

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Sun worshippers like JUDITH BARRETT must take every precaution to preserve the natural beauty of their skin.

Glycerin Plays Big Part in Home-Made Beauty Concoctions

Ever since you were a wee child you have been told that glycerin and rose water is an excellent protection against the chapping of winter winds. But I don't suppose you realize just how many beauty uses a bottle of good glycerine has. You may buy it at a drug store and mix some very efficacious concoctions for yourself.

Mild Freckle Bleach

Those of you who play much out under the sun frequently come home with a fresh sprinkling of freckles. Right then is the time to mix up glycerine and lemon juice in equal parts and apply it to your face. It doesn't actually rid you of freckles but it dims them considerably.

For Hand Bleach

About this time you wish you hadn't allowed the sun to coat your hands with freckles and a deep tan. So you think of a bleach. Take one part of rubbing alcohol, one part of glycerine and two parts of lemon juice and shake it together vigorously. That my dears will make your hands a shade or two lighter if you use it daily for a week!

For Sun-Burn Peeling

To tone down a sun-reddened nose and smooth a peeling skin follow this simple routine. Bathe the skin in one pint of water to which has been added a heaping teaspoonful of epsom salts. Rinse in clear water and pat on glycerine diluted in warm water. Both the sting and redness will vanish, unless you are about in the sun-stroke stage!

For Cracking Lips

If you have difficulty in getting your lipstick on smoothly you must do something to restore your lips' petal-like smoothness. Each night anoint them with the richest lubricating cream on which you can lay your hands. Then during the day at intervals, dab on with absorbent cotton some of the following mixture and allow it to dry on your lips—no licking it off even if it does taste and smell good! (This is also good for elbows—to soften them and whiten them).

One ounce of rose water

One-quarter ounce of witch hazel

One-quarter ounce of glycerine

Few drops of geranium oil.

Have your druggist mix it well together and pour into a bottle which you must shake each time before using.

C.W.L. GIRL GUIDES

The regular meeting of the 1st Timmins Girl Guide Company was held at 7.15 p.m. in the basement of the Church of the Nativity, parish hall.

The meeting opened with roll call, and then the horseshoe was formed. The Guide prayer was repeated and a hymn sung. Guides were then sent to patrol quarters, where a passing of first aid took place.

A game was then played, taught by Lieutenant Wilkinson.

Campfire was then formed and a number of favourite camp songs sung, the paper read, and a presentation of a box of marshmallows to Mary McLean for being the winner of the games previously played.

The meeting was closed with 'taps.'

Pete Spence Near End of Canoe Trip to World's Fair

Has Been Held up by Bad Weather on Lake Champlain.

Direct word from Pete Spence, who is making a solo canoe trip from Timmins to the World's Fair at New York, was received this week. The following is the telegram sent from Port Kent, N. Y.— "Washed ashore here after five days' delay at Cumberland Head, near Plattsburg, and one week hold-up on Valcour Island. Was held up by strong south winds of fall. Have almost starved for the last four days. The weather is now clearing up. Am taking advantage of this in order to get to the Fair before it closes."

Housewarming Party at Home Near Bayside Beach

A large number of their friends, from Timmins, Schumacher, South Porcupine, and the district, gathered at the new summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kanerva, of Schumacher, near Bayside Beach, on Sunday afternoon, at a housewarming party. Their new home is admirably located and is an ideal spot during the warm months of summer.

Included among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Oksanen and Mr. and Mrs. Seienki of Kirkland Lake, former residents of Timmins. During the day the hostess served a delicious lunch, and a very happy social event was thoroughly enjoyed by the many guests.

A Man in Every Office Who Could Fix This War

(From the Halifax Chronicle) "Have you a general staff in your office?" a reader asked recently. "We have," he continued, without waiting for an answer. "They meet every day to discuss the way the war is being run. They don't think much of it. They get quite sore about it. G— is so mad he won't speak to anybody."

Allowing for some exaggeration, the reader's remarks give a pretty good picture of a human trait that is at present working overtime. In stores and offices, on street corners, and in living rooms people are discussing the conduct of the war. There are arm-chair generals everywhere, explaining, arguing, and theorizing. That most of them have had absolutely no military experience, that mechanical equipment for warfare has made vast strides in recent years and that they are far from the scene of current engagements bothers them not a bit. They may know no more of the contours of the Sarr Valley than of the Tibetan foothills but they are prepared, without charge, to map out a complete plan of campaign for the Allied forces.

Nor do they stop there. They are prepared to analyze the wisdom or folly of the German strategy and to explain its most minute details.

