

Annual Lions Carnival Will Start Wednesday

Members of Club Discussed Final Details at Meeting on Thursday Night. Maurice Belanger Speaks on Custom Brokerage. Shipboard Radiogram Received from Dr. O. J. Stahl.

Final arrangements are being rushed to completion for the Lions Club carnival which opens a week's showing here on Wednesday.

The committee in charge of the carnival specially pointed out that the nightly beauty contest is open to girls over seventeen years and not under, as previously announced.

A well known carnival company have been engaged by the Lions to bring an up-to-date midway show here and a big week of entertainment is anticipated.

Lion Maurice Belanger was the speaker for the occasion and took as his subject, customs brokerage.

President Dr. M. J. Kelly, who presided for the occasion, expressed the hope that other members of the club will give talks on the business classification in which they belong.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the reading of a radiogram from Dr. O. J. Stahl, who with his wife is now spending a vacation in Europe.

Youthful Don Shaw, a son of Alex Shaw, made a decided hit with the meeting in the rendition of vocal and piano solos and was enthusiastically endorsed.

Timmins Pupil on Scottish Tour Trip

Some Particulars of the Trip Being Taken by Lee Lawry.

In a recent issue The Advance referred to the fact that Lee Lawry, of Timmins, was in the group of High and Vocational School pupils going on the tour of the Old Lands under the sponsorship of the Scottish Secondary Schools Travel Trust.

Over 100 Canadian schoolboys sailed from Montreal on July 8th aboard the Donaldson Atlantic liner Letitia.

The group, which has been recruited from principal schools in Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, Toronto and other large Eastern centres, will travel under the auspices of the Scottish Secondary Schools Travel Trust of Edinburgh, Scotland, which has for many years been arranging inexpensive and educational holiday tours to different parts of the British Empire for English and Scottish secondary schoolboys.

In 1937 the trust organized and operated a highly successful tour from Great Britain to Eastern Canada, and while the party was on this side of the Atlantic, its leaders were approached by well-known Canadian educationalists with a view to providing similar facilities for Canadian schoolboys to take part in the European holiday tours being arranged for 1938.

The itinerary for the Canadian boys includes Scotland, England, France, Switzerland and a two weeks' cruise to the Norwegian Fjords in the M. V. Dilwara.

The Dilwara, a modern military transport vessel, has been specially chartered by the Travel Trust to carry not only the Canadian party, but a large group of Scottish secondary boys, and will sail from Leith on July 23 for Fjærdanger (Sognefjord), Bergen, Odda (Hardangerfjord), Stavanger, Oslo and Arendal.

The Haileyburian last week says:—"Rev. Father Schultz, known throughout the North as the 'Flying Priest,' made a short call at the Haileybury airport on Monday, while on a flight to his mission at Port Albany, on the Hudson's Bay, and other points where he expected to spend the next three months.

Impounding of Car Creates a Problem

Case at Haileybury Referred to Attorney-General.

Haileybury, July 18.—(Special to The Advance)—An unexpected twist to a case before Magistrate Gould, of North Bay, here last Friday provided the court with a problem that is to be referred to the Attorney-General's Department at the suggestion of Crown Attorney J. B. Robinson, after defence counsel, W. H. Walter, mayor of New Liskeard, had raised the question of the impounding of a car registered in the name of a person recently deceased.

On their first public appearance, Ernest Manero and his Royal Knights Club Orchestra supplied the music for a very successful dance at the Riverside Pavilion on Friday night.

New Kind of Trouble for Guards of Quintuplets

Callendar, July 16.—What would happen if one of the Dionne quintuplets found a tiny skunk in their playyard and picked it up to pet? It would be a major catastrophe no matter how you look at it.

That's just what the guards and staff at the Dionne Nursery are afraid of, but what they're bound will not happen.

They make themselves known every so often. No actual harm has been done, but the staff and guards find their presence annoying—as you wouldn't. What's more, there is always the danger that the little fellows might sneak out, be spotted and petted by the quints.

That Charles A. Ordway, manager of Naybob Porcupine Mine, came to his death on the 700-foot level of the property on the evening of July 7, as the result of carbon monoxide poisoning, was the verdict of a coroner's inquest here on Friday afternoon.

According to the evidence of the various witnesses the practice of using air after blasting was not consistently carried out. An inspection of the pressure charts in the hoist room after the fatality disclosed that air was used approximately half the time.

Mark Jennings, shift boss, testified that according to a recognized custom in the Porcupine Camp, all machine men are supposed to see that air is turned on after a blast. There was no indication on the pressure chart in the hoist room that air had been turned on the night that Mr. Ordway met his death.

Roy Anderson and H. Stevenson, both machine men, said that they had never received any instructions regarding the turning on of air after blasting. They admitted however that it was a recognized practice in other mines.

W. Simmers, hoistman, said that Mr. Ordway had descended into the mine at five minutes to five, an hour after the shift had blasted. He had made a practice of going down nearly every day, the witness told the jury.

Joseph Rheinisch, a solution man in the mill, descended to the 700-foot level and found Ordway lying face down in the drift. With the assistance of Leo Hittie, he brought the body to surface and immediately started artificial respiration.

Dr. A. G. Irvine, who was called to the scene, said that Ordway had died from carbon monoxide poisoning. As soon as he arrived at the mine he gave the victim stimulants injected into the blood stream and later at the hospital oxygen was used in an effort to start respiration.

L. McClure was the foreman of the jury, other members being Alex Borland, Sr., D. C. Fox, E. Sullivan, A. McAlendin, C. W. Collins and T. W. White.

Iroquois Falls Has Visit from Big Moose

Other News from Iroquois Falls Correspondent.

Iroquois Falls, Ont., July 14th, 1936.—(Special to The Advance)—Much amazement was felt by the night clerk at the Iroquois Falls hotel, on Wednesday, when in the early hours of the morning, he saw a moose walking leisurely over the golf course.

What started out to be a field day ended in a big party and dance, on Wednesday, when Timmins failed to reach Iroquois Falls until after supper. However, everyone went to the Parish hall where a party was being held, and a good time was had by all.

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways, and Mr. Robertson, Minister of Ontario Motor League, paid an unexpected visit to town on Wednesday, and were entertained by the town council and mayor, at the Hotel Iroquois.
