

BEAUTIFUL COLONIAL TYPE

This attractive home is the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Shields, Bruce Avenue, South Porcupine.

Painting the Radiators to Match Walls of Room

(By Phyllis Field Cooper)

Question: We are planning on redecorating our entire home this spring and as we have radiators, we have been wondering whether we should have them finished with gilt or aluminium paint, or should they be painted to match the walls?

Answer: Where radiators are exposed it is always preferable to paint them to match the walls. The least conspicuous one can make them, the better it is for one's decorative scheme. Are any of your radiators so located that they could be covered and built into a bookcase, window seat, or wardrobe unit? This often proves a very excellent way of concealing unsightly radiators and adding to the decoration and convenience of rooms. Ornamental covers of metal and enameled to match walls or woodwork offer another solution to your problem.

More homes are needed in Timmings. The demand for homes is greater than the supply.

Attention Carpenters!

OUR STOCK OF BUILDING HARDWARE AND CARPENTERS' TOOLS IS COMPLETE. MAKE THIS YOUR HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL SUPPLIES.

GYPROC
WINDOW SCREENS
FENCING
CEMENT
SCREEN DOORS
GATES, ETC.

Painters
Supplies
We carry one of the largest stocks in the North.

CHAS. PIERCE & SONS LTD.
HARDWARE JOBBERS
Timmins
16 Third Ave.
Phone 16

House Is As Old As Plumbing

Says C.I.P.H.

There is no doubt but that the public of today judges a house by its conveniences, points out the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating, and many of the conveniences we enjoy today were undreamed of even a decade ago.

For instance, an indication of the better plumbing conveniences available today is the fact that more innovations have been made in the bathtub in the last five years than in the previous five hundred, says the Institute. Other bathroom fixtures have likewise undergone amazing transformations.

A few years ago, when a home was being built, the home builder told the architect just to "put in a bathroom." The result was the average old-type bathroom still seen in thousands of Canadian homes, with its high tank closet, tub on legs, tiny wall hung lavatory and conspicuous hot water tank, grab in appearance, awkward in arrangement and difficult to keep clean.

