Impose Term of Three Months in Liquor Case

Morris Mandel Sent Down for Selling Beer. Convicted of Drunk Driving, Motorist Sentenced to Ten Days. Has Car Impounded for Three Months. Traffic Violators Fined.

Three months in jail at hard labour was the sentence meted out to Morris Mandel in police court on Tuesday when he was convicted by Magistrate Atkinson of keeping liquor for sale. The house in which Mandel resides was declared a public place for one year and twenty-two pints of lager and three-quarters of a bottle of gin, seized by police, were confiscated.

Provincial Constable Worrell testified that he and two other officers searched the house in Mountjoy after a raid at 3.15 a.m. on January 14. The house was located on Ronald street, in Mountjoy township, just across the bridge over the Mattaami river.

They found two men and two women drinking in the house. A search revealed twenty-two pints of beer and a part bottle of gin in the icebox.

The accused said the four people in the house were friends of his but could not tell officers their names. He said that he was only a roomer and that the house was owned by a man named Taylor.

Police said they have had the place under observation for some time. On each of the five or six occasions when they watched the house, heavy taxi traffic was seen going to and from it.

While they were there, said Constable Worrell, four telephone calls were received. Each time the party on the other end of the line wanted to know "if they were open."

One man asked if the coast was clear—if the police had been there. They were working across the river, he said. Shortly after each call was received a taxi would arrive at the door and leave three or four people.

Corroboratory evidence was given by Constables Tappenden and Stromberg. Constable Tappenden said that each of the persons in the house had a bottle of beer, which the accused admitted serving. Three of the rooms of the six-roomed house were equipped with tables, chairs, ash trays and salt shakers.

Constable Stromberg denied that the accused told police that the rooms were so equipped as the owner of the house. Taylor, was waiting for furniture.

"What did he do with the salt," asked Magistrate Atkinson after remarking that beer taverns were also equipped with salt shakers.

On the stand Mandel denied occupancy of the house. The four people drinking beer there were friends of his, he said, although he did not know their names. He said that he had lived with Taylor since last October but could not tell the court what his companion did for a living.

Mandel's counsel, Mr. LaFrance, argued that his client was not liable as he was not the tenant or the occupant of the house.

Said the Magistrate: "If this man takes possession of the beer, which he admits belonged to Taylor, and sells it, he makes himself Taylor's manager. This is purely a blind-pig."

Making the place public for a year His Worship said: "I don't suppose it will do much good. Nearly all of Mountjoy has been declared public now."

Traffic Violations
Two men paid fines of $1 and costs for making left hand turns. Magistrate Atkinson said that he soon was going to raise the penalty for that offense.

Fine of $1 and costs with the alternative of 10 days in jail was imposed on a parking law violator. Two pleaded guilty to overloading trucks and were assessed $10 and costs and another to a charge of driving with defective brakes. Penalty was the same in that case.

Pleading guilty to a charge of reckless driving, Louis Scullino was fined $10 and costs with alternative of 10 days in jail.

One Drunk Driver
Two constables and a doctor testified that John Joseph McGee was intoxicated. The constables said that he was intoxicated while in charge of a car and the doctor said that he was drunk when he later examined him. Magistrate Atkinson sentenced him to serve ten days in jail and to have his car (Continued on Page Eight)

Survey Party Travel on Skis from Milnet

Work of Survey Commenced for Sudbury - Porcupine Road.

This week a survey party from the Dept. of Highways of Ontario commenced work on the survey of the route for one of the links to complete the highway that will connect Sudbury and Timmins and a number of other new and older mining camps south of Timmins. This survey party is to make a general survey to locate the proposed road between Milnet and Westree. It is likely that this survey will be taken as the final survey for this strip of road, and the optimists hope that actual work on the actual construction of the Milnet-Westree road will be under way this winter. If this strip of road is rushed to completion, only a little repair and improvement work will be necessary to assure a passable road from Sudbury clean through to Matachewan. This being the case it is felt that work should also be started from the South Porcupine end of the road to connect up with Matachewan. If work was carried on this winter on both ends of the roads, as suggested, the long-desired and long-required Sudbury-Porcupine highway could easily be an actuality this year.

