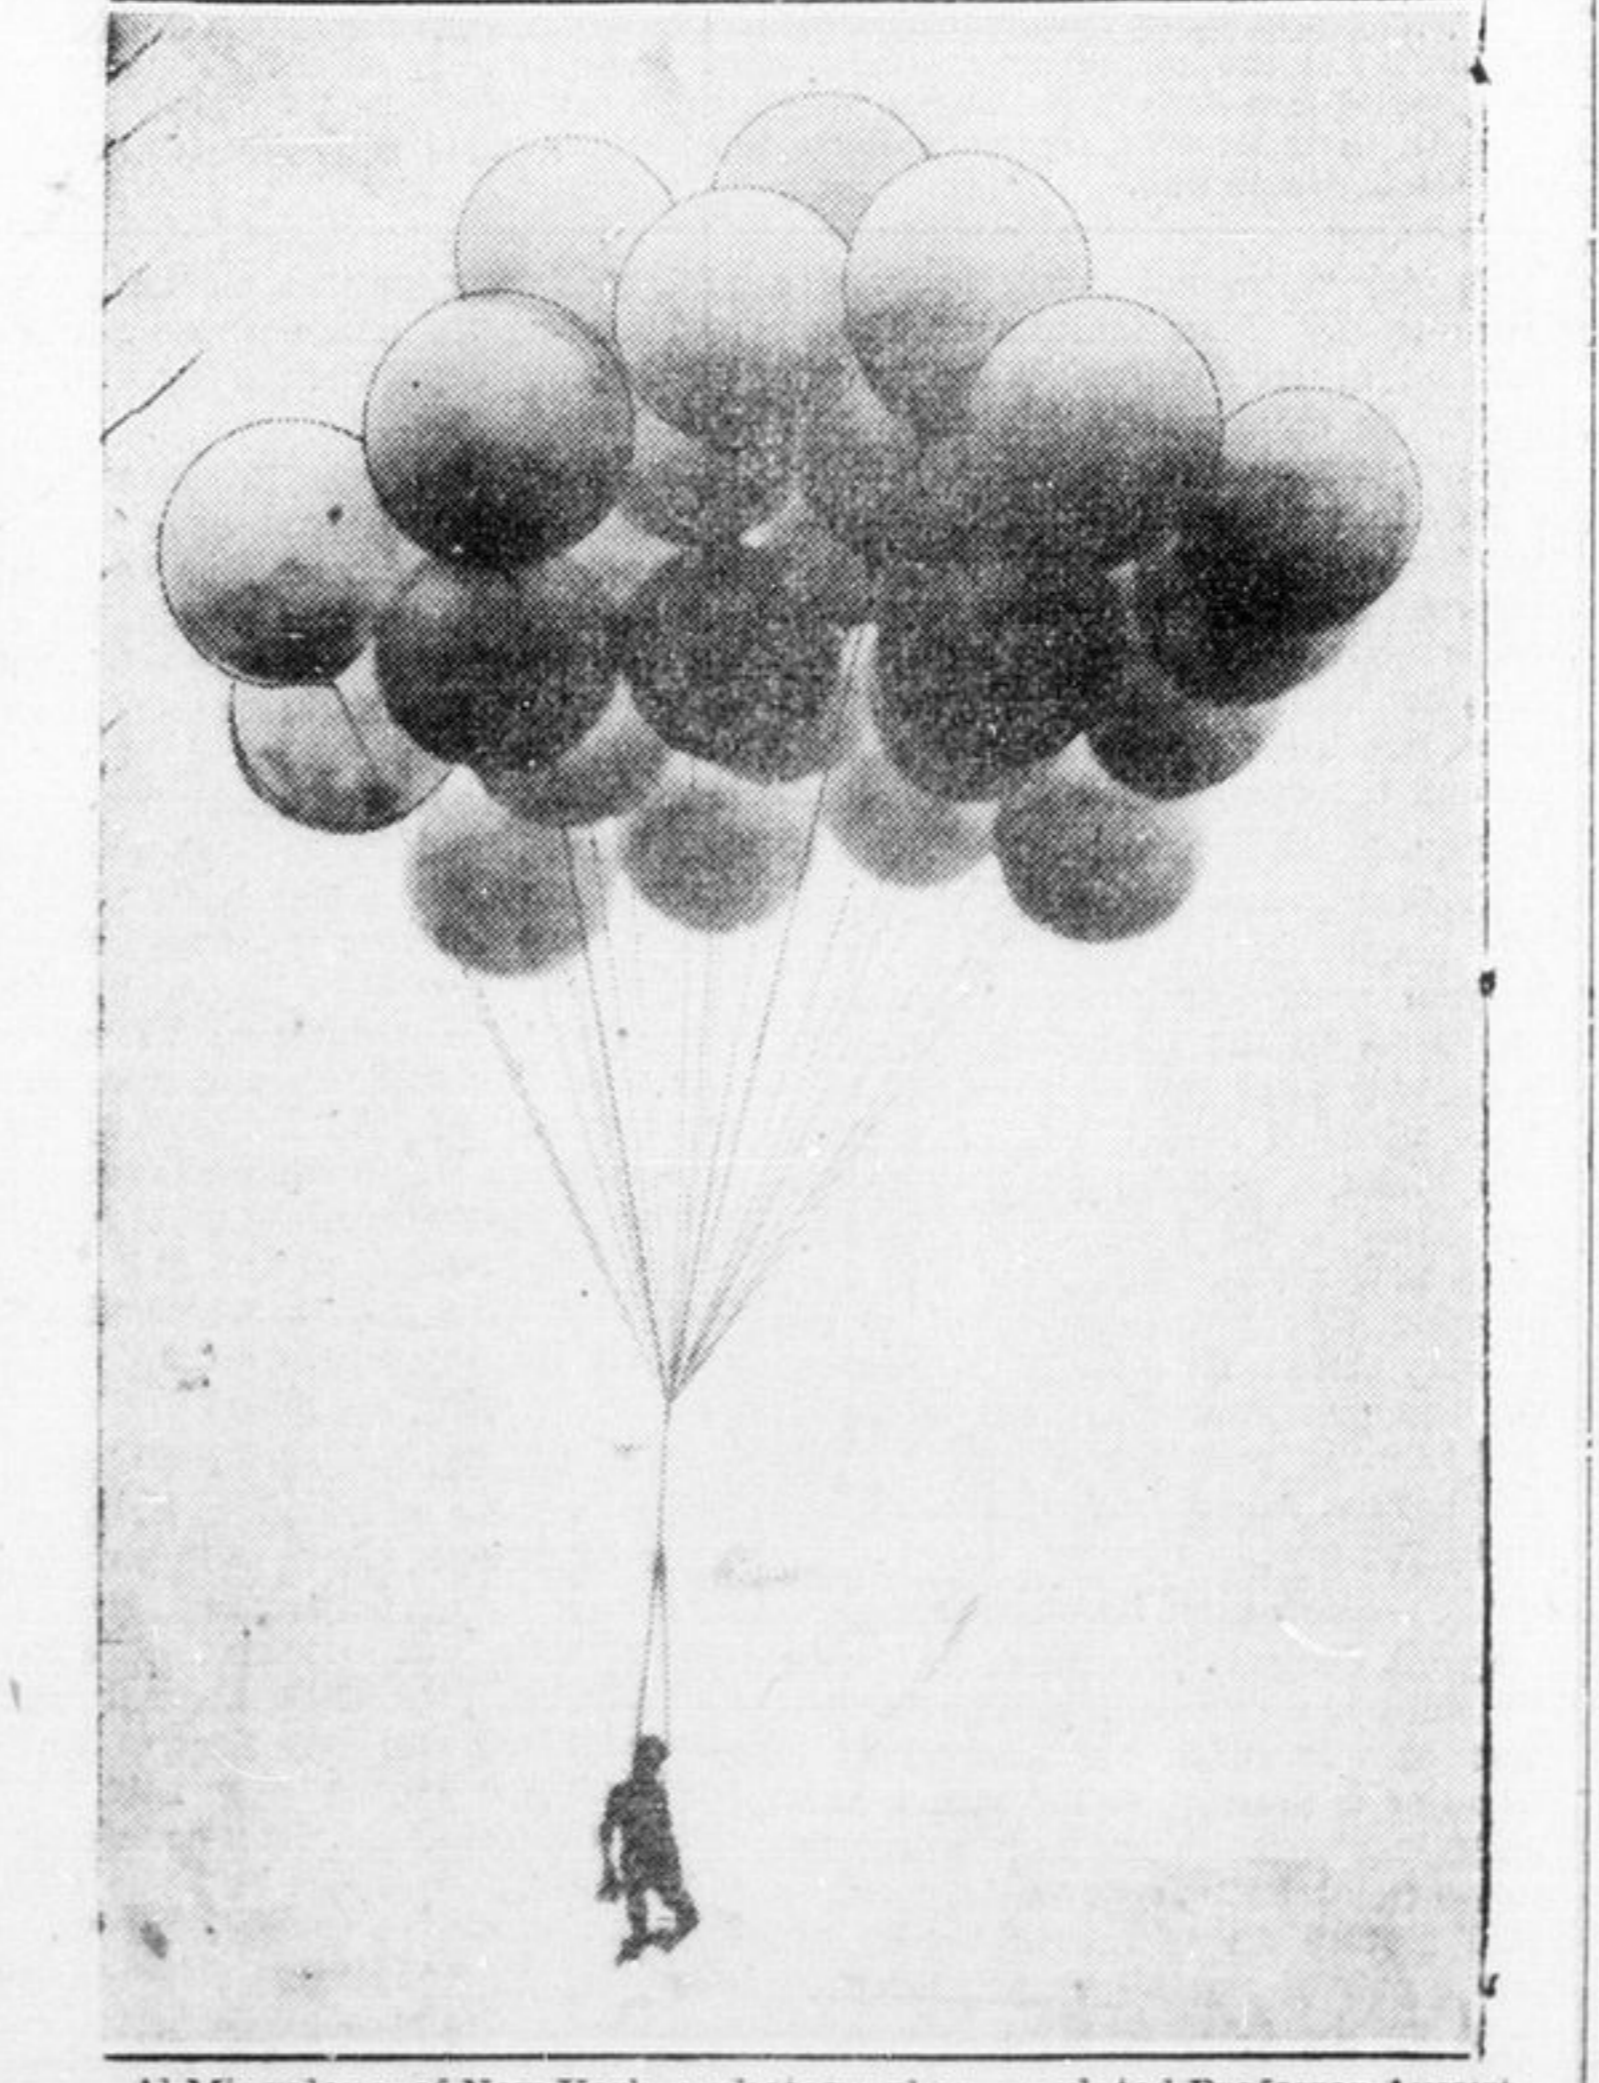

The Minister announced that Home Improvement Loan totals in Ontario are now well over the $4,000,000 mark. Exact figures for Ontario on September 30th were 10,639 loans, amounting to $4,121,822.90. This was an increase of 781 loans, amounting to $334,296.88 in the period from September 18th to September 30th. All the Provinces showed increases. Loans in Quebec on September 30th totalled 3,967, amounting to $1,932,752.21. British Columbia reported 2,728 loans, amounting to $895,724.74. Alberta totals were 2,060 loans, amounting to $886,903.39.

Following the lull during the summer, local committees across Canada are now resuming their activities. With the stimulus of a renewed campaign, it is anticipated that the end of the year will see an appreciable increase in the loans.

Canada Now Has 25,438 Home Improvement Loans

The following bulletin was released to the press last week by the Department of Finance in Ottawa:
 "After eleven months' operation of the plan, Home Improvement Loans now number 25,438 and amount to $9,890,256.50.
 Honourable C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, today issued loan totals for Al Mingalone, of New York, a photographer, emulated Professor August Piccard, stratosphere balloonist, in Old Orchard, Me., when a rope holding 32 four-foot balloons to a post broke and carried him on an unexpected 13-mile flight. He was brought to earth when rifle shots, fired by Rev. James J. Mullen, punctured some of the balloons.

Music Important in Education of Child

