IMMEDIATE ATTENTION

A lady who needed to use the back road between Timmins and South Porcupine on Saturday last sends The Advance an urgent appeal that something be done to remedy the serious danger from dust. The highway between South Porcupine and Timmins has been closed to allow greater facility for the repairs and improvements being made to the highway. This means that all traffic between Timmins and South Porcupine must use the back road. The roadway itself is in excellent condition. Following recent rains the condition of the back road drew many favourable comments. But with the dust now blowing in cyclone fashion the situation is completely changed. No longer is it a comfort to use the back road. The volumes of dust make it a serious danger. It is true that the dust is no worse than in some past years. But there are several reasons why it seems worse. One of these is that the traffic is much greater with the highway closed to traffic. Another is that the people of Timmins in other years were more acclimatized to dust. The local department of public works has done an excellent job this year in minimizing the dust nuisance. Some similar action should be taken by the province in regard to the back road. The blowing dust is not only a foe to comfort and to health, but it is a serious menace on the road. It would appear to be a good idea for councils and boards of trade to bombard the department of highways with resolutions and requests for immediate methods to stop the dust menace on the back road. The government would show its sincerity and honesty in its campaign for the safety of traffic by applying some form of dust-layer on the back road—and doing it immediately. It would be a pity to wait for the accident or accidents that seem inevitable if the dust is allowed to blow.

ONTARIO THE LOSER

In the case of Miss Rene Caisse, of Bracebridge, the Ontario Medical Council may consider it has won a great victory, but Ontario is decidedly the loser. Miss Caisse, who is a fully qualified nurse with more than the ordinary knowledge of medicine and treatment of diseases, some fifteen years ago, after much study and experiment, discovered a treatment to relieve cancer. That is all she claimed for it, but others have not hesitated to say that it is a cure for cancer. The editor of The Huntsville Forester some months ago published a list of some twenty names of people he knew quite well, who had been benefitted—yes, apparently cured—of cancer. Some of these people had been given up to die by the doctors and had to be carried into the little hospital to receive Miss Caisse's treatment, but after the treatment were able not only to leave the hospital under their own power, but to resume their daily duties as if they had never been ill. Dr. J. A. McInnis, the present Medical Health Officer of Timmins, made a careful investigation of Miss Caisse's treatment, and his expressed opinion was that Miss Caisse had a very valuable treatment that gave very decided benefit. Dr. H. L. Minthorn, of Timmins, is also quoted in Toronto despatches as visiting Miss Caisse's clinic and giving approval to the treatment as a beneficial one. It may not be generally known, but it is a fact that several in this part of the North have taken Miss Caisse's treatment and received very marked advantage—to put it mildly. Dr. Emma M. Carson, of Los Angeles, California, after examining patients at the Caisse clinic became an enthusiastic supporter of Miss Caisse's treatment. Dr. Richard Leonardo, chief coroner, of Rochester, N.Y., and a noted cancer specialist, who had studied in Vienna and other European centres, believes that Essiac is even more than Miss Caisse claims for it. Dr. Koch, of Detroit, cancer specialist, Dr. Arnold, of Ottawa, and many others who made personal investigation have added their endorsement to the Caisse treatment. There was no suggestion that Miss Caisse was a quack or simply seeking to prey on the hopelessness of the cancer sufferer. Instead she was known as a nurse of high standing and with a technical knowledge that would probably equal that of the average doctor likely to experiment in new treatments to relieve humanity's suffering. It must be admitted that medical men in general are a very fine class and are always ready to gladly accept any new form of treatment that will aid sufferers. This was the open attitude of many doctors as soon as they were convinced that Miss Caisse had made a helpful discovery. Unfortunately, however, it was not the attitude of the Medical Council of Ontario. Instead, that body used its power to see that Miss Caisse was hampered in her work of treating cancer. The Medical Council wanted Miss Caisse to hand over her formula. They said they had to try it out on guinea pigs and cats. Miss Caisse did not know how it would work on these animals. She pointed to the human beings who were the living proof of the value of her treatment. She asked that the treatment be judged on that. No doubt Miss Caisse hesitated to hand over the formula, having, perhaps, heard the fate of discoveries in other cases. If the Medical Council were unfair, unjust, unfriendly, or too greedy for the name of medical men, it would be an easy thing to condemn the formula as useless or worse. The attitude of the Medical Council was not such as to impress Miss Caisse with any idea of good will or fair treatment on the part of the Council. For a time the Medical Council was able to handicap Miss Caisse in her cancer treatments, but eventually she was able, thanks to the support of some of the doctors, all of her patients, and many of the newspapers of the province, to secure a special license from the Ontario Government to carry on her good work. To that extent the Ontario Medical Council lost part of the battle, but they still maintained their illogical attitude—the people must not be cured of cancer except by methods approved by the Medical Council. At the last session of the Ontario Legislature Miss Caisse applied for a license to practice legally in the treatment of cancer. The bill was defeated, though nobody disputed the fact that Miss Caisse had a beneficial treatment for cancer, and in some cases the benefit assuredly extended to a complete cure. At the same session of parliament, however, a bill was passed requiring all formulas for cancer treatment to be handed over to a commission of doctors for judgment. Extremely heavy penalties are imposed by the bill for anyone holding back any of these formulas. On the other hand the commission of doctors, though required to keep secret all formulas submitted to them, are under the act, relieved from any liability at law and cannot be called to the courts in any action for "libel, slander, or otherwise." Thus Miss Caisse under the act will be placed in the position of losing all that she has fought for in the past fifteen years—the right to a fair deal and to have her treatment recognized as her own discovery, and judged solely on the actual cures or benefits given by it. For years past, Miss Caisse has been urged to take her clinic to the United States, where the powers-that-be promise assistance and cooperation. Last week Miss Caisse had an interview with the Registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Toronto, and decided to give up the unequal battle. She intends to close here clinic at Bracebridge, and move with her formula to some centre in the United States. It is a triumph, perhaps, for the Medical Council of Ontario. But is a decided loss to Ontario itself.

