IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear mother Lydia Allen who entered the Heavenly home July 21st, 1932. Six years have passed on without you. Shadows have faded and fallen. But, mother dear, your smiling face is missed by us all. For in the book of our lives there are memories Of the happiest moments we've known And recorded in love is the blessing Of a wonderful Mother, our own. For she saw only good in our dreaming. And her name is the sweetest name Written, Mother Mine, in the book of our lives. "The God who took will keep her in His care." —Still dear to us all. From her loving children, Daughters, Beatrice, Evelyn, Hetty, Thirza, and son, Willie, Dome Mines, July 21st, 1938. -58

Horticultural Soc'y Garden Competition

Prizes and Trophies Offered for Best Gardens.

The prize list of the Timmins Horticultural Society just issued shows that there are good prizes and trophies for the usual garden competition this year for the town and district. As customary in recent years there is a special section for Hollinger townsite gardens. This eliminates the possibility of two prizes being awarded to one garden, and so extends the prize list, but it does not alter the possibility of a townsite garden being the best garden of its size in town. ## Shock Kills Kirkland Lake Miner After Rescue Cave-In at Lake Shore Mine Between the 2,200 and 2,300 Ft. Levels on Tuesday Morning Traps Two Men, One of Whom was Rescued at Once. John Greczak Imprisoned for Seven Hours, Collapses on Reaching Surface.

After being imprisoned for some seven hours following a fall of rock at the Lake Shore Mine at Kirkland Lake, John Greczak, was finally released on Tuesday but lived only long enough to reach the surface where he collapsed and died, apparently from shock. So far as can be learned Greczak was not injured in any serious way but simply had his passage blocked to safety. It appeared as if the strain of being held for seven hours underground, in what he must have felt to be much danger, proved to be too great a burden on heart and nerves.

Early on Tuesday morning there was a fall of rock underground at the Lake Shore Mine, following what was apparently one of the airblasts that occasionally occur at the mine. The accident was below the 2200-ft. level, but only some four or five men seemed to be endangered, others not being near the danger zone. Of the few men involved two or three were unaffected, and were able to make their own way to safety and the surface. Two men, however, were trapped by having their passage blocked. One of these was John Greczak, a 36-year-old miner, and the other was J. Zagar, a helper, 32 years old. Neither of them had been injured by the shifting rock, but neither was able to get to safety on account of the blocking of the passage to the shaft. Immediately after the rock fell rescue crews were busy at work, and it was only a short time before Zagar was released and taken to the surface and from there to the hospital for examination. It was found that he had not been seriously harmed and he was able to leave the hospital in a short time. On the other hand, it took some seven hours to shovel a way to Greczak. While the work was in progress, Greczak was able to talk to the rescue crew. He assured them he was not injured to any serious extent and that he was not particularly suffering from the air. After a few hours, however, the imprisoned man appeared less and less ready to talk, the rescue crews thinking that perhaps he was seeking to conserve the purity of the air where he was by decreasing vocal efforts. Eventually the rescue crew won through to the imprisoned miner, and hurried him to the surface. When they reached him he was alive and appeared to be uninjured. They were accordingly surprised and shocked when he collapsed on reaching the surface and was dead before anything could be done for him. Efforts at resuscitation proved unavailing. It is believed that Greczak's death was due to shock.

John Greczak was a native of Poland, but had been several years in Canada. He was an experienced miner. He is survived by his widow.

During the time that rescue work was being carried on, all underground activity was discontinued. Word of the accident reached Timmins in distorted form on Tuesday morning. At first the report suggested that a large part of the mine was affected and that several men had been buried in the rockfall. Enquiry at Kirkland Lake, however, brought the better news that the fall of rock was not so extensive as reported, only the 2200-ft. level being affected, and that only two men were imprisoned by the fall of rock. Later, the word was that neither of the men were injured, but simply that their passage was blocked. Still a little later came the word that Zagar had been freed and that he was all right, while there was every hope for Greczak's removal alive and unhurt. There was also denial that all work had ceased in the mine. It was explained that all underground activity except the rescue work had been suspended below the 2200-ft. level until such time as Greczak could be released, and that naturally the rescue work was given precedence over everything else, but with these restrictions things were more or less as usual at the mine, and that the accident had been exaggerated particularly in regard to the extent of the rock fall and the results in damage and loss of time at the mine.

Val d'Or-Lamaque News Joins the Ranks of the Wets

In the words of The Val d'Or-Lamaque News itself here is the story:—Unique Engineering Drains Streets into News Office

Tons of water, aided and abetted by the incapacitated town council, road department, Maurice Duplessis, the Quebec Municipal Commission, and any others you care to name, poured into The News plant last Friday at printing time and the result was that the printing staff aided by the staff of the Abitibi Electric had to turn in and wade around in two feet of water and silt to lift out motors and other important equipment.

Ten muckers worked for 24 hours straight to carry out the silt when the six inch pump of the Val d'Or Hardware had lifted out the water. Two more days of work was required to oil up and clean machinery that couldn't be moved with the result that The News was finally produced four days late.

The News can be described as the "wettest" newspaper in the north as it has gone through several of these impositions since its inception all due to badly arranged drainage on our main street, that still looks like the worst stretch of highway in the Dominion of Canada. With no ditches on either side of the street and with inadequate storm sewer facilities, it looks as though the much supervised improvement scheme in our community is a most inefficiently installed one. And still the Quebec Municipal Commission insists that they are doing all these strange things in the interest of our community.

To which The News snorts in disgust and invites Mr. Duplessis, the Quebec Municipal Commission, Mr. Poisson, its official delegate, the town engineer and the officials of the Colonial Construction for a reasonable answer to this "damp" problem that keeps The News readers from getting their paper on time.

Due to the delays experienced by The News there will not be any issue of La Voix de Val d'Or this week, but the regular News edition will be out on Friday as usual, that is, if Dame Nature and those other persons that we have mentioned do not go on a rampage and swamp the works.

Heppburn Aerial Party Samaritan to Equines

Regina, July 19.—Premier Mitchell Heppburn of Ontario landed here at 2.22 p.m. E.D.T. to-day, breaking his 8000-mile holiday trip which will take him to Aklavik and Dawson City over the Trail of '98.

As the big amphibian plane alighted, Mr. Heppburn stepped out and shook hands with Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture; Premier W. J. Patterson and other members of the Saskatchewan Government who were on hand to welcome the party.

Other passengers on the plane were J. P. Bickell, Toronto mining financier, and B. E. Smith, New York capitalist. The pilot is Jimmy Towne.

The party brought with them from Winnipeg 400 pounds of serum with which to fight the brain disease of horses, encephalomyelitis, which already has claimed the lives of hundreds of farm animals.

The serum was ordered by a Moose Jaw druggist to meet the demands of farmers, and an automobile picked up the consignment and rushed it to Moose Jaw.

Premier Heppburn's plans were to remain in Regina but a short time visiting grain fields, and to make a more extended tour on his return from the Pacific Coast, when he may visit Mr. Gardiner's farm at Lemberg, Sask.

Next stop will be Calgary, after which the party will head for Aklavik and Dawson City.