Their activities are another phase of that great human fondness for kibitzing. They are the result of the same urge that prompts people to stand behind bridge-players and offer unsolicited and unwelcome advice, to stand for hours watching steam-shovels, and to scream loud and unheeded directions to hockey players.

A war is a contest—albeit a grim and bloody one—and a contest is a challenge to the kibitzing instinct in most of us. We may expect a good deal of this sort of kibitzing in the months to come.

Dark Brown Crepe

BROWN IS out in front in the colour sweepstakes, giving black a good run for its money. Here is a pretty daytime dress in rich, dark brown crepe, made with a high round neck, that is slightly gathered. The insert at the waist is velvet, and it dips down in back in a curved yoke. The fullness of the skirt is gathered on to this in back. The sleeves are velvet from above the elbow to the waist.

Youth Training of Much Value to Nation's Health

(From Health League of Canada) In addition to the national advantages of the Dominion and Provincial Youth Training Programme and to its importance in raising the morale of our young people, this project is contributing in a large measure to the nation's health.

Nearly 72,000 young men and women had been trained under this plan during Canada's fiscal year ending in March.

The effects of non-employment upon the youth of Canada, so many of whom had no work at all since leaving school, have been reflected in a break down of morale, a waste of time and the development of useless habits, also a neglect of health measures.

The Youth Training Programme not only diverts the activities of youth into productive channels and revives their hope, but impresses them with the importance of health. In fact, some of the courses, such as those in forestry, require open-air occupations that have a direct bearing on health.

