Successful Plan for Conservation of the Youth of the Day
 Canada Might Well Pattern After the U.S.A. Model.

Literally for years past The Advance has been urging the adoption by the Dominion Government of some plan whereby the youth of the country would have employment at living rate. It has been argued that Canada needs roads, forest conservation, public works of various kinds. These should be undertaken now while the great problem of the day is unemployment. When the Bennett government was approached in the matter, the reply of at least one Cabinet minister was:—"Why, it would cost $150,000,000 to do that." Well, many times that figure has been spent on direct relief, and the need remains today, with general morale lowered, and nothing to show for all the money spent. If the money—half the money—spent on relief had been used in ways to create employment, the country at least would have had the advantage of possessing more roads, more public works, more public utilities is approached in regard to the unemployment question, there does not appear to be interest enough to prompt any kind of answer.

Some unofficial replies have suggested that the plan of creating employment has not been a success. The facts do not appear to substantiate this suggestion. An editorial in The Ottawa Journal last night in this connection is well worth consideration. It suggests that in every way the United States plan has been gloriously well worth while—worth much more than it has cost. Here is The Journal's editorial in full:—
 Canada Might Have Tried This
 "Over in the United States they have just put out a report on their Civilian Conservation Corps, known as the CCC. The CCC is an organization which takes young single men to camps, puts them to work on national projects.
 "This report, covering the activities of six years, is an extraordinary one. Collier's weekly summarizes its highlights. Thus:—Nearly two billion trees planted... 104,000 miles of truck trails or minor roads built... 71,692 miles of telephone lines strung... 45,000 buildings put up... 40,000 bridges... 5,000,000 flood control check dams installed... 16,000,000 rods of fence constructed... 20,064 springs, wells, water holes and small reservoirs developed... fire hazards reduced on about 2,000,000 acres of land... soil-conservation work of various kinds performed on 13,000,000 acres of farm and grazing lands... help to farmers all over the country in gully control, terrace construction, tree planting and other kinds of soil-binding works.
 "But this work, stupendous as it is, wasn't all. The real great achievement of the CCC camps was that they saved 2,500,000 young Americans from the worst corruptions of the depression; took them from idleness and demoralization in the streets and on the highways, gave them human dignity and a future. Finally, the CCC took $500,000,000 from the pay of these young men and sent it to their families—thus reducing the "dole" and relieving bills and helping young men and national needs at one and the same time.

"Does any fair or sensible person believe that we here in Canada could not have done something of this kind? That, in a limited way at any rate, we could not have taken tens of thousands of our young men out of idleness and peril of decay and given them self-respecting and helpful work? Only one answer comes.
 "The real indictment of the present Dominion Government is that it has been either impotent or unwilling to tackle the youth unemployment problem in any vigorous, effective way. Instead of a well-planned, energetic, decisive policy, it has produced nothing but half-measures, nothing that showed any real appreciation of the character of the thing to be solved. We have had tinkering and talk, and we have had apologies and excuses; we have never had anything like action.

"Nor is action from this Government to be expected now. Governments act only in their youth. If they fail in their first years of office, hardly one chance in a hundred exists that they will act vigorously or successfully in their decline. What the record tells, indeed, is that governments, left in office too long, become remote from national needs and national thought, lose their enthusiasm, often lose their capacity to act. They become tired, indifferent, stale."

Haileybury to Try Out the Town Manager Plan

Haileybury, Aug. 17. (Special to The Advance)—First municipality in the North Country to adopt the town manager plan, Haileybury is going to give the system a trial in a modified form, according to a unanimous decision reached at the August meeting of the civic council, held this week. The change in the administrative system, as outlined at the council, provides that Town Clerk H. B. Briden will assume the duties of manager, combining these with his present work, and there will be no increase in salary until the experimental stage has been passed. The plan will be effective at the end of the present month.

Mr. Briden told council he was willing to try out the plan, adopted after considerable study had been given to its workings in other centres and after consultation with A. E. Horton, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs for Ontario, who was in the district recently. Mr. Horton told members of council who met him the town manager system was not yet widely adopted in the province, but that where it was in operation it had been working out well. In Haileybury, Mr. Briden will have authority over all employees of the municipality and will relieve council members of routine connection with the town's affairs.

"THE TANTALIZING FLAVOUR OF CHATEAU CHEESE SIMPLY CAN'T BE COPIED!"

Now in Cellophane

"Bless my horns", says Elsie, the Borden Cow, "enough people have tried to copy Chateau Cheese... but the grand flavour of this golden, mellow, mild cheese is a Borden secret."
 Properly aged cheese is used in Chateau's special blend. And it takes more than two quarts of rich milk from healthy Borden cows like Elsie to make just a half a pound. You'll smack your lips over Chateau in sandwiches. Nothing finer ever kept such appetizing company with a soda cracker. And Chateau Cheese toasts in the oven to a mouth-watering golden brown... makes the finest cooked dishes you ever tasted.

THEY'RE EATING PEPPER-GRASS IN GEORGIA

The only substitute for FRUITS & VEGETABLES that many people in Georgia can afford to buy is Pepper-Grass.

Now, most of us here are better off than that—but we don't have to think very long to think of some things we can't afford to buy—because they're too dear, or because we're paying too much for other things.

And the prices of things are affected by the actions of millions of people all over the world. One speculator corners the market on cotton, a couple of large companies fix the price in tobacco, the farmers in this part of the world decide to give up growing wheat, and to raise hogs instead, an inventor discovers how to make rubber out of surplus milk—each of these happenings affect the price of the goods we buy, by increasing demand or restricting supply.

What do we learn from this? That if we make up our minds to get together with a number of our neighbours, we too can alter the cost of what we pay for the things we buy—when a thousand or so of us are buying together, it will pay the sellers of goods to treat us well, and in time we shall be able to make things for ourselves—then we shall buy for cost, and nothing more.