Address to Ontario Music Teachers by G. Roy Fenwick.

"There is now a definite place for music during the school day and in five years the whole secondary school system will have music as a regular part of its work," predicted G. Roy Fenwick, provincial supervisor of music in the Department of Education, when he addressed the second annual convention of the Ontario Music Teachers' Association held last week at the Royal York hotel, Toronto.

"Sixty per cent. of the elementary school children of the province are now receiving music education, and during the past two years over 2,200 rooms have introduced music for the first time," Mr. Fenwick stated.

He urged closer co-operation between professional music teachers and school music departments, and it is likely that the 1938 council of the association will appoint a committee to confer with and assist the Department of Education in advancing children's music study in Ontario schools.

Replies to a questionnaire distributed to the convention delegates showed a unanimous decision that music teachers should be registered by some authorized group, and that some code of standards and qualifications should be set up, probably as a result of legislative action.

If You Like Books

(By A. H.)

"Heroes of Land and Sea" by Sir Henry Newbolt, is another of the many good books at the Canadian Legion Library. It is made up of several accounts relating to famous explorers, and is fittingly brought to a close by some of the author's poems. One of these that is well known and of the type that is not forgotten when one has once encountered it, is "He Fell Among Thieves":

He Fell Among Thieves
 (By Sir Henry Newbolt)
 "Ye have robbed," said he, "ye have slaughtered and made an end,
 Take your ill-got plunder, and bury the dead;
 What will ye more of your guest and sometime friend?"
 "Blood for our blood," they said.

He laughed: "If one may settle the score for five,
 I am ready; but let the reckoning stand till day;
 I have loved the sunlight as dearly as any alive."
 "You shall die at dawn," said they.

He flung his empty revolver down the slope,
 He climbed alone to the Eastward edge of the trees;
 All night long in a dream untroubled of hope
 He brooded, clasping his knees.

He did not hear the monotonous roar that fills
 The ravine where the Yassin river suddenly flows;
 He did not see the starlight on the Laspur hills,
 Or the far Afghan snows.

He saw the April noon on his books glow,
 The vistoria trailing in at the window wide;
 He heard his father's voice from the terrace below
 Calling him down to ride.

He saw the gray little church across the park,
 The mounds that hide the loved and honoured dead,
 The Norman arch, the chancel softly dark,
 The brasses black and red.

He saw the School Close, sunny and green,
 The runner beside him, the stand by the parapet wall,
 The distant tape, and the crowd roaring between,
 His own name over all.

He saw the dark wainscot and timbered roof,
 The long tables, and the faces merry and keen;
 The College Eight and their trainer dining aloof,
 The Dons on the dais serene.
