BRETHREN IN CHRIST HOLD CONCLAVE

Members of the Brethren in Christ from all parts of the continent converged on Welland, Ont., for their conclave. The sect is made up of sons and daughters of men who pioneered the frontier farms. Youthful delegates to the conclave were Lela Swain, of Collingwood and Sadie Winger and Cora Montague, of Birdie, Ont. TOP. As the brethren met they saluted each other with the Holy Kiss. BOTTOM. Men greeted men and women, women.

guest of Mrs. S. A. Fulton last week.

This week everyone is busy repairing the havoc brought on by the heavy rain on Saturday. Cellars are flooded and gardens are almost beyond repair. A child on Second avenue had a narrow escape when the cement sidewalk broke up and crushed the child's foot, but fortunately men were near and soon had the youngsters to the doctor, where he received treatment and is able to be out again.

The W.A. of Trinity United Church held a farewell party for Rev. and Mrs. Tait at the home of Mrs. A. D. Campbell, on Wednesday evening. All the members and past members came to wish Rev. and Mrs. Tait every success in their new charge in Toronto. An address was read by the president, and Rev. and Mrs. Tait were then presented with Spode chinaware as a token of remembrance, while here. Rev. and Mrs. Tait, have made many friends by their generous willingness to assist in every possible way, both in the church and out. They have brought them many friends who will long remember their ministry here, and regret their leaving.

Miss Staples was out when the party arrived, and was met at the door by a couple and escorted to a seat near which was a table laden with many beautiful gifts for the new home. The guests spent the evening in games

D. L. Jemmett Dies from Heart Attack

Pioneer of North, Widely Known, Passes at Age of 60.

Halleybury, June 23.—(Special to The Advance)—From St. Athias Anglican Church in Ottawa, where his father once had been rector of the parish, the funeral is being held today of the late D. L. Jemmett, widely-known citizen of the northern districts and connected for many years with the Northern Canada Supply Company, who died suddenly at his home here early on Tuesday. Burial is being made in Beechwood cemetery at Ottawa. The body was sent to the capital yesterday afternoon, after a service had been held at the late residence here, Rev. Richard Haines, of St. Paul's Church, officiating and brethren of the Masonic Order participating.

Mr. Jemmett was found dead in his garden about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, victim of a heart attack. He had been alone at his home and on Monday evening had been down town, returning to the house after 9 o'clock. Apparently he had been resting when he was stricken and he had been dead many hours when his body was found. Dr. W. C. Arnold, the family physician, was called, and certified death was due to natural causes. Mr. Jemmett had been in indifferent health recently, but had been about on Monday as usual.

