

Lunch Enjoyed on Big Holland America Liner

Delicious Dutch Dishes Were Served on the Elegant Steamship. Miss Edith M. Barber Interviewed the Chef and Came Away With Two Prized Recipes.

There is nothing so tantalizing as to see friends off on an ocean liner. How much we always wish that we were staying on board! The other day, however, I was allowed at least a taste of a voyage when I lunched on the beautiful Holland-America steamship, the Nieuw Amsterdam. You have all read the descriptions of the appointments and the decorations.

I can now tell you that as one would expect from a nation famous for cleanliness, the kitchens are models from that standpoint and also equipped with the very latest devices to make service efficient and fast.

For the luncheon itself, we had course after course of delicious food. If you have ever been in Holland, you know that you could never get up from a table hungry. The menu was in French, but there was an individual Hollandish touch to some of the dishes. Just to make you hungry, I will tell you in English what was served to us. First came large golden eggs of caviar, followed by a consommé and a fish with pastry crescents so light and feathery. For the main course, there was chicken with a sauce to dream about, tiny crisp potato balls and string beans. We were then offered a platter of the finest cheese. The dessert was a combination of frozen whipped cream, spun sugar and fresh strawberries, with a variety of the delicate cookies for which Holland is famous. The recipes which I am giving you today were given to me the chef. Appropriate wines were served throughout the meal, with champagne at the close, according to the continental custom.

Beauty and You

Various Ways of Softening Hard Water

If the water you use for your skin, is not as soft as it should be, there are various methods of softening it.

Borax soothes greasy skins and is slightly antiseptic. It should be added in the proportion of one teaspoonful to a pint of water, or two teaspoonfuls to a small basin should be sufficient.

Glycerin also tends to soften water and smooth, protect and moisten the skin but it must be diluted one teaspoonful to a pint of water. Undiluted glycerin is very irritating to the skin so never use it that way.

Rain water, caught in a pail, boiled and strained through a cloth, is excellent to keep on hand for shampoos and face washings, if you wish to have a nice complexion. Bottle it in large gallon containers and use it as you need it.

Toilet vinegars serve as mild astringents and when they are added to washing water they ease face redness, if that is one of your skin problems. Very greasy and sluggish skins are aided by being washed in distilled water to which has been added a few drops of fluid extract of rose, lavender or orange, which you may buy at a good chemist's or drug store.

For Baths
Of course there are many well prepared water softeners for the bath available and as they are usually nicely scented, they are well worth the money you spend on them. Bath salts, and oils, bubble baths, effervescent tablets and fragrant powders are all widely used. They range in price from twenty-five cents to as high as ten dollars—depending upon the quality of essence used in them.

But if your beauty budget does not permit bath water luxuries, you may soften the water with borax, a bit of perfumed ammonia, occasionally a five-cent box of ordinary household baking soda with borax, bath starch, or oatmeal bags which you may prepare yourself if you wish to go to the trouble!

Hard Water Soap

Then there are some splendid hard water soaps. Frequently the "sea soaps" lather nicely in hard water.

Of course very sensitive skinned women should most certainly either soften their bathing water well, or catch rain water in which to bathe. Before it enters the ground, rain water is delightfully soft and our great grandmothers who had "rain barrels" also had lovely complexions!

Business Girls Plan to Hold Events in Summer

The regular meeting of the Porcupine Business Girls' Club was held on Thursday, June 1st, at the home of Miss Janet Lucas, 61 Way avenue.

The chest the girls have been working on, and which is displayed in Simpson's window, is to be drawn on Saturday June 10th, at a bazaar and tea to be held from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m. at Bergeron's dancing studio, Fourth avenue. There will also be a sale of homebaking at the bazaar.

Members of the club are still endeavouring to get suitable clubrooms, but have not met with success as yet. It was mentioned at the meeting that the club will soon cease activities for the season, and the members decided to get together once a month during the summer, to hold a hike or picnic or other interesting get-togethers, so that contact between members will not be lost during the summer months.

A special meeting will be held on Thursday, June 8th, at which ticket returns are to be brought in and articles for the bazaar are to be ticketed. It was decided that members of the club who are not working on the afternoon of Saturday, June 10th, will preside at the bazaar and tea.

After the business of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

No Shortage of Souvenir Coins Here

Timmins Banks Can Supply all Special Silver Dollars Required.

The impression has gone abroad that it has not been possible to secure at Timmins banks the silver dollars issued as a souvenir of the visit to Canada of the King and Queen. An article printed in The Advance on Thursday last from The Globe and Mail left the impression that Timmins people had sought to secure these special dollars but had found that the banks did not have supply to meet the demand. This is not the fact.

Mr. W. S. Jamieson, manager of the Timmins branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and president of the Porcupine Bankers Association, explained to The Advance last week that anyone desiring the special issue of Canadian dollar pieces could secure the same from any of the Timmins bank branches. In the first few days after the coins were available here there was a great rush for them. Over 1200 of them were sold in a day or two in Timmins, and some banks had no further supply of the coins but others had a few left. New orders were sent in to Toronto, and the banks here are ready to supply all requirements in this line. Even when there were none of the coins ready here the banks were all ready to order any quantities and to have them here in a couple of days. Anyone may have as many of these dollar pieces as they want and are able to pay for. If necessary the banks will order any extras required, the coins to be here by return mail. Toronto has a large supply and is ready to send on here any quantities desired. Mr. Jamieson assured The Advance that anyone wishing any reasonable quantity of the special coins will be supplied at once, while those wishing large numbers will be accommodated so far as
