Canada Sure to Get Orders for Planes

Bombers Likely to Be the Type to Be Made in the Dominion

Ottawa, May 18.—One of the highest military authorities in the Dominion to-night said there seemed no possibility of doubt that Canada would build airplanes for the British Government.

The British Air Ministry has itself made an announcement of this nature in the British House of Commons, it was pointed out, and the survey already made by the Department of National Defense here assures that Canada is able to produce the planes.

Duties of Mission
Bombers with long-range capacities are the most likely to be produced here for Great Britain, it was stated here to-day in official circles, in confirmation of the report published yesterday that a fleet of tri-motored bombers would be constructed in Canada.

The air mission now visiting Canada, and which left Ottawa to-day for Montreal, has no authority to grant contracts. It will, however, make definite recommendations as to which Canadian companies are able to manufacture the planes.

These recommendations, it is understood here, will concern the Fort William plant mentioned yesterday. This plant, and others like it, would be able to produce a fleet of 500 or 1000 bombers.

New Capital Needed
Of course, British capital and British plans and specifications would be necessary before any order would be undertaken. It would require new investments in Canadian plants to develop them to the point where they could turn out airplanes in large numbers.

There are at least four Canadian airplane companies which are anticipating contracts from the British government.

Because of the co-operation of the Department of National Defense, the British air mission's work here has been made very simple. The Defense Department has already surveyed the Canadian companies and the information as to their potential output has been made available to the mission.

D.D.G.M. Visitor at Iroquois Falls Lodge

Official Head of Oddfellows In District Pays Official Visit

Iroquois Falls, Ont., May 18th.—(Special to The Advance)—D.D.G.M. Brother Sol Sky, of South Porcupine, paid his official visit to the Oddfellows at a capacity gathering of the members held on Tuesday evening in the Orange hall.

Noble Grand Bro. John E. Freeman, extended a cordial welcome to the D.D.G.M. and was responded to by Bro. Sky in a most fitting manner during which he expressed his delight in being able to attend and mentioned the notable work being accomplished by this unit.

Bro. Sky had a surprise in store for the members, and he proceeded to unpack something that looked like a camera, finally assembling a complete moving picture projector, screen and necessary equipment.

To the complete enjoyment of the audience, both beautifully coloured, and plain pictures were shown, having been taken by Bro. Sky during his travels to Florida, Muskoka, Seskinika, Smooth Rock Falls, and many other scenic spots.

An interesting feature of the pictures was the scene showing fish and vegetable life under water, while vacationing at Florida. These pictures were made possible by the use of glass bottom boats, and the clear water of that locality. For a small sum a diver would go underwater and get any vegetation that you may like. Orange trees and the colourful scenes of this country were also well depicted on the screen.

After the showing of pictures, the gathering participated in a most enjoyable lunch, and spent the balance of the evening chatting, and discussing past experiences.

Notes

The executive of the Synod of Moose Lake plan to assemble together in Iroquois Falls on Thursday, May 19th, where a meeting is scheduled to be held. Included in those who are expected to attend are: Bishop J. G. Anderson, Ven. J. E. Woodall, Archdeacon, Canon R. S. Cushing of Timmins, Rev. Blackburn of Montesh, Mr. W. F. Hisecks, Montesh, and Mr. A. L. Joyner, of Schumacher.

Rev. W. J. Bradbury, B.A., B.D., of Montreal, who is Eastern general field secretary of the General Board of Religious Education, paid a visit to Iroquois Falls last week in connection with the Anglican Church work. He was a guest of the Rev. Francis Joy, and while here contacted with the Sunday School officers and the members of the A.Y.P.A., also discussing matters pertaining to Church work here.

The events of convocation opened for the science students when the faculty of this department provided and served a delicious luncheon in the large gymnasium of the University for science students, their relatives and friends.

Convocation proper was held at 3.30 p.m. in Grant Memorial Hall when Queen's deemed it an especial honor to confer the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws on its graduate L. W. Douglas, who was so recently appointed to the principalship of McGill University, Montreal, and whose paternal grandfather some 30 years ago had been the chancellor of Queen's University.

Principal Dr. Wallace gave a splendid address to the students, the topic of which was "The Disciplined Mind," which students gained thorough study and training, and the influence for good that the disciplined mind should have for control over the careers and private lives of the future.

