

"Sure, I'm careful - - -"

"I demand value for every dollar I spend. I'm certainly getting it in my new house. I always heard that Hill-Clark-Francis were the best contractors in the North but I was sure surprised at the house they're building me for the money. Still, they've had so much experience planning and building in this country that they know all the ways of keeping the cost down. Then, too, they bring materials in by the carload and have their own mill so, of course, they can give rock-bottom prices."

ONE KILLED, 20 HURT AS THE FORMIDABLE BREAKS AWAY

Half an hour before she was to launch Britain's new 23,000 ton aircraft carrier H.M.S. Formidable, Lady Wood wife of the air minister was horrified with other guests, to see the great ship plunge down the ways ahead of time. As it went its cradle splintered hurling timbers in every direction to kill one woman and injuring 20 people. In its wake crowds rushed forward to view the wreckage. The boat itself floated safely in Belfast harbour where tugs took it in tow.

It is just possible that he will be the one to cry quits and not us.

No, of course not, they merely wanted to educate the people.

The ordinary Britisher in the street is at his best perhaps in times of tension such as these. He has a peculiar fatalistic sense of humour which takes itself out in looking on the worst possible side of things. Accordingly, when things turn out less disagreeably than he imagined they would, and they nearly always do, he is agreeably surprised.

At present, for example, tailors in the Strand are prophesying no war and offering a money back guarantee in the event of hostilities.

A London barman is offering a concoction called "Crisis Special" and another know as "Fixed Bayonets." Either one of them will relieve tension and take a person's mind off the war—perhaps.

Another faculty of the Britisher is that he is able to absolutely ignore such a thing as a crisis. For example, there are two correspondents, one "a decent-minded citizen," the other "a rear-admiral retired" who are conducting a battle in the letter columns of the Times. Subject of argument is whether or not one should or shouldn't write to the newspapers.

The British mood is certainly not hysterical. The people are ready to fight if the problem offers no other solution but they will prove none the less deadly because they are at present going about their daily business; because they are making rather vicious jokes about the crisis on one hand and absolutely ignoring its existence on the other.

Virginia Jubilee Singers at Timmins, Sept. 11 and 12

Lovers of music and melody will note with pleasure that the Virginia Jubilee Singers will be at the United Church, Timmins, on Sept. 11th and 12th, under the auspices of the United Church Choir. These gifted singers and entertainers, with their Negro spirituals, plantation songs, folk songs and musical specialties have delighted Timmins audiences each year for several years past.

No Car Theft Ring Has Any Headquarters Here

An automobile, owned by J. C. Herbert, of Ingersoll, was recently recovered in Timmins by police. The Ingersoll Chief then made the statement that he learned from Timmins authorities that there were indications of a car ring working over the province with Timmins as its headquarters. It was suspected that the bodies were switched on stolen cars while they were in Timmins.

Chief of Police Leo H. Gagnon said today that it was not true that there was a ring here. "If there is, we have never heard of it," he said.

SIFTING THE NEWS

By Hugh Murphy

The possibility that it might be Hitler rather than the rest of the world upon whom the strain of this everlasting waiting might rest most heavily is gaining in strength. The very fact that Hitler is willing to make the concession of talking to the Poles, even though his terms for the conference are almost unacceptable (he says that Danzig and the Polish Corridor will have to be ceded to him before he will negotiate), is something.

Possibly Hitler is surprised and disappointed at the adamant attitude of Britain and France. If he believed that they would give him what he wanted without war he knows differently now.

Assess Carnovale $100 Seven Others $20 Each

Were Made Dupes of Prospectors' Association Says Defence Barrister. Association Assured Carnovale and Game Operators Everything was Fixed With the Town Council After Town's $100 Donation.

John Carnovale was fined $100 and costs with the alternative of two months in jail when convicted of allowing his premises to be used as a gambling establishment in police court on Wednesday morning. Seven other men, Louis and Tony Torchia, George Teem, J. B. Bobillard, Edward Basil Smith, Louis Chartier and Real Cousineau, each were assessed $20 and costs for being found in a gaming house.

Carnovale pleaded not guilty. Each of the seven men had two charges against them, but when it was announced that they were willing to plead guilty to charges of being found in the second charge, one of operating a gaming house, was withdrawn.

The charges first were heard in court Tuesday. There was some discussion between Mr. Carnovale and his lawyer, Mr. Dean Kester, and then when court was resumed, the Crown announced that the defence attorney had withdrawn from the case.

