A grandmother says a fond farewell to her son as he, with his wife sails for a land across the seas, where millions wait to welcome them. The son's two children stay behind with their grandmother. The grandmother is Queen Mary. Her son is the King and his wife the Queen. Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose are the two children. A typical British family.

SIFTING THE NEWS

By Hugh Murphy

About every second day the newspapers announce that negotiations between Russia and Great Britain and France for an anti-aggression entente against Germany, are nearing successful completion. However, careful reading of the despatches beneath the headlines is not so conducive to optimism.

Russia is apparently proving very difficult. In return for her support she wants the definite promise of assistance in case of invasion from Japan or any other nation. Britain is prepared to assist in case of western invasion but not at all willing to tie herself down to a promise of help in the far east.

On May 22 a conference is being held in Geneva. Britain will probably make a last effort then to draw Russia into the anti-aggression bloc without promising too much for herself and France.

Revision of the itinerary of the King and Queen on their visit to Canada is expected to have repercussions. In fact there is a great deal of dissatisfaction all over the country. Revision cut the Royal visit in Kingston from seven or eight hours to 35 minutes—and Kingston is mad. Feeling all over is that Ottawa is getting three days of the Royal visit. Two, at the most, would have been enough is the contention.

Feeling in Toronto is that the visit to that city is too short in view of the population. This camp and the gold area feels slighted that such a wealth producing and colourful section should have been so entirely overlooked.

Western Canadian towns are irked because not even brief stop-overs have been allowed for. Feeling is that the whole itinerary is badly balanced and predictions are that Premier Mackenzie King is likely to be the head upon which the vials of the public anger is poured.

Free City. Poland would have to intervene, and technically, be in the wrong having struck the first blow Germany would then move in to protect the German minority. Meanwhile a campaign of propaganda has been instituted to cut Danzig's ties with Poland and make the populace more than ever sympathetic to the German National Socialist State.

For twenty years the Arabs and the Jews have been quarrelling about primary rights in Palestine. Round table conferences have been held but to no avail. Britain, which has large interests in the country and which has been acting as mediator, has evolved a new plan.

Under the British government's Palestine plan, the details of which were published yesterday a state of Palestine will be created. It will be sixty per cent Arab and forty per cent Jewish. To maintain that proportionate percentage Jewish immigration in the next five years will be limited to 75,000.

The Jews have protested and will continue to do so. A twenty-four hour strike of Jews is scheduled for today. Strongly organized Jewish groups are prepared to go to great lengths to maintain the supremacy of their race in the Holy Land. A manifesto of an organization known as "Fighters for Liberty and the Homeland" declared: "If the British government continues this policy of destroying the Jewish national home, we will unsheath our swords."

Telesio Interlandi writes in a Fascist paper published in Rome. His delicacy of style and elegance in his choice of language is indicated in the following bit published after Mussolini's recent France-baiting speech: "We spit in the faces of the French. And taking everything into account the spit of an Italian is worth more than the Frenchman for whom it is destined; in fact the whole French Republic isn't worth much Italian spit."

Mr. Interlandi is apparently overlaid with saliva. On a former occasion, when Anthony Eden proposed sanctions against Italy, Mr. Interlandi wrote with his customary finesse: "We spit on Mr. Eden, exponent of an old-fashioned and arid European diplomacy. We spit contemptuously on the British lion."

Whatever else Mr. Interlandi is he certainly is not arid. Hendrik Willem Van Loon has announced that he has given up writing about European politics. It is about time. He was noted more for his use of vituperation than the accuracy of his predictions. His forte was abuse of Britain. Rather than reasoned, careful criticism he preferred to water his despatches with personal vindictiveness. Journalism will not mourn his loss.

Take Pete Nicolson on Tuesday! He turned in his worst game for many seasons—five blows, the most he gets in a season. Even Smoky has got to get six hundred, and yet the boys lead with 165 pins.

How about pulling the rag, George! And get in there!

Looking over the score sheets, a first class team could be sent from here to represent Northern Ontario in the Canadian tournament.

Well, boys, that trophy looks good; and our own to be fought, afterwards, so let's make it a real night, by getting behind the boys tomorrow night and make our old friend Jack who is in Blighty feel proud, so get out and win it. If the boys are not there in person they will be in spirit.

Owing to an unfortunate accident Monday your scribe has been unable to make an appearance, but will be on the job tomorrow.
