That Body of Yours

(by James W. Barton, M.D.)

Sensitiveness to Foods
It is hard to understand why foods that you have been eating for years now seem to disagree with you—headache, belching of gas, diarrhoea, vomiting. As you think it over your common sense tells you that the food or foods are the same, so the trouble must be with yourself.

It may be that you are not as strong physically as you were, that you eat when you are tired, that you take less exercise and yet eat the same kinds and amounts of food. Or it may be that your gland system is changing with the passing years and that the gland juices do not work together as well as they did.

It should be remembered also that there have been certain articles of food that have "always" given you some trouble—headache or gas—because for some years they just didn't seem to suit your digestive system.

I have spoken before of the research work on foods done by Drs. Walter C. Alvarez and H. Corwin Hinshaw of the Mayo Clinic and recorded in the Journal of the American Medical Association. These physicians state that the diet may cause upsets in the stomach and intestine in a number of ways; chemical irritation by certain parts of a food (the laxative parts in rhubarb and prunes), delay in the emptying time of the stomach; such fat foods as butter, cream, egg yolks which stay in the stomach until all the rest of the food has been emptied from the stomach into the small intestine; emetic (tendency to vomit) action from melons, cucumbers, tomatoes; temperature irritations (as from cold drinks); or finally, allergy or sensitiveness to certain parts of foods.

Then there is the stomach and intestinal disturbances which are caused, not because of the food itself, but because as mentioned above, of your own physical condition when you eat the food—tiredness, emotional upsets.

The first point then is that there are many people who are sensitive to or upset by certain foods even when they are rested and free from any emotional disturbance. This is true allergy and such excellent foods as eggs and wheat, are examples of this class. Skin and other tests are used to find these offending foods.

The second point is that certain foods are laxative or slow in leaving the stomach or cause belching or vomiting. In this type of disturbance the individual leaves out certain foods in his diet and thus finally finds the particular food or foods causing the symptoms.

Food Allergy

"What is one man's food is another man's poison" is an old saying but the truth of it is being proved almost daily by leading research physicians throughout the world. Some individuals are over-sensitive to certain foods and will have colds in their heads, "snuffy" noses, pains in the stomach or abdomen when they eat those foods, while other people suffer no ill effects after eating the same foods. "Food Allergy" booklet No. 106 by Dr. Baruch tells how to discover the offending foods and what to do about them.