The Crown and the Magistrate were anxious to get on with the case as several of the witnesses, men who worked mines, had lost several shifts over it. Finally the Magistrate made it peremptory for Wednesday morning.

On the following morning Mr. Lieberman was representing Mr. Carnovale and the seven men. The charges against one man, Roland Arbie, were withdrawn when the defence pointed out that he had nothing whatsoever to do with the games.

Sergeant John Downey said that he walked into the carnival being held in the Timmins Arena during the week from August 7 to 12. He went in early on the morning of August 9 and warned John Carnovale that the games being operated in his premises were illegal and that he should not allow them. He went around with him and pointed out which games were against the law. Carnovale said that he had been led to believe by Cliff Caesar, Secretary of the Prospectors' Association, that everything would be overlooked.

He went again on August 10 with a squad of policemen, said the Sergeant. Several games were operating. There was money on the tables and men playing. They arrested the operators of the games and seized the money and equipment, said the Sergeant.

Cross-examined, he said that Carnovale told him that if the police closed down on the games the Prospectors' Association would have to make an assignment.

Arthur Shaw, Assessment Commissioner, was called both by the Crown and the defence. Speaking for the Crown, he said that John Carnovale was assessed for the Timmins Arena and paid the taxes. As a defence witness Mr. Shaw said that he was present at the meeting of Council when the Council granted $100 to the Prospectors' Association. There was nothing on record to show that the Council told the Association it could run gambling games, he said.

Mr. Lieberman said that his client, Mr. Carnovale, had rented the arena on previous occasions to churches and social service clubs for affairs similar to that staged by the Prospectors' Association. His client was advised that the Prospectors' carnival had the blessing of the Town. He understood the Association to be a worth-while organization.

Mr. Carnovale was assured by the Association executive that everything was all right. The police came and warned him, Mr. Lieberman said, but between that time and when they made their raid the executive of the Association told Mr. Carnovale that everything had been "fixed."

Some of the equipment was borrowed, said the defence barrister. Part of it was owned by churches and part by service clubs.

Summing up the case, Magistrate Atkinson said that the defence admitted that the arena was a gaming house and that Mr. Carnovale was the lessor to the Prospectors' Association. He had fair warning that the games being run there were illegal. Consequently he was guilty.

"There has been lots of trouble over gaming," said Magistrate Atkinson. "I is the business of the police to administer the law and the business of the people to obey it whether they agree or not. I have repeatedly warned from the bench this year about gambling but my warnings don't seem to have any effect."

The Magistrate ordered that Mr. Carnovale pay $100 and costs and that all equipment be seized as well as money found on the tables at the time of the raid. The money amounted to more than $100.

Mr. Lieberman asked that the seven men who pleaded guilty to being found in a gaming house be assessed for the Prospectors' Association, which, he said, hired them and told them that everything was all right.

Some Members of Algonquin Rifles on Guard Duty

Many have noticed members of the local company on guard at one entrance to the post office building, and this fact has caused some misunderstanding and some odd reports. "Why guard the post office?" has been asked. The fact is that this entrance to the post office is also the entrance to D. Co's headquarters here. On instructions from Col. J. B. Stewart, Toronto, the O.C. of the Algonquin Regt., as a matter of detail one NCO, Sergt. Bert Hansell, MM, M.S.M. and three men are on 24-hour guard duty at the local armories in the basement of the post office. At the same time an inventory of uniforms and equipment is being carried out. Contrary to some reports, no members of the regiment are on guard at Hydro stations or mines or other strategic points. Ex-servicemen recommended by the Canadian Legion have been selected to do guard duty at Hydro and other Government property to avoid danger of sabotage. The McIntyre and Hollinger and other mines are understood to have taken simple precautions to guard powder magazines, equipment and underground, but are supplying their own guards.

CHATEAU CHEESE A Borden Product

Then, with the caution and cold penetration for which he is noted, the Mayor, with visage foreboding and voice of warning, found a flaw in the scheme. Perhaps the offer was not made for the greater glorification of the Councillors and himself, he reasoned. Perhaps the purpose might be an altogether different one. So, he cautioned members of Council Don't forget, he told them that the man who made the offer is no fool. And perhaps he does not wish us well.

They, of course, were rather dumb-founded at that. How, they asked themselves, could anything they would say have an effect other than that of raising them in the esteem of the public and making Mr. and Mrs. John Q. knowledgeable of their splendid work.

Finally, after several changes of expression passed over their faces, they agreed to the Mayor's suggestion that it was an idea which should be approached with a certain amount of caution.

Council meetings are considerable fun in spots if one is a realist and does not bore easily.