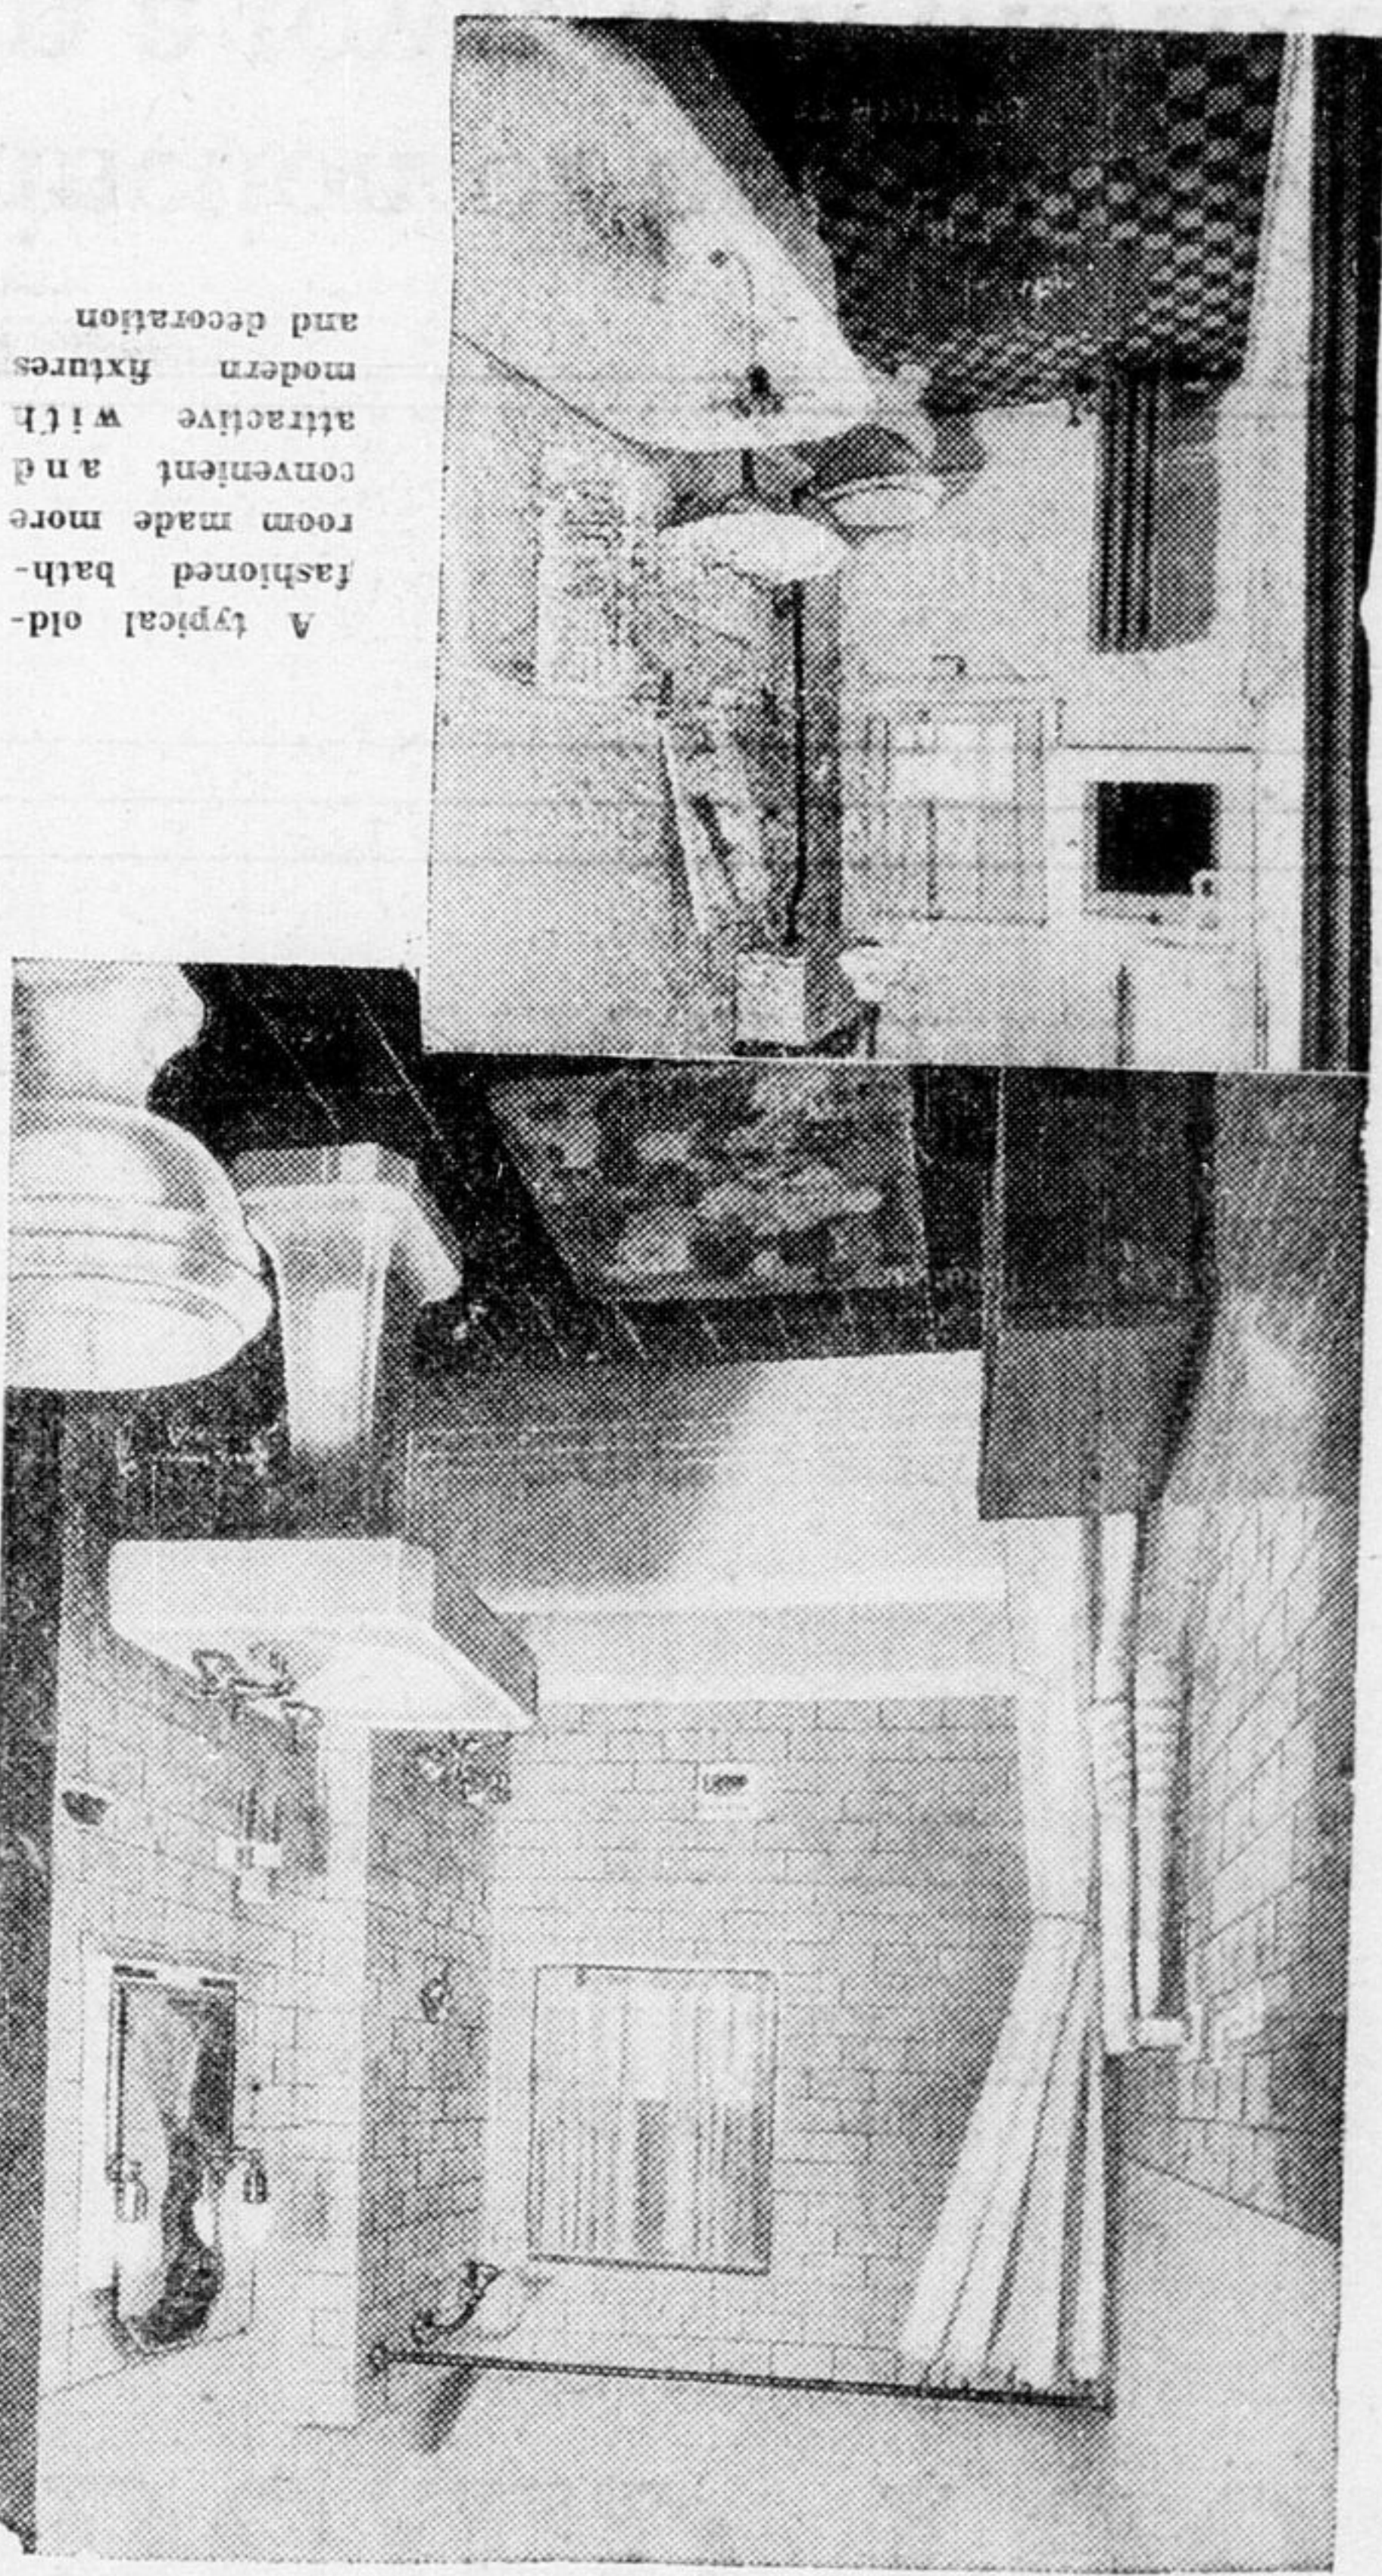

Greater utility and more beauty in less space have now become the key-notes of the modern bathroom, says the Institute.

The flat-bottomed cast-iron enamel-ed bathtubs of today are available with wide ledges or bath-bars for toilet articles. They are streamlined for safety as well as beauty, have grab-bars either on the tub or wall for emerging and entering, and are built wide to provide a good footing. Being of the "built-in" type, which will fit conveniently into the end or corner of a room, they eliminate all problems of keeping under-surfaces clean and free from dust.

Porcelain lavatories have graceful pedestal bases or slender chromium legs, are built with wide shelf backs for convenience in placing toilet articles, or with matching under-cabinets which provide ample space for storing soaps, brushes, medicines, linens, etc. If it hasn't a shower it isn't a modern bathroom.

The home magazine, "American Home" has twenty pages in the current issue on "Family Vacations," pointing out places of interest and attraction in the United States. And boldly displayed in large type are the words:—"And don't forget our good neighbourhood, Canada. She, too, has beautiful—and American dollars will mean much there this summer.

Sometimes a new "dress" for the home is as necessary as a new dress for the lady of the house.

A typical old-fashioned bathroom made more convenient and attractive with modern fixtures and decoration

Bathroom Conveniences Set Standard For Home

Advises Visit This Year To Good Neighbour Canada

The home magazine, "American Home" has twenty pages in the current issue on "Family Vacations," pointing out places of interest and attraction in the United States. And boldly displayed in large type are the words:—"And don't forget our good neighbourhood, Canada. She, too, has beautiful—and American dollars will mean much there this summer.

Sometimes a new "dress" for the home is as necessary as a new dress for the lady of the house.