Dead Man at Rouyn Wrongly Identified as Timmins Man

Body Found in Lake Thought to Have Been that of Elmer Lisberg

NORANDA, Aug. 9.—An extraordinary case of mistaken identity nearly resulted in a still unidentified man being buried as Elmer Lisberg, formerly of this town, an employee of the Noranda Mines Limited, and now employed by the Harnden Welding Works, in Timmins.

A description was published last week of a man whose body had been found floating on the waters of Lac Dalembert on July 29, in the hopes that friends would help in identifying him. Citizens of the twin towns were urged to view the body, so as to assist police in clearing up the mystery, and while, on Saturday afternoon, it was believed that their investigations were at an end, they are now more befogged than ever.

Identified by Five

Five persons (two women and three men) communicated with police headquarters, telling them that they had recognized the deceased man as being Elmer Lisberg. One of the women had attended to his laundry and claimed to recognize the clothes he was wearing—shirt, suit, sweater and tie, and remarked on the fact that this man was wearing heavy weight underwear, a habit of Lisberg's, who never wears summer weight clothing.

While the face of the man found, (who had according to doctors' opinions been in the water for nearly a month) was barely recognizable, there were certain peculiarities which appeared to be convincing evidence that this man was Lisberg—he had had a broken nose—had a scar on one foot—had the same number of gold teeth—and hair of a similar color.

The place and apparent time of the man's death also fitted in the picture. Lisberg had left the Noranda Mines the end of June and this man, according to medical opinion and the length of time since he was discovered must have been dead since the early days of July. As Lisberg was in the habit of spending his vacations camping at Lake Dalembert, there seemed little doubt in the minds of anybody.

However, knowing that Lisberg was supposed to have gone to Timmins, provincial police authorities communicated with the chief of police of that town, relating the circumstances and asking if anything was known of him. They received the surprising reply that the chief himself had been speaking with Elmer that very afternoon.

Later in the day two of his friends from Noranda, Kenneth McCaghy and Harry Dower got him on long distance and assured themselves that he was verily alive. So now mystery still shrouds the identity of the unfortunate man who met his death in a lonely lake, some twelve miles from Noranda, on the Macamic road. The lake is 400 feet off the highway.

Dr. J. E. Bertrand, coroner of Macamic, notified that the man found in his territory had been identified, came to Noranda on Saturday night to hold an inquest, only to be confronted by a baffling mystery. For the past ten days police have followed up every possible clue. One was provided by a handkerchief found in the man's pocket, bearing a name in marking ink. But it was found that the former owner of the handkerchief was still alive and unable to offer any suggestion as to how the dead man became possessed of it. A receipt book, on his person, containing claim numbers was thought to be a clue, but on investigation it was found that the claims belonged to another party, who was likewise unable to explain the fact that this man had the numbers. No boat was found on the lake in the vicinity when the body was discovered, but as there is a fairly strong current on the lake, and apparently some time had elapsed, a boat would probably have been washed ashore some considerable time before.

Second "Death Report"
As a last resort provincials have sent fingerprints, to R.C.M.P. headquarters, in the hope that at some time during his life he may have been fingerprinted. It is hoped to be able to hold an inquest this evening.

Friends of Mr. Lisberg were relieved to hear of his being alive. He had a large circle of friends in Noranda, where he had been employed for a number of years. This is the second time that his death has been reported. Some years ago his mother, who resides in her native Denmark, sent a cable to Col. Bent, saying that she had been informed of her son's death, and asking for confirmation and details, but was informed that there was no truth in the report.

Bouquet for Queen Said to be "Costly" at Sudbury

Sudbury, Aug. 9.—Both the florist who secured the bouquet and the Sudbury council asked to pay for it, apparently are agreed that the bouquet presented to Her Majesty the Queen at the time of the recent royal visit was a "costly" affair. The price said by the florist seemed to be a stiff one, while the Sudbury city council thought the price asked by the florist was a little on the high side.

