Death of Worker on Roads Accidental

Victor Poulin Buried by Blast Near Earlington.

Earlington, Ont., Dec. 8.—(Special)—A verdict of "accidental death" was returned here yesterday by Coroner Dr. W. C. Arnold of Haileybury, by the inquest jury which probed a fatality yesterday morning at the crushing plant of the MacNamara Construction Company, two miles north of Earlington on the main road and in which Victor Poulin, young road worker employed there since last September, was buried under a mass of rock when he was caught in a blast there. His neck was broken.

Poulin, the jury learned, had assisted in final preparations for the blast, to be fired by the day shift after night workers had made preliminary arrangements. Harry Green, shift foreman, and Fred Clark, electrician, swore they were last to leave the pit, and evidence was given customary warning signals were called and men posted at different points to prevent approach to the scene of the blast. The 21-year-old victim, whose home is near Englehart, had been seen a half hour before the blast, but no one had observed him enter the pit.

The body was not recovered until last evening, 11 hours after the accident. Witnesses said Poulin was in good health. He was not missed until some time after the blast and when a check-up failed to locate him, the steam shovel started excavating the rock blasted in a charge of 1,800 pounds of dynamite, and eventually a hand protruding gave first intimation of the man's fate.

Brookville Recorder and Times.—L. M. Montgomery, the author, says of her native Prince Edward Island that it is a place "where it is safer to break all Ten Commandments at once than to be caught without three kinds of cake in the house when company comes."

Considering Problem of Best Chance for Youth

(From Globe and Mail)
Hope for a brighter outlook for youth may be found in widespread discussion of the problem presented by a rising generation that finds little encouragement in the way of employment. Dr. Bruce's Hamilton address is being widely considered and approved; but as a writer to The Globe and Mail (Mr. Charles D. Clarke Jr. of Hamilton) emphasizes, "We have that bad habit of applauding the men who bring us the message of endeavour, and then disregarding the message."
Mr. Clarke urges that youth should be given the opportunity of learning a trade; but, apart from the ethical questions, how few opportunities for this have there been of late years? Industry has during the depression taken on few apprentices; and it is evident that industry is to pay the price in a scarcity of skilled workers.

Nowadays, a youth seeking employment must know something about a particular line of work. There has been no chance for thousands of Canadian boys to learn. Those fortunate enough to have technical school training are being employed, but they are few as compared with the host of idle youth without any training.

The most valuable contribution toward solution of this problem of unemployed youth will be an organized system of apprenticeship. As Dr. Bruce intimated, something is being done along this line. Opportunities are in sight, but that is not enough. The opportunities must be made realities. The situation is urgent.

Some years ago, when a boy left school he was at once apprenticed to a trade or provided with work in an office. There seemed to be co-operation about this among employers and parents. If a youth weren't working it was because he did not want to work. Now it is different. Influence is needed to secure positions for youth; but few idle boys have influence, so they remain kicking their heels, discontented but, to their credit, not losing altogether the optimism of youth.

The cause of this condition may be laid at several doors, but there is little use indulging in recriminations. The problem is here, and it is serious. In the plan outlined by Dr. Bruce, Governments are giving a lead in providing boys with opportunities to learn something of forestry, mining and agriculture; but that is only a beginning. With improving conditions, and prospects on the whole encouraging, employers of labour in its various forms should cooperate actively with other agencies in helping youth to find work. Call it apprenticeship, clerkship, or what you will, every opening provided will be a help. Theoretical discussions have had their day; something practical and definite must follow if youth is not to lose heart altogether.

Late Charles O'Reilly Has Sister in Timmins

Copper Cliff, Dec. 7.—Long a star in Copper Cliff baseball circles and one of amateur baseball's most outstanding players, Charlie O'Reilly was buried in the Sudbury Roman Catholic cemetery Sunday afternoon. Funeral services were held at 2.30 o'clock from his late residence, 41 Poplar street, Copper Cliff, to St. Stanislaus Roman Catholic Church, Copper Cliff, where Libera was celebrated by Rev. Father W. T. Batterson. Honorary and active pallbearers were all luminaries of present and past diamond teams. The honorary pallbearers were: Holly Hyland, Mel Edwards, Bob Deacon, Roy Longfellow, H. Grannary and G. Pappin. Active pallbearers were: Leo McLaughlin, Fred Walmsley, Tom Strong, Art Clouthier, Dennis O'Reilly and Bert Flynn. Fred Hambley and K. Deacon acted as flower-bearers. With the exception of Tom Strong, all the active pallbearers, along with H. Grannary from the honorary pallbearers, were team members on the Copper Cliff club which swept to the Ontario senior championship in 1925, with Charlie O'Reilly holding down first base. Last season's Copper Cliff baseball club, and baseball players from both Sudbury and Creighton Mine, attended the services. Eddie O'Reilly, Noranda, a brother of the deceased, who once played with the same club as his brother Charlie, also attended the funeral. Charlie O'Reilly died last Thursday in Weston sanitarium, where he had been treated as a tubercular patient since last January. In 1932, he spent five months at Weston, under observation, and it was then thought that his complaint was not serious. But last January he was forced to return. Charlie O'Reilly came to Copper Cliff 37 years ago, when his parents moved to this district from Aylmer, Que., where Charlie was born 40 years ago. With the exception of two years which he spent playing baseball for Cobalt, he spent his entire life and played all his baseball in Copper Cliff. He was a machinist with the International Nickel Company. Eleven years ago, the deceased was married to the former Dorothy Denmark, who survives along with two daughters, Anne and Helen, and two sons, Owen and Charlie, Jr. He is also survived by four sisters and four brothers, Mamie, Copper Cliff; Mrs. P. J. Reilly, Ste. Lambert, Que.; Mrs. Jim Poulton, Timmins; Belle, Ottawa; John, Copper Cliff; Owen and Dick, Sudbury, and Eddie, Noranda. His parents, Edward O'Reilly and the former Winnifred Kavanagh, both predeceased their son by several years. Charlie O'Reilly was popular with his teammates and opponents as well as with the fans.