The party of nine men comprising the survey party were to leave Milnet yesterday to proceed with their work. The party includes a cook and cookey. They are to travel by ski and snowshoe, pulling their equipment on sleds. While their progress can not be as rapid as would be the case could they use motorized methods of transportation, it is expected that they will make good time in their survey work.

Looks for Good Chance for Another Tax Exemption
(Winnipeg Tribune)

Under Dominion regulations the head of a family is allowed to claim exemption on income tax of $400 for each child under 21 years of age, while under the Manitoba regulations an exemption of $500 is allowed. At the age of 21 years these exemptions are withdrawn, even though the young adult may continue to be wholly dependent upon his or her parents.

The theory upon which the regulations are based is, of course, that children who attain the age of 21 should automatically become self-supporting.

"War in The Spring"

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to Great Britain, now on holiday, told a joint meeting of the U.S. Senate military affairs committee and House of Representatives Europe will be involved in a major war this spring. He stated Mussolini's territorial ambitions would be largely responsible.

But under present day conditions that is far from being the general rule. In the first place there is a scarcity of jobs, and in the second place a much higher standard of education is required than formerly to secure a job that holds out any prospects for the future.

Many heads of families in the lower income groups complain, not unreasonably that automatic withdrawal of exemptions at the age of 21 comes at a time when their children are costing them the most to maintain.

Provincial Constable Picks Sleeper from Tracks

Provincial Constable W. Noyes, now stationed at Hearst, but formerly of Schumacher, had an unusual case recently. He received a hurry call to the effect that a Jugo-Slav settler down on the C.N.R. track some miles from Hearst, and was apparently sleeping off a "jag," despite the fact that the temperature was several degrees below zero. There was excitement over the matter because not only was the man in danger of any train that might come along, but there was also the chance of him freezing to death. Constable Noyes hurried to the scene by means of a snowplane and after considerable difficulty was able to get the man off the track and into the snowplane. At the next police court the man was fined $10 and costs, which meant a dead loss to all concerned, the only saving being the saving of the man's life.

Hon. Mr. McCrea's Forecast Made in 1932 Recalled

(From Northern Miner)

In October, 1932, Hon. Charles McCrea, K.C., then Ontario Minister of Mines, made a statement which startled the Canadian public, in predicting that this province would, within a reasonable period, produce gold to the value of $100,000,000 annually. At that time the production of gold in Ontario amounted to $50,000,000 a year and the doubling of the figure seemed fantastic to many people. It was attributed by some to the incurable optimism of the mining fraternity.

In 1938 Ontario alone produced $101,500,000 and the province's December production was at the rate of $106,000,000 a year. Moreover, there are a dozen new mines scheduled to come into production in 1939. It is established that output in the current year will make another new record.

It took only six years for Mr. McCrea's prediction to come true. Things move fast in the Canadian mining industry and pessimists should express themselves with considerable caution. On the other hand, optimists can afford to exercise their enthusiasms with good chances of having their forecasts make good.

COLLISION IN SNOW STORM

A driving snowstorm, which made Toronto roads icy and seeing difficult, was blamed for this head-on collision, in which two men were injured. A woman passenger, badly shaken up in the crash is seen huddled in the doorway of one of the badly-wrecked cars. Stanley Walker was knocked unconscious when his head struck the windshield, breaking his nose. Major Alex G. Snively received a fractured knee cap when he was pinned against the steering column.

Dust Control in Mines Dealt With in Bulletin

Progress in dust control in Ontario's mines forms the topic of paper by C. S. Gibson, ventilation engineer, the Ontario Mining Association, which appears in the January number of the Bulletin, Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

There is no doubt, Mr. Gibson notes, that the mining industry as a whole is becoming more conscious of the necessity for controlling dust dispersal. Marked progress is evident at both old and new mines, and the early consideration of the problem by the latter will undoubtedly play an important part in future reduction in the incidence of silicosis. Much good has been done by developing the facilities at hand, and by applying common sense. As a result mines are beginning to get away from the idea that they cannot afford to do anything to control dust. They are finding also that these improvements are leading to lower costs through increased efficiency and decreased mechanical upkeep, and that good conditions can be attained without harping on the hazards of silicosis.

A basic necessity of all preventive work connected with silicosis is the collection of aerial dust samples, and efforts are being made by the Association to interest more of the operators in dust sampling. This work is being accomplished by showing them enlarged photos of dust spots, by providing simplified sampling procedures, and by
