

Labor, Washington, D.C.—We are all for freedom of the press, but freedom should not be stretched to cover filth. That's the position of Gordon Conant, Attorney-General of Ontario. He announces that obscene magazines, most of them flooding in from the United States, will be barred from that Province, and that those who attempt to sell them will be fined or thrown into jail. The morals of grown-ups should be proof against such trash, but, unfortunately, the vile publications cannot be kept out of the hands of children. Parents are almost helpless. Only the strong arm of the Government can end the evil. Ontario's example should be followed, vigorously and relentlessly, by our State and Federal authorities.

EXILES MAKE CANADA SECOND HOMETOWN

Fine public libraries and other evidences of a rich culture make Karl Buchberger and his family, exiled from their Austrian home, feel at home in Canada. Mr. Buchberger had to leave after Anschluss, though his family had been Austrians for 400 years, because he was known to have royalist sympathies. Now he has a bookshop in Toronto and proudly displays signature books filled with names of the world's great. His pretty daughter Hertha appeared in films, and was slated to act in a play at Salzburg when—"Hitler came and closed up Salzburg."

Sudbury Star: A report comes to hand from Suffolk to the effect that six cannons standing on a hill are to be removed to a place of safety. In this strange new war they take the cannon in.

Blairmore Enterprise: A man is taxed when he thinks of getting married—and forever afterwards.

Globe and Mail: Evidently, getting fighting planes from the United States to Canada is simply "a pushover."

Damage to Extent of Thousands to Toke Street Home

Interior of the Home Badly Singed When Fire Sweeps Through House from Cellar.

Damage amounting to several thousands of dollars was done to the home of G. Masson on Friday afternoon when fire broke out in the cellar. Before the flames were extinguished the interior of the house had been badly burned and a quantity of valuable antique furniture ruined.

The house was owned by O. Martin. How the fire started is as yet unknown but it is believed to have begun in a large carton of waste paper which was standing in the basement near a wall. At first firemen thought that hot ashes might have got into the box of paper in some way but that theory evaporated when no ashes of any kind were found in the cellar.

The fire made its way up through the cellar ceiling and into the main floor. It burned well through the house but did not get out before firemen brought it under control. The wall paper in the house was badly scorched and a large amount of damage was caused by smoke which poured through the building saturating everything made of cloth.

Four hundred and fifty feet of hose were used by firemen and two gas masks.

Employees of the Star Transfer did not know that there was a leak in the gasoline tank of one of the company's trucks until they brought an acetylene torch with which they were working into close contact with it. They soon learned then.

Six gallons of foamite were used by firemen to bring the blaze under control.

A boat house worth about $25 burned on the banks of the Mattawambi River on Friday at 3:43 p.m. The call came in from Box 54 across the road from the boat house. Two hundred and fifty feet of hose were used by firemen to bring the fire under control, the start of which is unknown.

Over Nonchalant
(From an Exchange)

In the early hours the siren sounded. All the hotel guests hurried down to the air raid shelter in various stages of attire—except one. Five minutes later he strolled into the shelter, boasting, "What on earth's all this fuss about? I stayed behind to dress. Why, I didn't like my first choice of a tie, so I changed it!"

"Fine," said the other guests, "but where are your trousers?"

He: "What part of the car causes the most accidents?"
She: "The nut that holds the wheel."

Noted War Picture at Cartier Theatre All This Week

First Motion Picture Drama to be Produced Coincidentally with Events.

The special feature at the Cartier theatre all this week—Nov. 27th to Dec. 2nd, both days inclusive—is the famous new war picture, "The Lion Has Wings."

When Britain declared war on Germany last September, Alexander Korda was not caught napping. Like his compatriots, the British motion picture producer was prepared for this contingency and almost immediately following Chamberlain's historic radio address he made a virtue of necessity and produced a motion picture about the war called "The Lion Has Wings."

