SIFTING THE NEWS

By Hugh Murphy

Observers of the European scene say that Poland is not afraid of war; that the Poles are not an easily terrified people and that they have tremendous confidence in their army—the fourth largest in Europe with a peacetime strength of 300,000 men and 2,000,000 trained reservists. Recently, before Sir Edmund Ironside, British Inspector General of Overseas Forces, this newest ally of Great Britain paraded its strength and revealed its weaknesses.

Thirty divisions of infantry comprise one of the toughest and most hard-bitten forces of men on the continent. Of peasant stock, they can march 40 miles a day with full equipment. Chief weakness in the infantry was seen to be lack of modern arms.

The Polish army has the highest percentage of horsed troops in the world. There are no fully mechanized divisions (there are only 25,000 motor vehicles in the entire country) but the Poles consider their horsemen among the finest and best mounted troops in the world, ideal for rapid operation on their roadless plains.

In a duel with shells the German army would have an immense advantage over Polish troops. Of 41 regiments of field artillery there is only one of heavy guns.

There are 1,200 light and medium tanks plus 700 armoured cars in the army but few of the heavily armoured land battleships, which, experts consider, will be so necessary in future conflict.

An integral part of the army and primarily designed to co-operate with it, the air force has a total strength of about 2,000 planes of which only about 25 per cent are bombers—compared with 60 per cent in the German air force.

The Poles have slowly been moving munitions industries from a point directly bordering on the German Reich to a central industrial region called the Z.O.P., 125 miles from the German frontier. In that area they have constructed a great armament centre, which, if it not menaced by Germany from Slovakia on the south, could produce arms in great quantities and with speed.

When Prime Minister Mackenzie King was banqueted in the Royal York in Toronto on Tuesday night to celebrate his 20th anniversary as Liberal party leader, the temperature was around ninety degrees.

So, as the result, formality in dress was confined to the main dining room where the Prime Minister sat. In other sections of the hotel, where the overflow was being taken care of, men wore comfortable dress lounge suits and women in whatever women wear when they are comfortable.

It would have been a nice gesture to have allowed the Liberal Lader to open the collar of his stiff white shirt, drape his tail coat over the back of his chair and really enjoy himself. He has been the guest of honour at banquets for many years and has always been expected to do so for the occasion—and that usually

Timmins Described As Healthful Town By Medical Officer

Says Preventative Medicine Taken Great Strides Here in Past Few Years. Advocates Further Reforms

Timmins was described as one of the healthful towns in the country, by Dr. J. A. McInnis, Medical officer of Health, who spoke on Monday at the regular luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club.

Preventative medicine had taken great strides in Timmins during the past few years, said the speaker. It had reached a development in Timmins qualified in few other Canadian towns. This municipality had one of the lowest infantile mortality rates in the country in proportion to the number of children here.

Taking the population at roughly 26,000 people, the speaker estimated the number attending primary schools at close to 5,000.

Sanitation was being improved here particularly in the last couple of years. If the council followed the recommendations of the Board of Health, namely that sewer connection installation be made compulsory when a house was built, it would further improve.

There were 160 tonsil operations last year, said Dr. McInnis and so far this year there were more than 100. The Medical Health officer thanked the Kiwanis and other service clubs for their assistance in contributing towards the cost of the operations.

There were about 300 cases of scarlet fever here this year, said the speaker, but they were of a very mild type. Due to the fact that some people were negligent about observing quarantine rules it was more difficult to control the spread of the epidemic and others like it, such as measles.

Timmins had gone far in control of social diseases and this centre was as advanced as any in the province, although such control was extremely difficult matter.

Dr. McInnis said that the public health nursing department was greatly understaffed. One nurse was needed for every three or four thousand people and the department had only three.

Recommendations made by the Medical Health officer were that a filtration plant be installed to further purify the water used by the people of Timmins; that parks be established in various places throughout the town and that a slaughter house be built in the vicinity.

Dr. McInnis was introduced by W. O. Langdon, Fritz Woodbury thanked him on behalf of the club. Visitors were Rev. E. Gilmour Smith formerly of Cobalt, and now of Timmins Dr. J. W. R. Byers, formerly of Schumacher and now of Toronto and Dr. McInnis, A. F. McDowell presided and Fritz Woodbury led the singing.
