The other occupants of the cars miraculously escaped without very serious injury. One account of the cause of the collision given is that both cars were heading in different directions when one slipped off the paved road onto the soft shoulders and when the driver brought it back on to the pavement again, collided with the other car. The impact sent both cars into the ditch, one turning over two or three times.

Evidence was given that Wong was hit in the eye and nose for refusing to give Mangotich the key to a garage to get a roller for sidewalk repair. Witness proved assault. Accused was defended by Mr. W. S. Gardiner, who said that temper was the cause of the provoked assault, and that accused turned and left the building when told to do so. $10 and costs or 30 days. McCann arraigned for breaking and entering in April of this year, and taking a pair of rubber boots from a shack was discharged by his worship. Accused said he had been West for three or four months, knew nothing of the charge against him and had come back to "join up" when he was arrested by police. The boots which he was accused of trying to sell, he said, were given to him by another youth who wanted him to make a sale. He denied stealing them. Cochrane Leads in North in Offer of Services to Empire

Cochrane—By a unanimous vote Cochrane council in session here on Thursday night passed a resolution pledging wholehearted support to the limit of their resources to the government of Canada in prosecution of the war, and by resolution enacted that all permanent employees of the municipality enlisting for service would be given leave of absence and seniority protection and would receive from the municipality the amount of the difference between their present rate of pay and their army pay.

This action was taken following a stirring appeal by Magistrate E. R. Tucker, who addressed the council, outlining the serious problems which confront the nation today. Cochrane is the first municipality to take this action in this section of the province. Schumacher Lady Tells of Experience on the Athenia

Reviewed Wonderful Reception When They Landed in Scotland.

Schumacher, Sept. 20th. (Special to The Advance)—Mr. McKie, of the Holytrex, received a letter on Monday night from Mrs. McKie, from Motherwell, Scotland. She tells of the experience she and her brother, Mr. James Cullen, had on the Athenia.

They were sitting at the dinner table when the boat was torpedoed. Mr. Cullen got buried among the debris and by the time Mrs. McKie got him out and down to their lifeboat station their part of the ship had been blown up. It just appeared to them a big black hole. She says it was Providence they did not step right into the open sea as there were no lights. Anyway, they got into a lifeboat, and she repeats the old saying "they were packed like herrings" from 8 o'clock at night till 7 o'clock next morning. They arrived at Greenock, and they were taken by special train to Glasgow and she says what a reception they got! When the train pulled in to St. Enoch's station, the Pipe Band was on the platform playing Scottish melodies. The Lord Provost of Glasgow and the "city fathers" were there to greet them. Three of the largest hotels in Glasgow were taken over to accommodate the survivors. They were provided with warm clothing and made very comfortable. Doctors were in attendance when they arrived. Sir Harry Lauder was there to help to cheer them up.

Mrs. McKie and Mr. Cullen are with friends in Motherwell and are just waiting on definite word when they will sail. They are anxious to get back home.

London, Sept. 19—The British Government tonight described Fuehrer Hitler's Danzig speech as "full of the crass mistakes which usually fall from his lips and to which the world now has become accustomed."

"Travesty of Facts"

In a statement issued through the Ministry of Information, the Government flatly denied the Reichsfuehrer's statement that Britain was waging war on German women and children through the naval blockade and described his account of the circumstances surrounding the outbreak of war as a "travesty of facts."

While indications multiplied that that Great Britain would respond with a loud and emphatic "No" to any German peace overtures now that Poland has been shattered by the joint work of the Nazi and Russian armies, the country awaited Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech to the House of Commons to-morrow in which he was expected to outline Anglo-French policies in the light of Soviet occupation of Polish territory.

"Hitler was determined on war and hoped to the last Britain would not fulfil her treaty obligations to Poland" the statement said.

All through his speech Hitler chose his words carefully when referring to the Soviets and endeavoured to avoid any expression which might give umbrage to the U.S.S.R.

