TRAINS 5,000 AIRMEN A YEAR

Group Captain D. C. M. Hume is the man in charge of the huge new training centre of the R.C.A.F. At present only 500 officers and men are occupying the big institution, which until two weeks ago was a mental hospital, but shortly it will have its full quota of 3,000. To-day Captain Hume's office is behind a door marked "treatment" and his adjutant has a room which says "nurse". Not for another month will there be an officers' mess, but active training is already under way.

Varied Commands followed—Flag Captain to the Commander-in-Chief in the Atlantic, the Destroyer Flotillas in the Mediterranean, the Third Sea Lord at the Admiralty, Second-in-Command of the Mediterranean Fleet, and in 1938 his present High Command.

Secondly, the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet—Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, somewhat younger than the other two, a man who has spent most of his time in that class of vessel known as destroyers. How has his naval life been spent? In command of the Scorpion at the Dardanelles, the Termagant at Zeebrugge, the Seafire in the Baltic—prophetic and characteristic—those commands placed two bars on his Distinguished Service Order. Later he had the command of the Destroyer Flotillas in the Mediterranean, and I remember myself the way that the then Commander-in-Chief spoke of him in high regard.

Here's a man who can, as we hope and believe others can, occupy a difficult position. In November, 1938, he became Deputy Chief of the Naval Staff. The late Sir Roger Backhouse became ill, and in a most critical time it fell to the lot of Sir Andrew Cunningham to take upon himself the responsibilities and duties of his Chief. Only those who have held great administrative posts know the difficulties of such a position.

If I may make that some historical comparison about him, I would speak of one not so well known and that is Sir Edward Berry. Look, when all this is over at Sir Edward Berry's portrait in the Maritime Museum at Greenwich. Nelson called him affectionately his "stormy petrel", and off Cadiz, seeing the gamemnon come in sight, said—"Ah, here comes little Berry—now we'll have a fight!"

These men are Commanders-in-Chief as the name implies—not chairmen of committees. They get instructions from the authority over them, and most loyal and immense help and support from their subordinates. They may and do delegate to any extent, but the final decision and execution of action is theirs and no one else's. These are men of experience, of expert naval skill and knowledge, men too of dignity, earnest thought and high endeavor, able not only to deliver but to receive heavy punishment.

Then comes those not in command, but in the Command—that great body of officers and men, both of the Royal Navy and the Merchant Navy, who form that mighty force on which, under the good providence of God, the safety, honor and welfare of this country do chiefly depend. What spirit is it that actuates the whole Command—from those whose names I have mentioned and others down to the youngest boy? I think I cannot do better than read to you the last prayer written by Lord Nelson a few years before his death:

"May the Great God whom I worship grant to my country and for the benefit of Europe in general a great and glorious victory, and may no misconduct in anyone tarnish it. May humanity after victory be the predominant feature of the British Fleet. For myself individually I commit my life to Him who made me; may His blessing light upon my endeavors to serve my country faithfully. To Him I resign myself and the just cause which is entrusted to me to defend. Amen."

Not So Bad

(From Montreal Star)

Manager: "That young woman whom I placed at this counter a year ago already knows more about the business than you do, and I find that I shall have to put her at the head of the department, though I fear it will be rather unpleasant for you to be under her orders, after being in charge so long."

Clerk: "Oh, no, not the slightest, sir; I am getting used to that. We were married last spring."

Publication Prohibited of Newspaper, 'The Clarion'

Ottawa, Nov. 22. — On the recommendation of the press censors for Canada, concurred in by the director of censorship, Justice Minister Lapointe in his capacity as acting secretary of state, has issued an order prohibiting publication of the Toronto communist newspaper "The Clarion."

The order was issued by authority of regulation 15 of the defence of Canada regulations. This provides that the secretary of state may make provision by order for preventing or restricting the publication in Canada of matters as to which he is satisfied that the publication thereof would or might be prejudicial to the safety of the state or the prosecution of the war.

Sudbury Star—Nazi loud speakers are now reported adding to the din along the western front. In revenge, a Scotsman has invented a self-playing bagpipe that plugs into a light socket.

The trusting hand of a little child symbolizes the responsibility which rests on every dad's shoulders—the protection and welfare of his loved ones.

What dad wouldn't be glad to set aside 25c a day to provide his family, in case of his death, with an income of $50 a month for 10 years?

North American Life has a plan—the Life Preferred—which provides this complete protection, with the added advantage of an income for life for you beginning at age 65.

Why not talk it over with a North American Life representative?
