Twenty Years Ago

From The Porcupine Advance Files

On Saturday morning, Sept. 13th, 1919, the Timmins firemen had a run to 71 Fourth avenue where a fire was in progress. The house was occupied by George Goughran and family, the building being owned by Mr. J. M. Tinkess. While connections were being made with the nearest hydrant, the chemical tanks were carried into the building and used effectively. The fire, however, had attained such proportions before being discovered that the use of water hose was absolutely necessary. Just after the firemen reached the scene they were told that there were two small children in the building. The mother succeeded in getting one of these youngsters out of the burning house, but could not get to the other child who was upstairs. The smoke was very bad and the risk a great one for anyone who did not know the house and had no way of knowing the spread of the fire which was in the partitions and between the ceiling and floor, and possibly in the stairs. Ed. Wadsworth, however, fought his way through the house and upstairs into the room where the child was. He carried the youngster to the ladder, where Alex Borland was right there to take it down to safety. Both the children were much affected by the smoke, the little girl being particularly ill as a result. Dr. Moore was hastily summoned and gave the children the necessary attention. Fortunately, the youngsters were not burned at all, but simply suffered from the ill-effects of the smoke. They were fully recovered again in the course of a few hours. The cause of the fire was set down to some of the neighbouring youngsters playing with matches. It was said at the time that one visiting boy dropped some burning matches down a hole in one of the partitions while Mrs. Goughran was out of the house for a minute or two. When she returned the fire had good headway. The wall on one side of the house was badly scorched by the flames, and some damage was done by smoke and water. Only the good work of the fire brigade prevented a very serious fire. There was $500.00 insurance on the building and this more than covered the loss entailed, but there was no insurance on the furniture which was also damaged to quite an extent. M. J. Tinkess, the owner of the building, showed his appreciation of the good work of the firemen by forwarding the brigade a cheque for $5.00 as a mark of his appreciation.

said The Advance twenty years ago, "at the death of Mrs. B. D. Kelly, wife of the representative at Timmins of the Ross and Cassie firm. She had only been ill for a couple of weeks. She was taken to the Providence hospital at Halleybury some days ago and on Sept. 5th was operated on for peritonitis. Despite all that medical skill and attention could do she passed away on Thursday, Sept. 11th. The remains were brought to Timmins for interment the funeral service on Saturday being very largely attended, evidencing the deep regret felt at the death and the sincere sympathy with the bereaved relatives in their loss. The late Mrs. Kelly was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Richards and was well-known and highly esteemed in the camp. She came here with the family in November, 1911. In addition to the bereaved parents, and the husband, a little daughter, Catharine May aged two years, and a sister, Mrs. R. W. Eddy, as well as a brother, Geo. W. Richards, of California, survive to mourn the loss."

At the Conservative convention held at Matheson twenty years ago R. S. Potter, of Matheson, was selected as candidate for the provincial election. Messrs S. G. McCoubrey, of Iroquois Falls, R. T. Shillington of Halleybury, R. Carter of Cochrane, were also nominated. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, was also nominated as the candidate for the Cochrane riding but said that he was reluctantly forced to decline the honour much as he would have liked to have had the honour of being the member for this riding. Hon. Mr. Ferguson and Dr. Forbes Godfrey were among the speakers at the convention.

Twenty years ago Mr. Hamilton B. Wills wired here that he would give a suitable silver challenge cup for competition among the baseball teams of the North. The cup was to be won for three years by one team before becoming the property of that team. The Advance twenty years ago had rather strong articles in regard to express rates and service in this part of the North, calling attention to the fact that the trouble appeared to be at head office rather than in the local branches where service and courtesy seemed to rule. The Advance referred to the increase in rates, the reduction of the free delivery area and the continual shortages, especially in liquor shipments. "Now is the time," concluded The Advance, "for all interested—and practically all are interested—to make a united effort to secure a fair deal and proper rates and service from the express companies." Some marked benefit was eventually secured through the agitation in the matter.

Irene Dunne and Chas. Boyer Co-Star in Vital Love Story

Three Great Names Combine to Produce "When Tomorrow Comes."

Three great names combine to produce Universal's "When Tomorrow Comes," which is showing to-day and to-morrow (Monday and Tuesday) Sept. 25th and 26th, at the Palace theatre.

The three are, Producer-Directors John M. Stahl, and stars Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer.

For the past ten years Stahl's name has been prominently listed among the great directors of the screen. His "Back Street," "Magnificent Obsession," "Only Yesterday" and "Letter of Introduction," have ranked among the best pictures of their respective years. He is recognized as one of the screen's geniuses.

