Estimate 5000 Attended Lake Shore Annual Picnic

It is estimated that there were 5000 in attendance at the annual picnic of the Lake Shore Amateur Athletic Association at New Lakehead Beach last Sunday. It took fifty T. & N. O. railway cars, not to mention hundreds of automobiles, to carry the crowds from Kirkland Lake to Lakehead Beach for the event. Fourteen Lake Shore employees worked all day Saturday at the Beach making preparations for the big event, and they did the work unusually well to judge from results. The picnic was a big success in every way and had a lot of regular "city" features, including first aid tents and a place for lost children. There were ten lost children cared for and restored to their own.

Even the weather was good for the North this year, there being only a couple of showers. There was softball, track and field events, novelties, life-guards, including a couple of lady life-guards, watched over the hundreds who enjoyed the bathing and swimming. A novelty that was popular was the placing of rubber toys and animals in the water. Before the big day closed most of these had disappeared, being taken away for souvenirs apparently. Highland dancing, Ukrainian folk dances, Casack sword dances, and music by the Kirkland Lake Citizens' Band, the Ukrainian National Band and the Highland Pipe Band were other outstanding features. Still another particularly interesting feature was the presentation by Mr. E. W. Todd, manager of the Lake Shore Mine, of handsome medals to seven men who had worked for the past ten years at the mine without an accident of any kind. The seven men were N. Wilson, A. Royle, W. King, W. Stewart, H. Lafoeur, S. Dugmore and W. Brough.

Chesley Enterprises—If there ever was anything that appeared to promote our sense of humour more than a bald-headed barber recommending to his patrons a tonic in his shop as a sure restorer of hair, it was a speaker to rural audiences who had left the old homestead and is now enjoying a salary of $5000 to $6000 a year, advising boys to be sure not to leave the old farm.

Other Items From Iroquois Falls and Ansonville

Iroquois Falls, Ont., July 20, 1938.—(Special to The Advance)—The Paper Makers' picnic was held on Sunday, July 17, at Child's Beach. A large number of people attended, being conveyed there by means of truck and car loads. Much enjoyment was had by all, especially the children, who were treated with free refreshments. A few races were run off for the children. Two namers, which were drawn for, were won by Mrs. Charles Mitchell, and Mrs. E. Martino. These prizes were well worth winning too, as they consisted of five dollars' worth of groceries each.

Personals

Mr. Paukert, mill manager, motored to North Bay on Sunday, to meet his son who is coming up from Fort William.

The cubs left for a week's vacation at Sasekinika on Sunday, leaving for the same camp the Scouts were using, the Scouts returning on Sunday.

Born—to Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Duffy, at the Anson General hospital, on Thursday, July 14, a son; both doing fine.

Remarkable Story of Samuel Insull

From Poverty to Wealth, With Return Ticket

(From Ottawa Journal)

Samuel Insull, the man who passed from poor immigrant boy to be ruler of a financial empire only to crash into poverty and be hunted as a criminal, ending his days as a penniless traveller in a Paris subway, is to be buried in his native England. What a story lies between!

Oscar Wilde once said that fiction didn't dare to be as strange as truth. Few fiction writers would have the hardihood to build a character like Insull. Arriving in the United States without money, friends or social background, a young man without a profession, technical training or business experience, he went on in twenty-five years to become one of the world's financial and industrial giants, head of a $4,000,000,000 utilities dynasty, possessor of a personal fortune of $400,000,000, a philanthropist and patron of the arts. In Chicago, where he lived, they ranked him with the Rockefellers and the Mellons.

Then his vast empire crashed. That Insull was a crook, a criminal who deliberately set out to swindle the public, there never was proof. But what the crash of all he had build showed was that he was not the infallible financial genius the world believed him to be. The United States was passing through the days when its president visualized "a car in every garage and a chicken in every pot." The Republic was to have reached the peak of human felicity, with prosperity boundless. Month after month the stock market soared, and day after day came some new vast promotion, some new holding company, some new triumph of frenzied finance. Samuel Insull was one of those who thought the march could go on. Year after year he extended his holdings, piling holding company upon holding company, organizing an empire of industry and finance that no single man could control and which probably no man thoroughly understood.

When 1929 rocked the whole United States industrial fabric to its foundations, the Insull superstructure collapsed. No one, not even the great Insull, could save it. In the face of the crash, with fortunes being wiped out over night, he was as helpless as the others: a pitiable old man who could do nothing for the people who had trusted him, who put their last cent with him because he was the great Insull; the man who couldn't be wrong. So the mighty billionaire, the industrial giant whose words made headlines, became a fugitive, hunted by the law, execrated by the people who had been his worshippers the day before. They found him somewhere in Europe and brought him back to the United States to stand trial.

That was eight years ago. In the intervening years, Insull, freed of criminal charges, a penniless old man, passed into merciful obscurity, living with the ghost of his dreams. Seldom has his name appeared in a newspaper. No one knew that he was in Europe or cared. And in death, except to recall his extraordinary story, no one except his wife and near relatives care greatly.

