More Whoopee in Happy Picture at Cartier Theatre

Dynamic Star Sets Off Fireworks in "Mexican Spitfire."

Brought together for the second time as a comedy team, Vivacious Lupe Velez and Leon Errol contribute their respective laugh-making talents to RKO Radio's merry film, "Mexican Spitfire."

This hilarious film, "Mexican Spitfire," is at the Cartier theatre this week from Sunday midnight and for Monday and Tuesday, July 8th and 9th.

Wherever shown, "Mexican Spitfire" is making a big hit with all who love laughter and fun.

A sequel to Miss Velez recent romantic comedy, "The Girl From Mexico," the current offering is a continuation of Lupe's madcap exploits as a Latin entertainer in New York.

The sparkling story, however, is complete phases of the story that bring about most of the rollicking complications. Directed by Leslie Goodwins, "Mexican Spitfire," was produced by Cliff Reid, and features in the supporting cast, in addition to those mentioned, Elizabeth Ralston, and Cecil Kellaway.

Pat O'Brien Takes Role of Famous Priest at "Palace"

"Fighting 69th" the Attraction at Palace This Week.

The Palace Theatre's present attraction, Monday and Tuesday this week, July 8th and 9th, "The Fighting 69th," an action-packed story of one of the world's most famous regiments of fighters, has one of its three stars portaying a character whose fights were all spiritual. The star is Pat O'Brien and the character is that of the famous priest who was chaplain of the 69th.

The other two stars James Cagney and George Brent have real soldier roles.

It was precisely because the priest was so famous that O'Brien feared his

They Set This Cockeyed World Laughing

James Cagney and Sammy Cohen hit the hilarious highspots as the two rawest recruits in that roaring Irish brigade, "The Fighting 69th," in the picture of that name at the Palace theatre Monday and Tuesday of this week, July 8th and 9th.

within itself, and offers an individual plot that is loaded with laughs and hilarious complications.

According to the amusing story, Lupe and her husband, Donald Woods, advertising man, have just returned from their honeymoon. The efforts of a jealous ex-fiancee to break up the marriage and the wiled devices of Leon Errol, as Lupe's uncle by marriage to straighten out the newlyweds' marital problems, make for the side-splitting situations in the story.

Errol, former Ziegfeld comedian, plays a triple role in this offering. He is cast as the groom's uncle, then as a British whiskey-baron, and is also seen as the uncle impersonating the Englishman. It is the mistaken identity role. Why? Because the priest he's impersonating is the late Father Francis P. Duffy, chaplain of the Irish regiment after which the picture is named. The same Father Duffy for whom Duffy Square—at the northern end of New York—is called, and whose bronze portrait-statue stands there. Scores of thousands of New York's seven millions knew and loved Father Duffy and if O'Brien had made a mis-step in the role it would have been just too bad for Pat.

But he wasn't likely to. For one reason, because he knew Duffy in life. Once in a while when Pat was acting on the Broadway stage he and the padre went together to see the fights at Madison Square Garden—and it wasn't beyond Father Duffy to have a small wager on the boy he liked. Another reason for O'Brien's accuracy in the role is that he was coached for it by another priest, Father John J. Devlin of St. Victor's church in North Hollywood. Father Devlin guided him in "Angels With Dirty Faces" last year with Jim Cagney, when Pat played Father Jerry Connolly.

O'Brien has the same complex—probably erroneous—about "The Fighting Sixty-ninth" that he had about "Angels." He said then and he still says, "I'm up against a terrific handicap playing a priest. I mean, my best pal, Spencer Tracy, does priests so much better. Remember him in "San Francisco" and again in "Boy's Town"?"

That wasn't false modesty on Pat's part. He really meant it. But he did a swell job in "Angels" and an even better one as Father Duffy, according to advance reports.

Some Stories

A SPORTING OFFER

Her father—My boy, you'll never be able to support my daughter. Why I can hardly manage it myself. Her Sutor—Tell you what sir: Let's go fifty-fifty.—Globe and Mail.

THRIFT WINS

"Save your waste paper" campaign reminds one of the story of the four men who died on the same day. One was an author. He left $5. The second was a bookseller. He left $50. The third was a publisher. He left $500. The fourth was a waste-paper merchant. He left $50,000. It pays to save "paper".—Exchange.

PROBABLY RIGHT

A school inspector began by putting a few questions to the small girls of an infant school. "Now," he said, "if all the good people in the world were white and the bad people in the world were black, what color would you be?" Some of the children answered "white" and some were for "black," but little Mary, who remained silent until the others had replied, said: "Please, sir, I'd be streaky".—Exchange.

