In contrast with the scores of jobs that offered in those days the youth of the following generation had to seek long and far for anything at all to do. The adventurous ones amongst them roamed the country in box cars or hitch-hiked the highways learning things that were more likely to be harmful than useful. More important, they became rather hopeless, lacking wages and what goes with stability. It seems pitiful that while the government could not do anything for them then it is willing to spent billions now for another purpose.