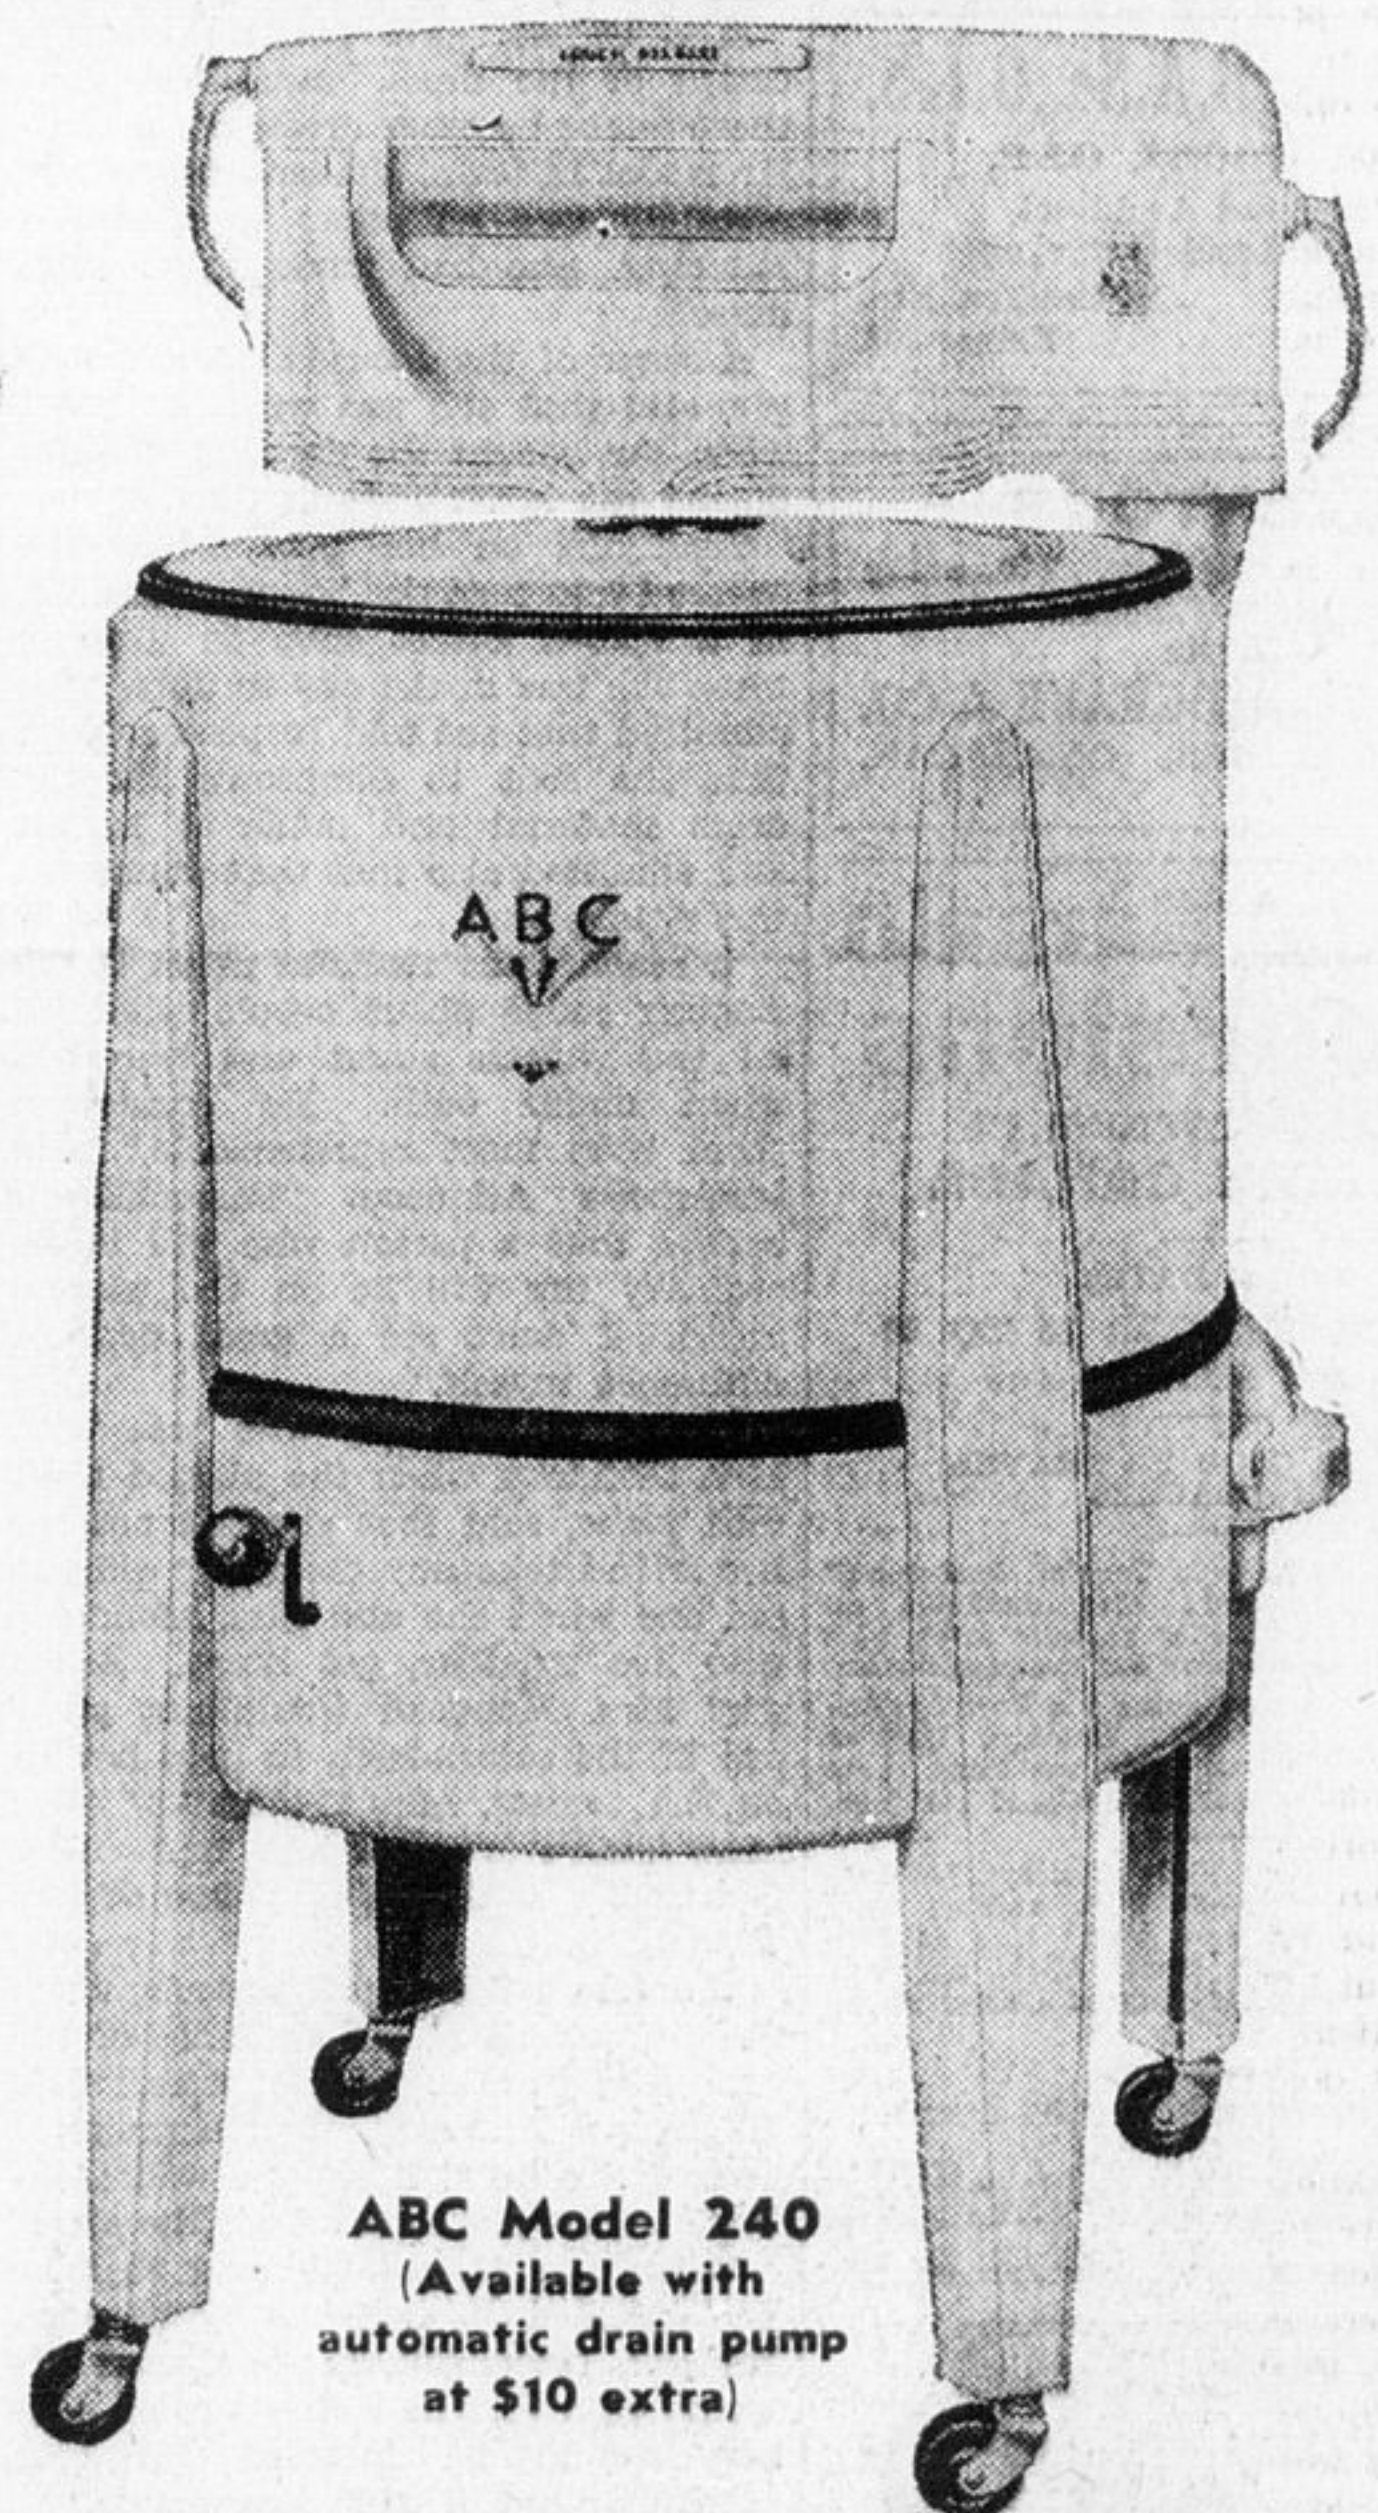

Besides these courses taking young men into the forest wilderness, there are others which train them on the farm, in factories, mines, machine shops and other industries, for the scope of the training is broad. Women's courses include training in household management, sewing and various handicrafts. All the courses for both men and women place an emphasis on good health.

While of the 771,812 trainees in 1938-1939, the number placed in employment, 4747, of whom 2687 were men and 2060 women, is relatively small, the advantages go far beyond employment. Of the total for the year 31,676 were in rural training courses and 24,258 given physical training courses.

During the two complete years which the programme has been in existence, 127,000 young Canadians have received beneficial training. Continuation of the programme for three years at least has now been provided by legislation, all the provinces co-operating with the federal authorities. Further expansion of the plan is now possible and it is expected that each year will bring the benefits of youth training to increasing numbers.
