Britain's Reservists are Called up for Emergency
G. E. A. C. Monk-Mason, British consul at Mosul, Iraq, was shot to death about noon on Tuesday by a mob which rushed the consulate and burned it. Martial law was declared and the riot was stopped, but not before death and destruction had been caused. The riot was believed to have been caused by agitators who persuaded the mob that their young ruler, King Ghazi, who died in an auto accident, presumably while racing his car, was killed in some way or another by the British. The unfortunate features of the case are that King Ghazi was friendly to Britain and that Iraq is close to Palestine where there is other trouble for Britain.

SIFTING THE NEWS

By Hugh Murphy

Wedge in between Greater Germany and Soviet Russia, Poland is in a difficult and delicate situation. However it is understood today that Poland's representative in London, Colonel Josef Beck, has indicated his country's willingness to become a section in the protective circle Britain and France are trying to form around Germany.

However, there is the feeling in London that Poland alone is a rather weak segment in the circle. Britain would like to have the assurances of Rumania, Yugoslavia and Turkey that alliances with Britain and France would be welcome.

Most of all though would the British and French like some word from Russia—and that word seems to be slow in coming. However, even at present, Hitler would find it difficult to make a move without stepping on the toes of the protective pact. His entire, huge propaganda machine has been directed at Poland in the last day or so in an effort to sway public opinion there away from the Anglo-French alliance.

General effect is a sense of strain all over Europe. In a recent speech Lord Stanhope, First Lord of the British Admiralty, inadvertently let slip the information that orders had been given to man the anti-aircraft guns of the fleet. The assertion was immediately denied from Downing Street, but in terms so weak as to suggest that it was only too true.

Germany's rampaging in Central Europe has practically pushed the Sino-Japanese conflict off the front pages but it is still waging. Orientals are still dying and Japan is still edging further into the country, inch by inch.

There has been a lull in hostilities, during which the Japanese have taken the opportunity to move large numbers of troops into Manchukuo. Recently the lull ended.

The Japanese campaigned into Chekiang Province at Shanghai's unconquered back door. They penetrated into the Province of Kiangsi with the capital city of Nanchang as their objective. Nanchang was the key point on the Chekiang-Nunan Railway, China's last line of supply from the east coast. In seven days the Japs made Nanchang. They are reported to have killed 1,100 Chinese and taken 6,500 prisoners.

One of the seemingly insoluble problems facing sociologists in the United States is the feeling against the Negro. Despite American hullabaloo about "The Land of the Free" and "The Home of Democracy," anti-racial feeling against coloured people is as highly developed in some sections of the U.S. as it is against any race anywhere in the world.

A good example of that un-democratic, un-Christian feeling occurred recently in Washington. Marian Anderson, a Negro and one of the world's great contraltos, tried to engage Constitution Hall for a concert. Unfortunately Constitution Hall was owned by a super-patriotic and proud organization known as The Daughters of the American Revolution. They gave Miss Anderson to understand that so far as she was concerned the hall was permanently engaged. This despite the fact that Marian Anderson, the Philadelphia born contralto who sky-rocketed to fame at the Salzburg Music Festival in Germany four years ago, is recognized and lauded by such highly thought of musicians as Arturo Toscanini and such commentators and composers as Deems Taylor.

The Daughters of the American Revolution should read in unison the constitution of the United States. Mrs. P. D. Roosevelt apparently thought similarly as she resigned from the organization in protest.

A Gallup poll in the city of Manhattan recently showed that 14,000,000 persons have read "Gone With the Wind". It showed that of 56,500,000 people who want to see the picture now in production, only sixteen per cent were dissatisfied with glimmer actress Vivien Leigh in the part of Scarlett.

The Gallup poll might well have tried to find out how many people have no interest whatsoever in who plays the part of Scarlett, and how well she does. It might have tried to determine how many persons were thoroughly sick of the controversy over who was to get the part. It might have asked how many people will probably not go to see the picture to try in a small way to offset the value of the free publicity gained by the movie moguls.

There has been very little done in Germany with which most people can agree but Herman William Goering deserves a leather swastika for his action in banning "The Lambeth Walk" for soldiers in that country. He has decreed that soldiers in uniform must refrain from Lambeth walking. It presents a "disgraceful picture," he believes. He has even forbade air force bands to play the tune. Goering must have better taste in music than his appearance would indicate.

Injured Hip in Fall on Way Home from Church

While on her way home from church on Sunday Mrs. J. Ralph fell on the icy sidewalk and injured her hip. ### Hon. Ernest Lapointe Made His Position Very Clear

(From Toronto Telegram)
Although Hon. Ernest Lapointe's speech at Ottawa dealt largely with the fallacy of the idea that Canada could remain neutral in a war in which Britain was involved and with a re-announcement of his opposition to conscription for service overseas, his most important declaration was that in which he said that if any dictator in the world has made up his mind that the British Commonwealth is going to be disrupted he is basing his future projects on an absolute fallacy. This, together with the intimation that in any struggle in which Canada became involved she must be ready to help and do her share, marked his statement as the most important; and most timely that has yet come from the Government benches. It presents the situation in a realistic fashion rather than in the academic manner preferred by Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King.

As his leader himself had said the day before, Mr. Lapointe declared that no text of law, no resolution could stand before public opinion. It was the attitude that the people of Canada would take in the event of war that would count, legislation or no legislation. But Mr. Lapointe went further and asked whether it was seriously believed that Canadians in one section of the country could, without arousing a civil war in Canada, compel other Canadians to remain neutral and to take steps to secure neutrality against Great Britain.

In the interests of national unity it is well that this statement should have been made and that it should be understood.

Number of Death This Year High from Influenza

Toronto, April 5.—Figures released today indicate that the total number of deaths from Flu is higher than in any year since 1929. Department of Public Health records show 2,692 deaths already this year.

Physicians have warned the public repeatedly not to neglect the first symptoms of the onset of Flu. A sudden rise in temperature or chills indicate the necessity for rest in bed. And to assure prompt recovery, medical care. Pharmacists, especially in small, isolated communities where medical care is difficult to obtain promptly, have co-operated by speedy delivery of medicines prescribed by physicians. Promptness of treatment often prevents complications arising out of these illnesses, and pharmacist have been particularly alert to perform this public service.

Palliative treatment, pending arrival of a physician, rests with the household. Strict rest is essential. External heat such as plenty of coverings and hot water bottles are helpful. Also, if the patient is not vomiting, warm drinks are indicated. Isolate the patient as much as possible, in case the disease is of the communicable sort.

Broke Wrist in Fall on Icy Walk Sunday Night

While returning from church on Sunday evening, Mrs. Harry Egan had the misfortune to fall on the icy sidewalk and break her right wrist. Her hand being thrust out in effort to save herself from the fall, she fell largely on her right hand, the force of the fall breaking her wrist. Mrs. Egan is making good recovery from the injury but will be laid up for a few weeks as a consequence of the accident.