Miss Dunne, since her outstanding work in "Showboat," "Magnificent Obsession," "Back Street," and her more recent "Love Affair," is one of the great feminine personalities of pictures. And Boyer, who has supplanted Valentino in the hearts of American women, now ranks as tops among the male personalities.

Plot Outlined

"When Tomorrow Comes" links the players in a vital love story played against the background of the recent hurricane which devastated portions of New England. Boyer will be seen as a famous French pianist, while Miss Dunne is a waitress who meets and falls in love with him in seventy-two hours.

In supporting roles will be seen Barbara O'Neil, Onslow Stevens, Nydia Westman, Fritz Feld, Nella Walker, and Greta Meyer.

Books Reveal the Great Spirit of the French People

Collection Shows the Ideals of the Republic.

New York—John Selby, book reviewer for The Associated Press, comments on a couple of French works just out:

The first in importance right now is a book of Edouard Daladier's speeches called "In Defence of France." Inevitably, there is a good deal of familiar matter in the book, and some with small importance. But also there is the key to the French spirit, and some passages which sound, now that war really has come, like the voice of the archangel. Read this, delivered last spring:

"Certain people hope that France invincible when united, will permit herself to be demoralized by the alteration of threats and promises of peace. It seems as though a new form of war without battles were being used against France, a war of uncertainty, of anxiety renewed and hope deceived. But our will has not yielded and will not yield. We know that what we have to defend are our country and our ideal of human dignity. If just and equal peace is desired of us, we are ready to make it. If peace is attacked, the weight of our arms will be felt. If some try to exhaust us by wavering between peace and war, we will hold on as long as necessary. Neither force nor ruse can accomplish anything against France."

Then we have a long and sympathetic account of the history of France from 1610 to 1914, that long period in which modern France was born and fixed her individual, perhaps unique, mentality. John Coulter calls his book "The Story of Modern France," and although it is an accurate and sometimes moving account of events and people, its real service lies in showing the development of the state of mind in which she stands the defender of a "frontier of liberty whose loss would be our loss as well as hers."

Record Production for Paymaster Consolidated

Mint returns place Paymaster Consolidated Mines production in August at $134,988 instead of the estimate of $131,438 given earlier this month. With 17,396 tons milled, average recovery was $7.76. August yield was the best in company's history. Production for the first eight months of the year was $984,109 from 134,190 tons, for average of $7.33, against $930,979 from 123,223 tons and average of $7.55. Gross production since commencement of milling in 1934 approximates $5,296,717.

Objects to the New Order of "Three Deep" in the Army

Writing to protest against the displacement of the famous "Foam Foaahs," and the substitution of the mechanical "Three Deep," Thomas Richard Henry unburdens himself as follows:—

We'll never join the infantry now. The P.B.I. always got it in the neck. They walked while others rode—but we might have forgotten that.

They wear the same old greenish brown, while young men in the air force wear neat and natty uniforms—but we might have overlooked that.

They did all the fighting and only got a small part of the credit—but we might have put up with that.

There is one thing, however, that we cannot forgive.

We can't stand the good old mouth-filling roder, "Foam Foes," being thrown into discard.

Now what can you possibly do with a new-fangled order about "Three Deep?" "Three Deep" sounds more like the croak of a juvenile frog than a military order.

No! The P.B.I. lost us forever when they gave up the "Foam Fours."

If they ever catch up with our category this time we think we will join the navy.

Incidentally, the Mayor of Bully-Grenay (you know the Mayor of Bully-Grenay) says he has his job picked out.

He wants to be the batman to the padre of the flying corps.

One of the Most Popular of Recent Motion Pictures

It is not very often that a picture receives as much unqualified praise from regular theatre-goers as has been given to "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," the feature at the Palace theatre on Friday and Saturday last. With Robert Donat as "Mr. Chips," and a new actress, Miss Greer Garson, as the beautiful young wife, a remarkably effective presentation of a story of much charm was given. The play will live in the memory of most people who saw it. Those who have read the story on which the play is founded appear to agree that the picture is more impressive than the book. This indicates the power of the acting and the sympathetic understanding given by each one in the cast to the character portrayed. Robert Donat added to his laurels as an actor by his excellent representation of Mr. Chips. The picture is not remarkable for its plot or for anything spectacular in the way of scenes or incident. The whole power of the play lies in its wonderful delineation of a most lovable character, "Mr. Chips," who as a teacher in a British school for boys, left enduring influence on the lives and characters of the pupils.