Deploring that all he got for his efforts was a severe case of poison ivy, W. D. Murray, local florist, disagreed with Sudbury City Council, which contended $30 was too much to charge for the bouquet of orchids tendered Her Majesty here during the Royal visit.

City Council had written the florist that they were "amazed" at the price. In a letter read to City Council, Mr. Murray disagreed. Noting that the bouquet contained seventy-five orchid blooms and "scores of blooms of three other varieties," Florist Murray reckoned the flowers were worth $30. Considering labour, overhead and other expenses, he thought himself "decidedly in the hole."

Referring to prices charged by florists in Montreal and Quebec, Mr. Murray wrote: "the writer feels he spent much more effort than any of them and all he received so far was a very serious attack of poison ivy, which totally incapacitated him for an entire week and partially for two weeks more."

Unusual Working of the Jury System in This Case

The following is from the book, "Off the Record," by Humphrey C. Harrington, barrister and solicitor:

Only a few months had elapsed after my graduation from Law School and admission to the Bar. My first trial away from my home city took me to a small village to defend a client charged with assault and battery. The case was submitted to a pick-up jury from the streets of the small town. A typical village Justice of the Peace presided at the hearing. My client, like myself, was a total stranger to all present at the trial, as well as to the natives of the village. My opposing Counsel was a very mature attorney and obviously a much-acquainted native of the village.

My lengthy closing argument to the jury included every contention of defense which I could remember from my class-room studies. I thus placed the fate of my defendant client in the hands of his denim-clad peers. My opposing Counsel then arose with the remark to the jury:

"Gentlemen of the jury, we don't need this young white-collared Whipper-Whipper, Harrington, to come down here and tell us what the law is. You have heard this city fellow, Harrington, tell us about the rule in Shelley's case, or whatever it was he was talking about. He was just beatin' around the bush instead of explainin' why my client got a beating." This orator, Harrington, should find out that ain't the law in this town."

So, on and on he went, telling the jury more and more of the shortcomings of Harrington, the defendant's attorney. The jury retired and on their return within a few minutes produced its verdict.

"The constable will read the verdict of the jury," ordered the presiding Justice of the dingy court. The verdict read:

"We the Jury, find the defendant, Harrington, guilty as charged."

The late Mrs. Brown was born in England, and was thirty-five years of age. She had been a popular and respected citizen of Timmins for the past twelve years, and her many friends here extend their sympathy to Mr. Brown and their one daughter in their loss. B'Nai Brith Picnic Held at Culver Park on Sunday

Timmins and Kirkland Lake Lodges Hold Joint Event

Kirkland Lake, August 9.—Kirkland Lake Lodge of the B'Nai Brith association and the Timmins Lodge held a picnic at Culver Park on Sunday, with a large attendance from these two centres and other Northern Ontario communities.

The Kirkland Lake Lodge was successful in retaining the Charles Pierce (Timmins) Trophy, which was put up for annual competition between the two clubs and which was won by the local club last year.

This award goes to the association winning the most points in the three major events of the annual joint picnic. These events this year were a baseball game, a quiz contest and a relay story.

The Kirklanders won the ball game by a score of 21 to 17 and the quiz contest by a margin of 50 points. The Timmins club won the relay race. Members of the Timmins quiz team were Dr. Jesse Scholes, Herman Moscoe and Emil Brown and the members of the winning team were Henry Montagnes, Harry Moscoe, brother of the Timmins opponent, and William Harold.

There were races for children and grown-ups which provided keen competition. Valuable prizes went to the winners. The children, especially, enjoyed these races.

The committee in charge of the picnic was headed by Dr. Harry Magder who had a large staff of assistants with which to carry off the successful event. The festivities lasted from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until the early hours of Monday morning as the affair wound up with a dance commencing after midnight. Next year, the picnic will be held at Timmins.
