tive Addresses Meeting of More About German Interest in Canada

German Capital for Turner

(From Globe and Mail)

Confirmation of the rumor that German company had offered to build a pipeline from Turner Valley to the Pacific Coast is a most interesting development in the brief history of crude oil in Alberta, although the very idea remains somewhat fantastic.

Under the plan suggested by the company, the German government would, in effect, be the contractng party, taking much-needed supplies of crude and lubricants as its profits. As we interpret the situation, cost of manufacturing the necessary material would be supplied by government credits and, while the actual cost would be eventually met by the buyers, the profit would come later in barter of oil

Thus, in effect, the government would, finally receive the oil, at least during peace times, though it would be different in war. Even under the conditions we have outlined, it seems passing strange that Germany should have realized the possibilities of the largest source of oil in the British Empire before the Empire itself.

Be that as it may, the feasibility of pipeline to the Coast, or, in fact, to the head of the Great Lakes, cannot, be denied. That it would cost money goes without saying, but, in the telegraphic item referred to above, the cost was set at $16,000,000 for a Coast line, at the rate of around $25,000; mile, which seems reasonable, if, and only if, the right of way of one of the transcontinental railways, could be

From Turner Valley to the summit of the Rockies on the Canadian Pacific an elevation of around 2,000 feet would have to be overcome by pumping, but from that point to the coast, whether or not the oil would proceed by gravity we are not able to say. Those are questions that must be left to engineering

It has been suggested that a pipeline to the Coast, via the Crow's Nest Pass and the Kettle Valley southern line of the Canadian Pacific, would be the best route to follow, as several towns of importance, including those of the coal fields, Neson, Grand Forks, and others, could be supplied en route. That would entail a pipeline approcimately 927 miles long, according to

Testing James Bay

Blacksmith Rapids Deposits Being Studied at University of Texas.

Cochrane, Sept. 19-Development of extensive lignite deposits at Blacksmith Rapids just south of James Bay may follow tests now being made at the University of Texas.

A group of Ontario financial interests recently offered to devolp the deposit now on Crown land, on a royalty basis. The overburden is understood to range around 50 feet so that development is largely a stripping process, but the railway runs over the deposits, solving promarily transportation difficulties. Because lignite has such a large water content, and deteriorates rapidly methods of drying and preserving it have not been developed extensively in this country. In the southern United States it is understood that lignite is being used for some railway engines Germany, too, has developed an apparently practicable method of handling

Main difficulty with the Ontario lignite deposit is its considerable distance from large commercial centres (600 milse from Toronto) but development costs would, it appears, be very low.

One major outlet for lignite fue which the promoters are understood to have in mind, is in smelting and refining operations in the mining areas of Ontario and Quebec.
