He took down details of the man but did not think anything was wrong. He learned that Plits had been to Dr. Atkinson's the night before, August 8th, and found nothing further until Tuesday, the 13th, when the man's body was found.

Dr. Atkinson said Plits had consulted him and appeared worried over a supposed disease he was convinced he had. The doctor's assurance that he was not suffering from any disease did not seem to penetrate, as the doctor heard him say he was too young to die for to be Separate Schools finished). He appeared normal mentally and made no mention of suicide. (Continued on Page Two)

These girls, ranging in age from ten to sixteen years, showed enterprise as well as patriotic effort. On their own initiative they made candy and home-made baking and lemonade, and on Tuesday they conducted a booth at the Imperial bank corner. They netted $24.72 which they turned over to the Red Cross.. They would have made more, only the plan was so popular that they were "sold out" several times and had to drop the selling to get more supplies. They intend to hold another similar event in the near future and aim to make $50,00 next time.
