

Contributions Continue to Christmas Seal Fund

Another List of Those Helping in the Funds to Continue and Extend the Battle Against Tuberculosis in the Porcupine. Still Further Contributions to Come.

Herewith is given another list of contributions to the Porcupine Christmas Seal Fund. A number of other lists have been published in The Advance in the past few weeks, and it is hoped that further lists before the end of the year will fully assure the continuance and extension of the battle in the Porcupine against tuberculosis.

Some years ago when the prevalence of tuberculosis in the district was recognized active measures were adopted to combat the disease. Much has been accomplished in the fight against the disease, though much remains to be done. Reports presented to the Lions Club and in addresses to the Kiwanis Club in recent weeks gave full evidence of the progress being made here in fighting tuberculosis. One thing particularly worthy of note is that so much of the battle has been centred in the idea of guarding the children against the disease. The continuance of this plan will mean not only the eventual conquest of tuberculosis, but it will also mean the elimination of much suffering. It will be freely admitted that it is a noble thing to help the sufferers from tuberculosis, but it is still better business to prevent the disease, to guard the children from it.

Clinics, X-ray examination, treatment, all these have been used here in the battle against tuberculosis. Testing the youngsters for the disease, however, has been especially valuable. It means the guarding of the youngsters from the horrors of tuberculosis by early treatment and by protecting them in other ways. To carry on this good work, of course money is necessary, and the Porcupine Christmas Seal Committee campaign is the answer to that part of the problem.

The Porcupine Christmas Seal Committee is sponsored by the Lions Club and assisted by the Canadian Tuberculosis Association. The Christmas Seals committee has sent out packages of seals with a letter explaining what has been done and what is to be done in the battle against tuberculosis. Recipients of the seals are asked to remit a dollar or more (preferably more, of course) for the seals, this money to be used to carry on the fight against tuberculosis in the Porcupine. If you have not received the seals this year, ask a member of the committee for some and hand in your contribution. The committee includes the following: F. V. H. Ball, president; Dr. N. H. Russell, treasurer; Mrs. E. Reeves, secretary.

The following list includes the names of another group of those remitting for the Christmas Seals. These lists with the other lists published, carry the contributions up to Dec. 16th:

Assault Case Hinges on Bathroom Door

(Continued from Page One) longer an agent of the used car lot when he went with him to get the car. King replied negatively. When King said that he took the car for a trial run because he intended to buy it, Magistrate Atkinson promptly dismissed the charge.

Fined For Assault
Richard Kockstat was fined $10 and costs with the alternative of thirty days in jail when convicted of assaulting Dolard Chasson, a taxi driver.

Chasson said that the three men came to the Diamond Taxi stand wanting a car. Getting in, one of the men stepped on the seat and soiled it. He protested. Finally the trio got in the car. They did not know where they wanted to go. When they began to "chew the rag" about his earlier protestations he told them to get another car if they wished and took them to another stand.

Before he had stopped driving and while the car was still in motion Kockstat struck him in the eye, cutting it. "That's your 50 cents," he said.

Kockstat said that the driver would not let them out of the car and that he struck first.

"He called us anything you could say in the English language," he said.

He was asked for and gave a few examples. "Is that all," said the magistrate, "he might have used a lot more."

The Magistrate accepted the taxi driver's evidence. He convicted and imposed the fine.

Wants Government to Help in Opening Up of North

(From Globe and Mail)

Parliament Hill and Queen's Park have agreed on a public works programme for Northern Ontario whereby each will spend $1,000,000 to give employment to 12,000 idle men. It will cover highway construction and forestry conservation, projects which, properly carried out, will add to public revenue and wealth.

We doubt that there is less danger of losing votes in Northern Ontario than elsewhere, but it seems Ontario and Ottawa can work together when it is deemed necessary. Why cannot they co-operate in a survey of the further north to disclose the potentialities of that great area to private enterprise and give employment to many times 12,000 men? Is it because woods, rocks and waterfalls cannot vote?

When the Canadian Pacific transcontinental was undertaken the English publication Truth said it never would pay for the cost of the spikes in the rails, or something to this effect. Until comparatively recent years the rich mining district of Northern Ontario was regarded as hopeless waste, yet it has saved the nation. The initiative of courageous investors revealed wealth in both cases which the standard patterns couldn't visualize. The great north is still to be opened up and scores of thousands of idle men are crying for work.

The Duke of Devonshire the other day pictured Canada with a population of 40,000,000 people. It seems we cannot accommodate them because the strip of country already exploited contains an army of unemployed. Lord Tweedsmuir said at the convocation of Western University: "We have in our north far greater assets than any that Russia can claim," and Russia is reported to have 150,000 men engaged in research on the potentialities of its north.

Why our governments are willing to pay out tens of millions of dollars year after year to maintain people in idleness and do almost nothing to provide them with the means of earning their own living is past comprehension. Expansion must be northward. If Russia can find wealth and employment there so can Canada. What are Queen's Park and Ottawa waiting for?

Junior C.W.L. Present Gifts to Guide Company

As the basement of the Church of Nativity was being used for concert purposes on Monday evening, the Junior C.W.L. was not able to hold its annual Christmas tree, but the members sent several beautiful Christmas gifts to the Girl Guide Company, who were holding their Christmas party that evening.

Christmas Greetings from the Mayor of Englehart

Among the many cards of Christmas greeting received at The Advance office is one doubly prized, being from an old friend of The Advance and an old friend of the North—Mr. H. Weeks, of Englehart. The card itself has dignity and simplicity and the attraction that accompanies these qualities. At the top of the card is the crest or coat of arms of the town of Englehart, and beneath in Old English type (type associated with Christmas season by generations of use) the greetings and the address. The crest of the town of Englehart is of special interest. As the top is a locomotive to suggest the importance of the town as a railway centre. Beneath in two panels are rows of grain and crossed hammers of the prospector, to indicate the other two activities—farming and mining—on which the town is founded and upon which it bases its future. Mr. Weeks has been mayor of Englehart so often and has carried through the office of the community that to the outside world, gaining good impression of Englehart from the genial and friendly mayor, has high opinion of the town because of the outstanding qualities of its chief representative. All in the North and wide circles from elsewhere will sincerely reciprocate the Christmas and New Year's wishes from Mayor and Mrs. Weeks and from the town of Englehart.