Some 354 students then received degrees in the various departments.

At the conclusion of convocation a tea was held in the gymnasium for graduates, friends and relatives.

The memorable day came to a happy conclusion with an informal dance in the evening, the event being held in Grant Hall. The patronesses for this dance were: Mrs. Wallace, wife of Principal Wallace; Mrs. Bruce, wife of Professor Bruce, of the geological department; Mrs. Clark, wife of Dean Clark, of the science faculty; Mrs. Ellis, wife of Professor Ellis.

Dancing to the accompaniment of an excellent orchestra on the inlaid oak floor of this beautiful, galleried hall was greatly enjoyed.

Raps on the Wrist and Pats on the Back

About The Globe and Mail's New Building and The Telegram's Old Quarters.

Writing this week about The Globe and Mail and The Telegram, Thomas Richard Henry, a writer for the latter paper, speaks very kindly of his bread and butter and rather ironically about the other fellows, as follows:

We know a cable editor so cynical that if he looks at a rose bush it immediately withers.

We thought that it was just one of his idiosyncrasies until we read "Looking Behind the Censorships," by Eugene J. Young.

Mr. Young is foreign editor of the New York Times and since reading his book we begin to think it may be the kind of news that cable editors handle that makes them that way.

If Mr. Young's book is an accurate interpretation of what makes the national wheels go around, he deserves to have his book read by millions.

If his interpretation is not accurate, he deserves to be shot by a firing squad at the first convenient dawn.

We must admit that the writer sounds logical even though he is a devastating iconoclast.

Inside Stuff

Single-handed and alone, The Telegram is left to maintain a proud tradition.

It owns the only newspaper office left in Toronto.

We have not forgotten "Joe's Place." That is an efficient feature foundry—but it is not a newspaper office.

Nor have we forgotten "The House That Gold Built." That is an impressive temple of journalism—but it is not a newspaper office.

For a long time after The Star plant was built, people would ask us if we had seen it, and when we said "No" they would take up an hour of our time telling us about it.

That taught us a lesson. When The Globe plant was finished we gave Mr. McCullagh a close race to look it over.

We inspected it from stem to stern; from the immodestly exposed presses on the street level to the roof garden view; and from the lair of George the fireman to the airy suite of George the Oracle.

We were greatly impressed. It was magnificent—but it was not a newspaper office.

True enough we saw a few real newspapermen like Ken Cragg, Guy Morton, Lorne McIntyre and Doug Oliver scattered around the shining newness of the Globe editorial room, but they looked as much out of place as a bond dealer in church.

We don't think they can long remain newspapermen in that sanctified sanctum sanctorum. They will degenerate into journalists, or like old soldiers, they will simply fade away.

A newspaper office cannot be described. It must be felt. It has an atmosphere of vast informality; a disregarded confusion; a profusion of papers and clippings to which reference is never made; a general untidiness; a "the story's the thing" spirit.

The new Globe edifice would do nicely as a high-powered business office. But we would no more feel like hammering out a news story in all that space and among those stately surroundings than we would feel like cooking a mess of black bass in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Even the privacy of the lowly desk man is assured by shining bars and rails.

How can the blue pencil boys put any personality in their work without the reporter who wrote the story, bracing down the back of their necks.

Inspiration will be stifled by efficiency and by gadgets.

We almost expected to see somebody insert some copy paper in an adding machine turn a crank and produce a newspaper scoop.

Undoubtedly the environment will stamp the product.

The twinkling star will produce its features with sails set for every breeze that blows, and with one eye on the circulation figures and the other on the cash register.

We expect that The Globe will ascend into the stratosphere of rarefied journalistic endeavour without even a parachute.

That will leave The Telegram alone to carry on the every-day job of printing the news—and long may The Telegram remain a newspaper office refuge for newspapermen.

Now, we expect that there will be a lot of sympathetic souls just aching to retort "sour grapes," and since we expect this, the retorters might just as well save their postage.

THE NEIGHBORLY GOOD WORD

(From Kirkland Lake Northern News) The Porcupine Advance, Timmins, in Thursdays' edition presented its subscribers with a 32-page special builders' and home-makers' section.

The special was an interesting and well-constructed section with building and home improvement items adding to the interest. Many of the larger Timmins residences were pictured and several new homes, with a descriptive story on plans and materials used, were also shown.
