Town of Goderich Sets Example to Other Bodies

The following is an editorial from yesterday's issue of The Globe and Mail:—

"The Town of Goderich is to be congratulated for getting rid of its own railway debt. It has shown fortitude and persistence in meeting an obligation which, events showed, was ill-advised. Thirty years ago bonds were issued for $150,000 to subsidize the Ontario West Shore Railway. The road was never completed, but Goderich lived up to its end of the contract and has just paid off the last of the debt. Interest amounted to $225,000, so the town is out of pocket $375,000 for something of no value to it, unless the experience is counted an asset.

"Goderich, by it noted, did not shirk its responsibility through either good times or bad. It has paid up, wiped out the debt with clean hands, a clear conscience, and unswerving credit. Probably the good people of the community never thought of beating the creditors, although they were beaten by the promoters of the railway. In any event they have retained a sound reputation and set an example in honesty for other municipalities.

"Subsidizing railways was considered good policy once upon a time. Canadian municipalities contributed more than $16,000,000 over a period of years in cash grants, loans and stock subscriptions. The Province contributed over $43,000,000 and the Dominion Government more than $280,000,000 up to 1920. Besides there were Government guarantees exceeding $450,000,000. The total was nearly $700,000,000 before public ownership became a hot solution.

"Add the interest, as Goderich did, and it is seen where the railway problem originated.

"It would be interesting to know how many other municipalities and governments have taken their losses manfully."