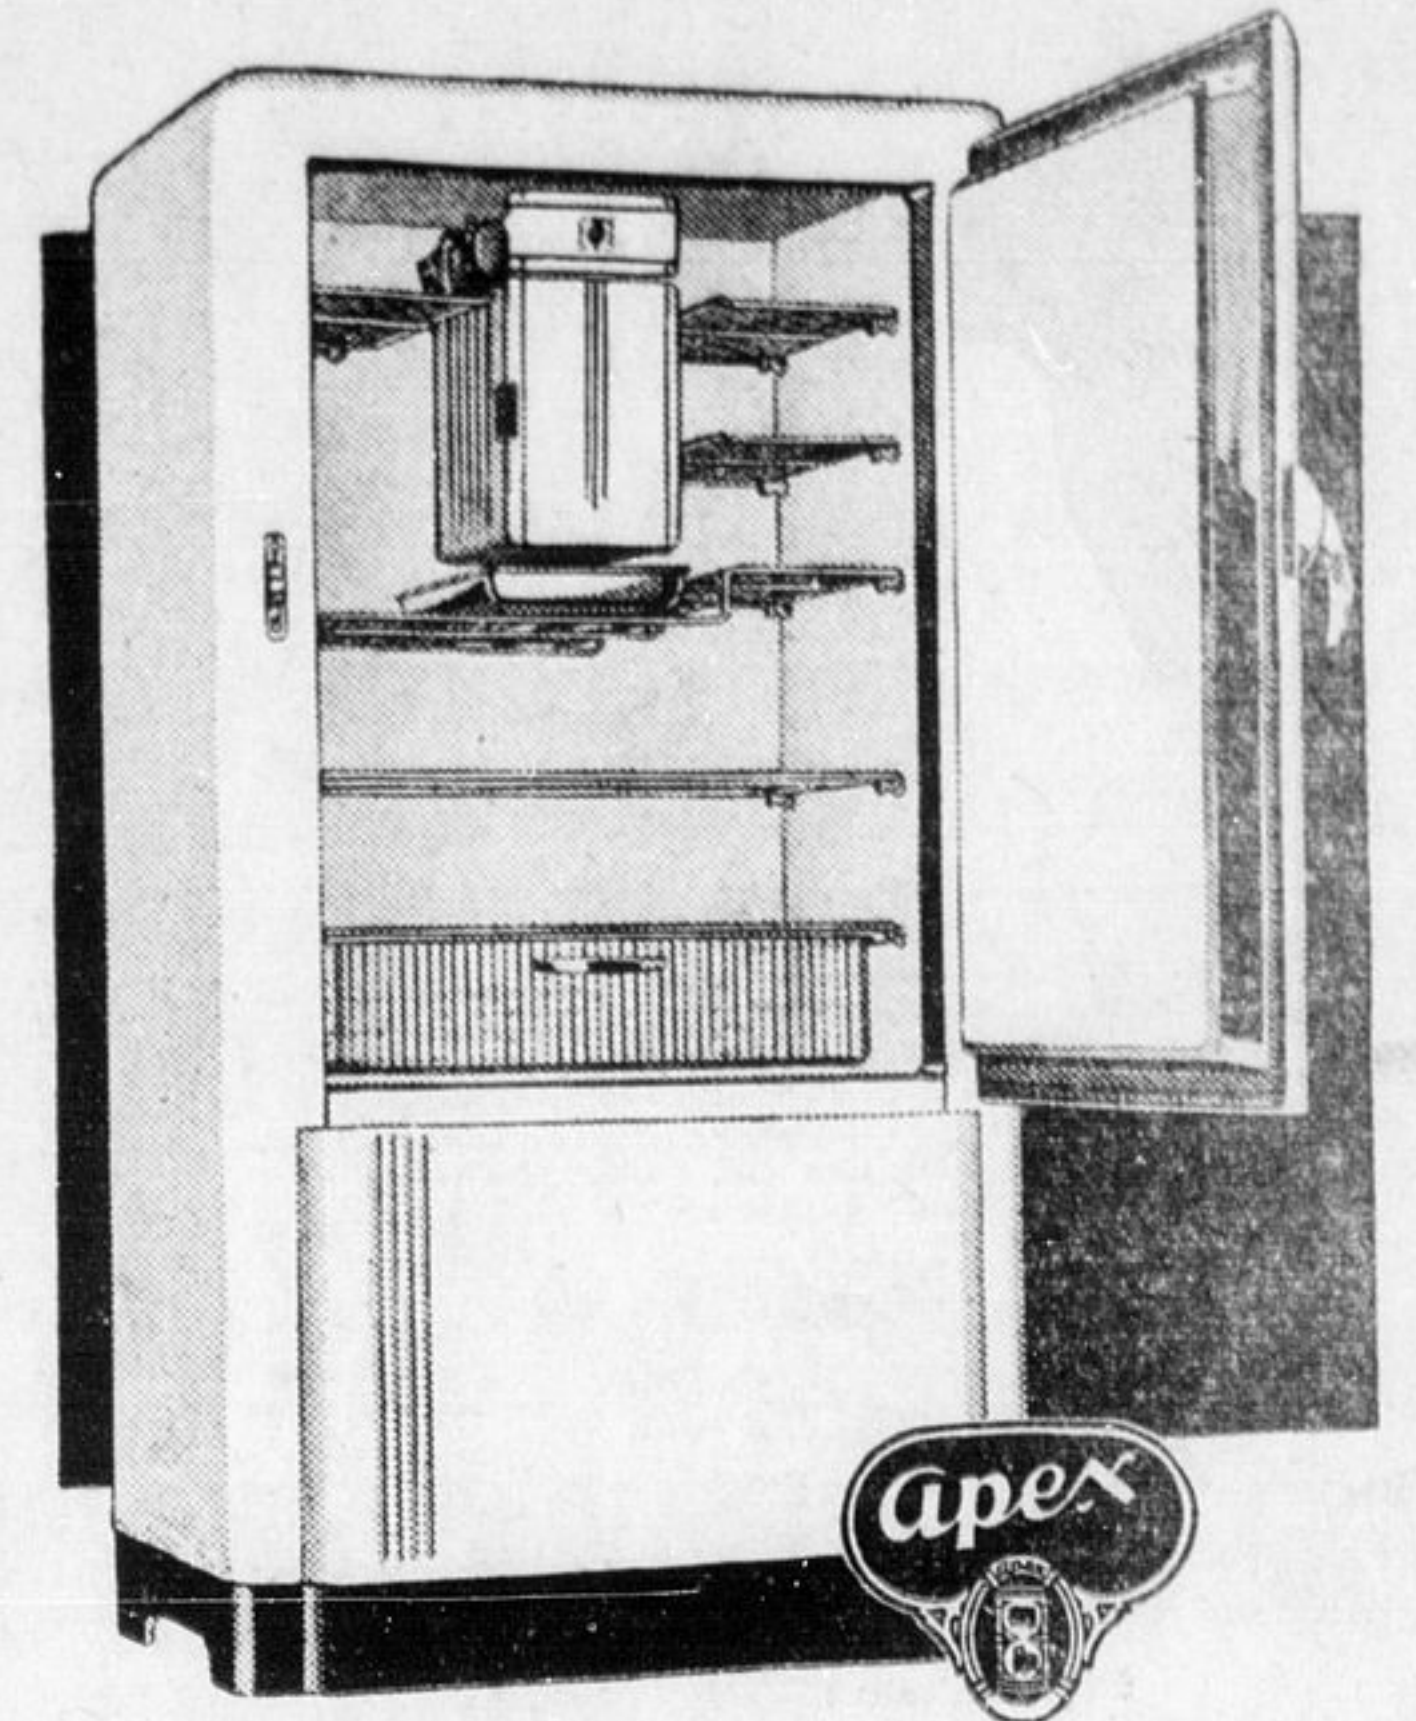

Born at Richmond, Ontario, 60 years ago, a son of the late Rev. George Jemmett and Mrs. Jemmett, deceased had been a well-known figure in Northern business affairs for a generation. Coming to Cobalt in 1906, Mr. Jemmett founded the Northern Canada Supply Company several years, the first order for the new concern being obtained at the Coniagas Mine. The business expanded with the growth of Cobalt and the steady progress of the mining industry and later a branch was established at Kirkland Lake, to which place the business was transferred from Cobalt about eight years ago. In earlier life Mr. Jemmett had been with the Imperial Bank and the E. L. Ruddy Company and had spent some time lumbering in Maine.

A man of many activities and interests, the late Douglas Lancaster Jemmett will be remembered as having been prominently identified with the movement to link Northern Ontario with the southern part of the province when that agitation got under way nearly two decades ago. He was president of the Northern Ontario Associated Boards of Trade when the monster Northern reputation waited upon Premier E. C. Drury at Queen's Park in 1922 to urge a start to be made on the project. He had acted in similar capacity with the local board of trade, was chairman of the Victory Loan committee during war years here and had been active in relieving distress following the fire of 1922. Mr. Jemmett also had been interested in mining and for a number of years operated the Agaunco property at North Cobalt with phenomenal success in obtaining cobalt ore. He was a Masonic brother of long standing and in politics as a Conservative.

