

Leafs Meet Leading Bruins Tonight in Fourth Cup Tilt

Boston One Game Up on Stanley Cup Series. Teams Meet To-Night in Toronto. Fifth Game in Boston on Sunday. Jackson's Injury on Tuesday May Cripple Toronto Team. Was Checked Hard by Shore.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins meet in Toronto to-night for the fourth game of the Stanley Cup series. To date Boston has won two and Toronto one.

Soon after Harvey Jackson, Toronto veteran received a dislocated shoulder in the game on Tuesday night, the Bruins began popping in the goals which brought them a 3 to 1 victory over the Leafs.

The Leafs looked badly disorganized on all three scores. Gus Marker got a goal for them less than a minute from the finish on a pretty play with "Doc" Romnes, but they had regained poise too late.

Up to the turning point the teams had battled from end to end in quick rushes with smart defensive work that didn't dull the action in the least. Jackson, one of the game's stars, was heading down the left side in a typical rush when old Eddie Shore shook him with a terrific bodycheck. Jackson left the ice in pain as Marker picked up the puck and whipped it into Goalie Frank Brimsek's pads.

That was the last dangerous Leaf rush for a long while. "Bingo" Kampman of the Leafs and Conacher and Shore of the Bruins drew the game's first three penalties almost immediately, but the demoralized Leafs couldn't make their power play work despite the one-man advantage.

Shore had just returned in the third when Bauer took the puck from his pivot man, Milt Schmidt, and struggled along the right boards. Nick Metz seemed ready to check him when Bauer wheeled around and was left with a clear path to the goal. Instead of going in, Bauer whacked a quick shot from the side that caught Broda off guard and bounced into the net from his right knee.

"That's the third left wingman we must do without," Smythe said. "George Parsons is out with an eye injury and 'Buzz' Boll with a bad knee. Some of our younger players will practice to-day and we'll decide then who will take Jackson's place." The Leaf manager gave no indication of who would replace Jackson, but it was believed "Red" Heron would get the call. He finished the season on the Leafs' International-American League farm club at Syracuse.

In the seven minutes between the Bauer goal and Conacher's, Broda held up the Leafs when Bruin forwards sped away frequently from fruitless Toronto attacks. Then the Toronto goalie left his cage to try to break up a Conacher-Bill Cowley play, and Conacher merely pushed the rebound of his shot into the open net.

Together Cowley and Conacher made the play that Crawford converted into the third score on a breakaway from the gangling Leafs. Conacher brought Broda to the ice, and Crawford flipped the rubber home. Conacher and Crawford are Toronto natives. Both went pro from Gold Belt amateur leur ranks Conacher from Wright Hargreaves and Crawford from Lake Shore Romnes, who scored the winning goal when Toronto evened the series at Boston Sunday, made a picture play for the Leaf goal this time. He cut through the defence and pulled Brimsek aside, then laid the disc on Marker's stick.

To Have Curling at McIntyre

Arena to be Open for Skating Until April 23rd. Then a Whole Week's Curling.

The McIntyre Community arena will be open for skating until April 23rd.—thanks to the fact that the ice is made by the artificial ice-making equipment installed in the building when it was erected. After April 23rd the ice surface will be marked off for curling—thanks again to artificial ice. Curling will go on for entire week of April 23rd, closing on April 30th.

SIFTING THE NEWS

By Hugh Murphy

The government of the Netherlands is taking extraordinary military precautions to protect its frontiers on Germany against the danger of a sudden military incursion. It has long been held that, if Hitler contemplated western expansion his first drive would be through that, the weakest, frontier facing Germany.

Fortifications between France and Germany have been developed to such an extent that it would be almost impossible for Hitler to penetrate suddenly. The Belgian frontier, unlike 1914, is this time well armed. Forts and pillboxes are manned, bridges are mined and a new canal is a strong line of defence.

The Netherland plan of defence in the event of a sudden swoop of German motorized units on the border would be inundation of the whole area by means of blowing up the dikes. That, however, would take time. Roads and bridges have been mined.

The Dutch are nervous since information has been received that Germany is concentrating troops on its frontier.

Sir John Boyd Orr, in a recent interview with Montreal newspapermen, said that candy spoils the appetite of children and keeps them from eating the "protective" foods necessary for proper physical development.

The "protective" foods, said Sir John, who is in Canada from Aberdeen, Scotland, to deliver an address under the auspices of the Canadian Medical Association, are milk, fruits, vegetables, meat, liver and eggs.

Well that is one way of saying what little Johnny's mother, who is not a diet specialist, says daily: "Johnny, don't eat that candy until after lunch. You will spoil your appetite."

Whiskers and big moustaches were seen as a partial preventative against silicosis by the Air Hygiene Foundation, a branch of the Mellon Institute at Pittsburgh. A recent release says: "An English source reports that stonecutters erecting huge masonry structures in Great Britain were examined for silicosis. It was found: (1) that the clean shaven men suffered by far the most; (2) that men with strong moustaches fared much better; (3) that men with full, bushy beards and moustaches were practically immune, the reason being obvious that the moisture of the breath, combined with the air formed a most efficient respirator (strainer) and one that the men could not take off."