Life, with all its ups and downs, with its strange pranks of circumstance and destiny, has not often told a more tragic story.

Two Deaths at Haileybury From Typhoid on Sunday

Haileybury, July 21.—(Special to The Advance)—Two patients from different parts of the northern districts died from the same disease within a few minutes on Sunday evening in Misericordia hospital here. Linked in death by this unusual coincidence were Mrs. J. P. La Salle, whose home was in Ramore, and James Albert Greenwood, who had been working for the Dufferin Construction Co., on road work in the Temagami area. Each had contracted typhoid fever and each had been brought to Misericordia hospital for treatment. Mrs. La Salle, who was an aunt of Rev. Father La Salle, parish priest in Haileybury, was 46 years of age and a native of Quebec province. Her body was sent to Ramore on Monday, and the funeral was held there this week. Mr. Greenwood, who was in his 30th year, was English by birth. His body was sent on the evening train for burial at Mimico, where relatives reside.

Joan Crawford — Franchot Tone Agree to Disagree

Despatches from Hollywood yesterday said that Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone, noted screen stars, had issued a joint statement to the effect that they had separated. Mr. Tone, the husband, moving to separate quarters, though both claimed that they were parting the best of friends. The statement expressed regret that the marriage had to terminate, but agreed that some such step seemed necessary for their mutual happiness, though no particular reason was given for the professional necessity of separation. The statement said that the matter of divorce had not been discussed, adding that there was no special hurry for a detail like that. For several months there have been rumors at Hollywood that the Crawford-Tone marriage was not continuing mutually satisfactory. The statement confirms this part of the rumours. It is said that the two stars met on a film set, while the picture, "To-day We Live," was being made. They were married five years ago. Perhaps five years is a long term for a Hollywood marriage.

Heatstrokes and Heat Exhaustion

Health Authority Gives Measures to Take for These Summer Ills.

(By J. W. S. McCullough, M.D., D.P.H.)

The extreme heat of summer is a real danger. Excessive high temperature is a similar danger to those who work in factories, engine rooms and other hot places and who fail to take precautions against heatstrokes and heat exhaustion.

Heatstroke and heat exhaustion are radically different in their effect upon the patient and in the treatment required.

In heatstroke the face is red or purple, the skin is dry and hot, the temperature, measured by the thermometer, high, and the patient is unconscious. In heat exhaustion, much the opposite is the rule. The face is pale, the skin moist and cold and the temperature low; the person is usually conscious. Remember the differences. In heatstroke, a dry skin; in heat exhaustion a moist skin.

What should be done in these cases? First call a doctor. Then remember that the hot body should be cooled and the cold body warmed. In heatstroke lay the patient on his back in a shady place and remove as much clothing as society will allow. Sponge body with cold water. Apply ice-bag or cold cloths to the head. Give no stimulants, but after the patient has become conscious let him have all the cool water he will drink.

In heat exhaustion lay the patient in a reclining position. Loosen clothing. Keep warm with hot water bottles, blankets or other handy materials. Give stimulants: tea, coffee or one teaspoonful aromatic spirits of ammonia in a half a glassful of water.

Preventive Methods

In hot weather wear light, porous clothing. Avoid unnecessary exposure to the sun or excessive heat either indoors or outdoors. Keep your head covered in the scorching sun. Drink plenty of cool water and to each glassful add a tablet of common salt (gr. v) either with or without 5 gr. dextrose. Use a liberal amount of salt food to replace the salt lost through sweating.

Guard Against Poison Ivy During the Holidays

More than once the statement has been made that there is no poison ivy in this part of the North. Unfortunately, this is not the truth, as some people susceptible to the poison know to their sorrow. In any event many from here spend their holidays where there is poison ivy in more or less abundance. For this reason the following from the Health League of Canada seems to be particularly timely:

Three Leaves for Poison

Health authorities state that in many parts of Canada ivy poisoning is common. In those sections where it does occur, hikers should avoid touching poison ivy, poison sumac or anything resembling them. They should not walk through underbrush or let their clothing come in contact with any three-leaf vine.

Poison ivy which sprouts over so much of the countryside is also known as poison oak, poison vine and poison creeper. It can be recognized by its leaf, which is divided into three leaflets. Its flower is a small greenish one and its fruit pale green during the early part of summer. After ripening the fruit turns ivory white. The Virginia creeper, which is also very common, is not poisonous. It is distinguished by having five leaflets.

Far less common, but just as poisonous, is a large shrub known as poison sumac, poison elder and poison ash. Its bark is light gray, its leaves compound, from seven to fourteen inches long.

Persons who come in contact with poison ivy are likely to find a peculiar inflammation of the skin break out at the point of contact with the ivy, a few hours afterwards. Sometimes there is a slight redness and itching; with others, large swellings with extensive blisters, accompanied by a severe burning sensation.

When poison ivy or poison sumac has been accidentally touched, the hands should be immediately washed with coal oil, alcohol or non ethyl gasoline. If unable to obtain any of these at once, washing with strong soap is recommended. As cold creams and ointments may dissolve and spread the poison, they should not be used.
