THIS IS THE WORM WHO TURNED

He was a quiet peace-loving worm who lived in a quiet cave under the ground, mining for dead roots which he ate. Now roots in his field had been getting scarcer for some time, and worms increasing. Some distance away was another field with a great wealth of roots, and from time to time a worm would crawl up to surface and make for this Better Field. But so many birds prowled up there that they were gobbled up in no time.

But this special worm was a book worm, and one day as he wormed his way thru the public library he read that "Many Worms are Better than One," a principle on which their enemies the birds had acted for many years. So he called the worms together and said "If we stay here, we starve; one worm alone cannot worm his way to the Better Field; and if we try to go by the surface, we'll be taken one by one and gobbled up. It is possible, however, that if we worms take it in turns, we can bore right thru to the Better Field very quickly without any danger; for Many Worms are Better than One." Which they did!

NOW THIS MINER

was a consumer; and what he discovered was that co-operation among the worms was the only way of getting the food they desired without being pounced on by the great hungry profit-grabber birds, who make short work of any worms who try one by one to rise up to where they are

MONTREAL MAYOR STARTS WORK ON ICE PALACE

For the first time since 1911 Montreal is to have an Ice Palace. Mayor Raynault is here shown laying the first block of ice, in Lafontaine Park. To the right are to be seen Ald. Leon Trepanier and Emile Bernadet, head of the city Parks and Playgrounds Department. On the other side of the block, Louis Francoeur, L. Codere and Ald. Barriere. Owing to the rain, police have since been placed on guard to keep people away as the structure became dangerous.