This film, which is released in America through United Artists, is the first of its kind ever produced in the history of the motion picture industry. It was produced coincidentally with the incidents it depicts, and is therefore a record of the new World War up to the very moment of the film's release. This up-to-date technique is not new to either the literary or dramatic fields—John Gunther's books on Europe and Asia are kept topical by new additions, and George Bernard Shaw's play "Geneva" is being constantly modernized in production—but "The Lion Has Wings" is the first motion picture to have adopted similar methods.

The story of this picture is no more or no less than the dramatic story of the new World War from September to the present day, as seen through the eyes of an official in the Royal Air Force and his pretty young wife. Ralph Richardson and Merle Oberon play these parts in the film, and the cast includes also June Bushell, and Der-Douglas, Anthony Bushell, and Derrick De Marney. Introduced by a montage-prologue which dramatically traces the events leading up to the beginning of hostilities, the film includes in its narrative re-enactments of such historic events as the British bombing attack on the Kiel Canal, a Nazi air raid on London, some famous aerial encounters between the planes of Germany and England. Revealed are the secrets of Britain's elaborate air-defense, including the already famous "balloon barrage" over London, the Central Control Room, from which all aerial manoeuvres are directed, the anti-aircraft batteries and other air-raid precautions which play such an important part in the warfare of today.

Such authenticity as this was only made possible by Korda's being on the plot of the picture were then trans-gaming made. Working from a skeleton script by Ian Dalrymple, the story of "The Lion Has Wings" was changed and moulded by the events that took place during its production. These actual incidents that make up the plot of the picture are then translated into the personal, humanized terms of the people who took part in them. Because war is itself dramatic, "The Lion Has Wings" had no need to dramatize the events it depicted; and because the story of real people in real situations is more exciting than almost anything Hollywood or Denham scenarists can dream up, the story of the R.A.F. Commander and his wife, which, as played by Ralph Richardson and Merle Oberon, might be the story of any young couple in England to-day, is at once more real and moving than the usual romances to be seen on the screen.

Neame Made Captain of Legion of Frontiersmen For This Section North

Appointed Organizer for North of Kirkland Lake. Legion is Group of "Irregulars" Affiliated with Mounted Police for Patriotic Work. Members Wear Uniform Similar to That of R. C. M. P.

Death at Toronto Hospital of Miss Blanche Martin

Miss Blanche Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Martin, 21 Fifth Avenue, died at the Toronto General Hospital, last week, after an illness that lasted for nearly two years. Blanche was well-known to Timmins people, being one of the popular school-aged Misses of the district, and her death came as a sudden and sad shock to her many friends here. Funeral services will be held tomorrow (Tuesday) at St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Austin Neame, of Timmins, has been appointed a captain of the Legion of Frontiersmen and organizer for Northern Ontario in the territory north of Kirkland Lake to Kapuskasing.

The Legion of Frontiersmen is the only corps of "irregulars" in the British Empire. It is reorganizing and regaining strength after a 25-year period of inactivity. It is affiliated with the Royal Canadian Police and members are expected to live up to the ideals and traditions of that body of men.

Members are uniformed similarly to the Mounted Police, except that the tunic is blue and not red. The uniform consists of a Stetson hat with Frontiersman's badge, blue jacket with shoulder chains and buttons; khaki breeches, Strathcona boots with spurs, Sam Browne belt and revolver lanyard.

The Legion is composed of men, who, when a job comes along, can be relied upon to do it silently and efficiently. Clubrooms and offices are maintained and units organize and train in a military fashion.

The Legion was founded in London in 1904. It thrived in Canada until the outbreak of the Great War when it was disbanded, its members forming the nucleus of the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry.

The Legion was not revived in Canada until 1931. Popularity has been steadily advancing since the Legion's reappearance and Canadian membership is estimated at 2,000.

There is no limit as to age. The Legion is now open for members who can qualify as to British citizenship and are willing to take the oath of Allegiance.

Applications for membership in the Legion or information should be made to Mr. Neame.

Comrades in War Meet After Twenty-three Years