The recent outbreak of goldfish eating in American college is seen by psychologists as nothing more nor less than exhibitionism, or the desire to show off. The eater of goldfish takes delight in the repulsiveness of his act and in the amazement of his fellow students and the general public.

It all began one night last month when a collegian, Lothrop Withington, by name, swallowed a gold fish on a bet of $10. The raze gathered momentum and the latest record is held by Joseph Deliberato, of Clark University, who deliberately ate 89 live fish.

Well, it is one way to get your picture in the papers.

Major Vernon Bartlett, M.P., offered a "peace formula" to the British House of Commons recently. "We shall not be able to enjoy ourselves until Franco's widow tells Stalin on his deathbed that Hitler has been assassinated at Mussolini's funeral."

Adjacent headings in a recent issue of a Toronto paper: "Finds School Best Weapon of Democracy" and "Boys Under 16 May Get Right to Quit School."

Feeling in the United States against Germany as expressed by government, press and people seems to be becoming almost hysterical. American disapproval of the National Socialism is venting itself, not on the system of government, but on the controlling personalities in that government. One cannot pick up even a conservative American publication without reading the most vicious diatribes against the three personifications of Nazism—Hitler, Goering and Goebbels.

Disapproval of Germany and her actions is prevalent in England but in a more quiet way. The British say in effect to Germany: "We don't like you," and let it go at that. They do not indulge in the personal vilification so popular in the States—at least not to the same extent.

There is a theory, recently advanced, that if war comes, it will not be Britain which will be a major cause, but the United States. It is a fact that Uncle Sam is becoming increasingly peremptory and uncompromising in his attitude towards Germany. Public opinion in America is being worked up to such a stage that it soon may have to have an outlet.

And yet despite public feeling, the American government refuses to commit itself to any formal alliance with nations which are forming a bloc to try and encircle Germany with a protective circle. The vacillating attitude of the United States has placed Britain in a delicate spot. If Britain was sure that the United States would be a definite ally in the event of war she would probably have adopted a more uncompromising attitude with the Third Reich long ago—and possibly have averted the rape of Czechoslovakia.

OSHAWA TAKES GAME LEAD IN MEMORIAL CUP FINALS

A 12 to 4 victory last night gave Oshawa a one game edge in the finals for the Memorial hockey cup. Oshawa has won two games of the best out of five series.

Jack Miner Saved Wild Goose and Duck

Work of His Sanctuary Deserving of Support.

The following is an editorial published recently in the 200 weekly newspapers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia served by the Winnipeg Newspaper Union:

A Worthy Objective
There are few Canadians who have not heard something of the work and achievements of Jack Miner, Canada's pioneer game conservationist, and thousands of Americans as well as Canadians have this grizzled nature lover to thank for the opportunities they now enjoy in both countries in hunting such noble birds as the Canada goose and other species of wild fowl which might today be extinct had it not been for the path blazed by Jack Miner over a quarter of a century ago.

While Jack Miner has become almost an international figure on this continent during that period and the fame of his home and bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, have spread far and wide, it is not so well known that further assistance than he is now getting is necessary if the institution which he has founded and operated so successfully for so many years is to be preserved to posterity and future generations are to be ensured an opportunity of visiting one of the foremost of this continent's assets.

The sanctuary which he established as far back as 1904 has served as a breeding ground for wild fowl in increasing numbers ever since and as a result has provided a breeding ground for birds for sportsmen in both Canada and the United States. In other words this haven has been for years and still is a source of supply of breeding stock, the overflow from which today enables large numbers to enjoy a sport which would otherwise have vanished ere this time.

As a result of Jack Miner's system of tagging the birds which have gratefully accepted his hospitality, ever since 1909, he has a great deal of data available to support his contention that his refuge has been and still is a source of supply for the entire continent.

A Fount of Inspiration
One of the greatest benefits which have been derived on both sides of the international boundary as a result of Jack Miner's work and his lectures has been the awakening of public consciousness to the value and importance of wild life as an asset to both Canada and the United States and of its importance as a stimulus to tourist traffic.

The efforts of this 73-year-old pioneer conservationist have, since he commenced his work, served as an inspiration to individual citizens, sportsmen's organizations and other groups as well as federal and local governments on both sides of the line to "go and do likewise." As a result in more recent years a chain of bird refuges and sanctuaries patterned after the famous Jack Miner sanctuary have been established throughout the United States, and in Canada thousands of acres have been set aside and developed for a similar purpose. Without these, and back of them the inspiration initiated by Jack Miner many of the best species of waterfowl would have suffered the fate of the carrier pigeon which were slaughtered in earlier days with an abandoned ruthlessness that staggered the world.