WAYS AND MEANS

Nora: "My dear, I never imagined that you would ever marry the man you did." Norma: "Neither did I, my dear. I simply hated his ways, but I adored his means".—Exchange.

NOT HALF SHOT

Then there was the war veteran who coughed up a bullet that struck him 24 years ago. His surprised relatives probably had no idea he was loaded.—Northern Tribune.

LOCATED

She—You brute! Where my head was when I consented to marry you, I can't imagine! He—On my shoulder, my dear.—Globe and Mail.

HONEST ABOUT IT

Frank—When you proposed to her, I suppose she said, "This is so sudden!" Ernest—No, she was honest and said, "This suspense has been terrible".—Globe and Mail.

WHAT A THOUGHT!

A sweet young thing was taking tea with a very plain elderly but rich bride, who was just home from her honeymoon. "On the second day of our honeymoon," simpered the bride, "my husband won $50,000 in a foreign lottery." "Heavens," murmured the sweet young thing, thinking aloud. "Two days too late!"—Globe and Mail.

PRELIMINARY REMARKS

The colonel had been halted by the sentry, and on receiving the "Pass friend," was about to proceed when the sentry challenged him again. "What the devil do you mean man?" shouted the colonel. "You have halted me once already." "My orders," firmly answered the sentry, "are to halt twice and then fire".—Calgary Albertan.

HOPELESS HORSE

The new jockey mounted the 200-1 shot in the paddock just before the race. Once in the saddle he looked around for his whip. He turned to the trainer. "Do you mind getting my whip?" he requested. "It's over there in the corner".

The trainer didn't budge. "What good is a whip?" he cried sadly. "Whip?" he echoed. The jockey frowned, impatiently. "Stop acting dumb," he growled. "I said whip."

The trainer shook his head. "The last jockey threatened this horse with a gun, and even that didn't do any good!"—The Humorist.

LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT

"Good morning!" said Mrs. Binks, entering the baker's shop. "Permit me to compliment you on the lightness of your bread!" The baker rubbed his hands and smiled. "Thank you, madam," he said. "It is my aim to take the lightest bread in this town."

"And you do it," said Mrs. Binks. "If it gets much lighter it will take two of your pound loaves to weigh sixteen ounces."—Exchange.

British Endurance, the Quality to Win the War

The following is an editorial from Friday's Northern News:—"Adjutant Batten of the Salvation Army struck the right thought at yesterday's adieu to recruits leaving here for Toronto when he stressed the quality of endurance.

"He mentioned that often people spoke of the sacrifice of death in field which was the supreme sacrifice, but too often forgot the continuous sacrifice of faithful endurance.

"Endurance is the quality above all which has brought success to the British arms down through history.

"It was endurance which carried British and Dominion troops through the muck and filth and chill of trench-fighting in the last war to victory.

"It is endurance which will win this war, endurance not only on the part of the troops, but on the part of us at home.

Endurance here at home in doing the extra work which is called for in war time, endurance in paying taxes, in contributing to the Red Cross and other war causes, in doing our daily work faithfully and loyally, in helping others to be of good cheer and to have faith and courage.

Running Free Bus to the Kirkland Swimming Hole

The Kirkland Lake B'Nai Brith Society started on Saturday to run a free bus service for the youngsters in Kirkland Lake to take them from the town to their favourite free swimming spot, at the pump-house. The same free service for the youngsters was given by the same society last year.

PARADOXICAL

The photographer is a paradox. He's forever taking the negative despite which he has the burden of the proof. He may not be much of a humorist, but he always manages to get a smile from his patrons. He is every ready to enlarge on any subject; yet he fears to expose his views to the light of common day. He plans every action with deliberation and then he falls back on snap judgement at the crucial moment.—Northern Tribune.

Powassan Editor Enjoys Four-pound Speckled Trout

(Powassan News) The editor is indebted to Mr. E. L. Skuce for a four-pound speckled trout which he had for dinner on Sunday. (It was caught on Saturday). It was a beauty and it tasted as good as it looked. Coming as it did so soon after the "C.O.D." hen's egg affair, our hopes have been revived and we are inclined to discount the "bad omen" idea advanced by the Timmins Advance.

PAT GOT THE JOB

Pat was looking for a job at the docks, and seeing a steamer in he asked to see the captain in hope of getting a decent job. After a while Pat was conducted to the captain's apartment. "Well," asked the captain, "what do you want?"

Pat: "Can you find me a decent job?" Captain: "What can you do?" Pat: "Anything, sir." The captain handed Pat a coil of rope and hoping to take a rise out of him, said: "Find three ends to that coil." Pat (showing the two ends of the coil): "Here's two,—and swinging the coil into the sea,—that is the third end of it." He got the job.—Montreal Herald.