Surviving are his widow, a former nurse at the old mines hospital in Cobalt, and two sons, D. Folkes Jemmett, in Kirkland, and John, who is attending school at Toronto. There are also a brother, Henry, formerly with the Northern Canada Supply Company, and now at Vittoria, and three sisters, Mrs. M. C. H. Little in Halleybury, Mrs. Frank Jemmett, of Toronto and Miss Georgina, who lives at Vittoria. Among nephews are Clifford Jemmett, Canadian National Express agent at New Liskeard, and Charlie Jemmett, former hockey player at South Porcupine. They are sons of

Rarely Any Excuse for Drivers Going Too Fast

Listowel Banner:—There is rarely any excuse for hasty driving. It is far better to be a few minutes late than to run down a pedestrian or take unnecessary chances. If you are a few minutes late getting started, do not try to make up this time by fast driving—you may not get there at all. Your car may be faster than the fellow who just passed you, but what of it? The only place to attempt speed is on the race track, and automobile racing is a hazardous profession. Every time you get behind the wheel of your automobile remember the duty you owe yourself, your family, and every other user of the highways, to drive safely.

London Free Press: Birth and wealth in Great Britain are harnessed to public service as in no other country. For centuries the Cecils, the Cavendishes, the Stanleys and innumerable other old families have contributed to the public life of the country. Duty has become a tradition and a habit.