Seizing on this opportunity, the British Government thumbed through past speeches of the Fuehrer to remind the world that it was only a comparatively short time ago since he was referring to the Soviets as the "bearers of these poisonous bacilli" and "international parasites."

The Ministry of Information called attention especially to that part of Hitler's speech in which he said that after the death of Pilsudski anti-German agitation began anew ruining the progress made toward amity by the marshal and the Nazi leader. The Ministry pointed out that from the time of Pilsudski's death in 1935 until this spring, Hitler "represented his relations with Poland as excellent and no word was said in Germany of the maltreatment of Germans in Poland."

After quoting from Hitler's Reichstag speech of Feb. 20, 1938, in which the Fuehrer spoke of a "more and more friendly drawing together" and the Sportsplatz address of Sept. 26, 1938, in which Hitler expressed the hope for lasting appeasement," the Ministry's statement referred to to-night's expression of astonishment that the Polish Government rejected his proposals.

Said the Ministry: "The answer is that the Polish Government had before its eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German Government at Munich. They knew these demands were only preliminary to further exactions. If Hitler wished to inspire confidence in his words he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises. Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe was the undertaking which has been broken too flagrantly and too often."

Cite Broken Promises

"The tale of Hitler's broken promises is so long he can scarcely expect Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations westward."

The Ministry also contrasted Hitler's present professed attitude to Russia with what he said in the Reichstag on Jan. 30, 1937, when Joachim von Ribbentrop was seeking to persuade Britain of the Russian's peril. Then he said, according to the Ministry:

"Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, that is of world destruction. As far as Germany is concerned I do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:

"1. We look upon bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world.

"2. We shall try to keep this danger away from the German people by every means at our command.

"3. We are therefore endeavouring to make the German people as immune as possible from this contagion.

"For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous bacilli. I request German workers to avoid all contacts and relations with these international parasites and consequently it will never occur that one will see me dining and drinking with them. Further, any treaty links between Germany and present-day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatever."

The Ministry did not rest with these pertinent reminders of the not distant past when the Nazi and Soviet leaders were bedeviling each other, but piled on quotations from the Nuremberg speech of Sept. 14, 1937 and the Reichstag speech of Feb. 20, 1938.

The Ministry replied to Hitler's charge that Britain was waging war against women and children by means of the Blockade by asserting that the German Government has already announced there were "ample stocks of food in Germany," and by declaring that the restriction of the raw materials is not a measure of which Hitler can complain legitimately. Concluding, the Ministry said:

"Finally, Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts. He was determined on war and hoped to the last that Britain would not fulfil her treaty obligations to Poland. It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when no reply had been received to the British communications, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German Government."

London, Sept. 18—The Duke of Windsor shortly will proceed abroad as a Major-General on the staff of the British Expeditionary Forces.

The King, the War Office announced, accepted temporarily his brother's resignation of Field Marshal in order that he might serve actively in the lower rank of Major-General. The appointment was effective as of Sept. 3, the day Britain declared war.

After an absence of almost three years, the Duke, who abdicated the throne in December, 1936, returned to England last week to offer his services to his brother, the King, in any capacity.

The Duke served on the French and Italian fronts during the first Great War, as a staff officer. He was attached to the staff of the Canadian Corps during the closing weeks of the war.

Since his return to London he has conferred with His Majesty, Prime Minister Chamberlain and Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Secretary. His appointment was foreshadowed several days ago when friends of the Duke stated he would be given a war appointment.

The Duke left England in December, 1936 immediately following his abdication. The following June 3 he was married to Mrs. Wallis Warfield and they lived on the continent continually until the outbreak of war brought the Duke and Duchess hurrying home.

During the long crisis that preceded hostilities, the Duke, speaking as a private individual with actual experience of war, made two pleas for world peace. The first was in an international broadcast and the second was a message to the King of Italy urging him to use his influence for peace.