Were it not for insistent public demand, largely aroused by Jack Miner's unselfish devotion of a life-time to a conservation program, the laws which have been placed on the statute books of legislatures and parliaments in both countries would never have been enacted nor would the agreement between the two countries which has afforded additional protection to migratory birds have been implemented, or if it had been, it would not have been effective.

Aid Is Needed
Jack Miner, though still well and active, has already passed the allotted span of mankind, but to what extent the work that he has done will be continued and the memorial which he has erected to bird life will be perpetuated, is not at all certain, unless those who are interested in preserving such a valuable asset and have the means, rally to the cause in a tangible fashion.

The Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation has been incorporated in Michigan as well as in Ontario by a special act of Parliament with the hope of raising a trust fund to endow and perpetuate Jack Miner's home and bird sanctuary so that this valuable enterprise will be able to carry on after Mr. Miner has passed on.

One can only hope that many wealthy Americans who, as sportsmen and bird lovers, have derived so much benefit from Jack Miner's achievements and who are interested in establishing natural parks for humanity will give some consideration to this important project. Museums for the display of dead specimens have been endowed by wealthy men and undoubtedly have their place in the scheme of things, but how much greater value it would be to perpetuate an institution like Jack Miner's which has as its worthy objective the preservation and propagation of living wild life, a source of joy and pleasure not only to those who are living today, but for countless generations in the future.

Power Takes Lead in Commercial Bowling

Electricians Have One-point Lead Over Gambles.

In the Commercial bowling league on Monday the Power took the lead from Gambles by a one point margin by downing the T. & N. O. three points to one.

The Advance on the other hand gave the electricians a helping hand by taking the league leaders by the same margin and making the race close.

It is impossible for the printers to catch the leaders, as only two more games remain, but anything can happen with the remaining teams.

Seven men reached the honour roll last Monday but no seven hundred scores.

Salomaa and McQuarrie, Power, 654 and 602; P. Nicolson and J. Tait, Gambles, 651 and 624; A. Guidice and G. Wallingford, Advance, 629 and 617.

C. Armstrong, T. & N. O., 609.
The standing of the teams: Power, 10; Gambles, 9; T. & N. O., 8; and Advance, 5.

There is an old saying, "Children should be seen and not heard." Last Monday, in the first game, the child was not heard; in the second, you could not hear yourself speak; yes! he ran up a score of 320, but Lo! like the gentleman from the south he finished with a score of 609. Better stay on your own side of the ship after this.

Why the change from Elmer to

Oscar, Teddy? It's a bit complicated, but the boys would like to get things straightened out.

What's the matter, Art? The dart throwing competition all over?

There is still one electrician who sticks by his alibi about the alleys, but Alfie thinks it is all phooey, and he should know; he throws the same kind of a ball.

Here is a tip for next season from Eric:—Go curling; it gives you control.

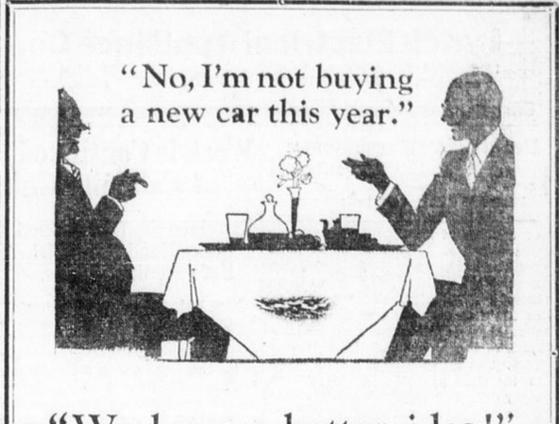

There is one good auxiliary man that the league should be proud of. He bowls for two teams in the league and our hats are off to you Herman, not to mention the electricians for their generosity.

Well, it looks as though the printers are going to make the rest of the teams step for the leadership.

They got into their stride on Monday, the only drawback is that they will be minus Alfie for the next two weeks.

All eyes are on that beautiful trophy the bowling alley is donating for the winners of the different leagues' play-offs.

"We have a better idea!"

"Marie and I figured it out. We've decided that the money we'd spend for a new car would make a good down payment on having a house built. Then the rent we're paying for our present place will take care of the monthly payments without our having to put up an extra cent. It sure is worth getting along with the old car for another year to have our own home. Just think of it! In a few years our home will be completely paid for. Then we'll be able to get a new car every year or have money to spare for other things.

"Owning your own home is a lot easier than you think with the help of the government National Housing Act. Hill-Clark-Francis will tell you all about it. They're working on the plans for my house now. Man! I can hardly wait... den of my own... model kitchen for Marie... our own garden... and it won't cost any more than rent, yet will be ALL OUR OWN."

Bowl Along

If You've Always Wanted a Home of Your Own yet feel that you can't afford it, call in and let's talk it over. It's surprising what can be done on limited means with the help of government loans.