URGING NATIONAL FITNESS

It is a genuine public service that the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation has undertaken in opening a campaign for national fitness. Appeal is to be made through the newspapers and by other means urging upon all the great need for national fitness. In this issue of The Advance there is published the first of a series of articles—an introductory to this campaign. The Advance hopes that every reader will not only study this article but will carefully read the others in the series. The matter is of such vital importance that it appears to be a patriotic duty to consider each of these articles as they appear. As the introductory article points out national fitness is essential to assure the survival of any nation to-day. This national fitness should extend from the physical to the mental, moral and spiritual. It is not too much to say that a campaign seeking to make every citizen as fit as possible, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, is the height of true patriotism. With a people nationally fit along the lines indicated, there is no danger of either the dictator or the demagogue oppressing the people. The nation would be able to take its place in the world, in business, in industry, in social service, in finance, and in defence of liberty and the land itself.

GRAVEL AND SAND—AND PLACER

The Huntingdon Gleaner tells of a young lady of seventeen, whose right arm was amputated three years ago, but who is graduating as a typist, having developed for herself a one-hand typewriting system that enables her to keep up with her classmates. This young lady deserves all credit for her remarkable persistence in following her chosen profession despite the handicap imposed by the amputation. But that is the limit of the remarkable. The one-hand system of typewriting is known in every newspaper office in the country. Indeed, it seems the natural method of typewriting for those who teach themselves the art of running a typewriter. All this two-handed typewriting is the product of the business colleges and the schools of typewriting. It is true that the use of two hands in typewriting does make for speed. Two handed-use of the pesky machine is about five times as fast as the one-hand practice. But human ingenuity is surely illustrated by the typist once in The Advance office, self-taught, using only one finger for the whole punching progress.

One of the objections that used to be brought up against war was its cost in dollars and cents. These days, however, it costs about as much to maintain peace as it does to prosecute war.

Just when the town is enjoying comparative freedom from dust on the streets, comes word that all the dust that ever blew around anywhere in this North is now blowing on the "back road" to the danger of traffic.

"Your eyes affect your health more than you'd think"

"Take me for example. At the office I'd tire quickly and my nerves always seemed 'on edge.' Yet my eyes didn't appear to be at fault. I happened to mention it to Mr. Curtis and he explained that quite often straining eyes take nervous energy away from other parts of the body without one knowing it. He examined my eyes and fitted me with glasses. Now I wear them at my desk and my old complaints have disappeared."

Faces Reflect the Feelings of People

Well-known Danish Artist Gives Interesting Address to South Porcupine Kiwanis.

South Porcupine, May 26th, 1938.—(Special to The Advance)—The degree of free and unfettered appreciation and enjoyment of the finer things in life, as a barometer of national serenity is a fairly accurate guide by which to judge the advantages of Europe's various forms of government. Such appeared to be the key note of a most interesting address to the South Porcupine Kiwanis Club on Thursday evening last by Mr. H. J. A. Tygesen, well-known Danish artist, presently exhibiting his collection of European canvases in Timmins. Mr. Tygesen's remarks, based mainly on observations made during a recent journey through many of the European countries, disclosed the fact that while dogmatic governments could censor the press and radio, even "padlock" the lips of the most insignificant citizen, it could not alter the heart of that citizen nor control the reflection of that heart's feelings in his facial expression.

To an artist, passing from country to country, faces told him more accurately than any official or unofficial press despatch, what was happening to the people of Europe. Referring mainly to Austria, and its recent annexation to Germany, Mr. Tygesen observed that more important than any particular persecution, was the change in the way of living of the entire populace—the disappearance of many of the old established customs, those little by-products of life which indicate a long-developed refinement, which add to it a certain garnishment of manner, and which change it from a mere existence stripped of all individual sensibility, to a life of free enjoyment of the collective national spirit. An awareness of this change, this loss, was evident particularly in Vienna, and seemed to show more clearly than anything else, the effect of trying to imbue into an entire nation, a single "foreign" personality.
