

Former Convict Given Heavy Term in Court When He Pleads Guilty

Nine Months at Hard Labour is Sentence on Charge of Stealing Fifty-Dollar Radio and Two-Dollar Alarm Clock. Man Had Long Record Dating from 1926.

Roland Pilon's long criminal record didn't stand him in good stead at Tuesday's police court when he appeared on a charge of breaking, entering and theft, before Magistrate Atkinson. Last week he appeared on the same charge and pleaded guilty but Deputy-Chief Jack Downey asked that the case be remanded till this week.

This week the man's criminal record was presented to the court and he threw a different light on the picture. Pilon had been sentenced several times in Sudbury and other towns on the same charge and his record dated as far back as 1926. One time he was given a two-year term in penitentiary on the same charge but the jail terms seemed to do him little good.

Magistrate Atkinson asked for some evidence before passing sentence on the man and he got it. The police admitted that they had been lucky to catch Pilon. They had been conducting a search in a man's room in a Third Avenue rooming house when Pilon, who had been drinking approached them and admitted a theft. The police had been looking for a radio and a clock that had been reported stolen and though they didn't find what they were looking for, Pilon produced another radio and clock that had not yet been reported as stolen to the police. The radio and clock that Pilon had belonged to a man by the name of James Purdy, living at 163 Spruce street north. The police conducted the search at 73 Third Avenue and at the time that they were searching the house, Purdy was in Vancouver and didn't even know that anything had been stolen from him.

After Pilon's long record was read to him in court, he admitted that it was all too true and asked if he could take the witness box and say something for himself. This request was granted and the man said that it had been a hard road for him to travel and that fight as he would against crime, every once in a while he would weaken. He had been trying to go straight and at the time of the theft he was working, painting a house. The weather put a stop to his work for a few days and in that time he had spent practically all of his money that he had. He then took to drink and while under the influence of the liquor he had struck upon the idea of committing a robbery to get some money. He had entered the home of James Purdy and stolen the radio and clock and was going to sell them but the police came into the picture too soon for that to materialize. He asked for leniency.

The magistrate then looked over the man's record again and asked the crown attorney what he thought of the idea. The crown attorney asked what the value of the goods was and he was told that it was in the neighbourhood of fifty dollars. The crown attorney asked that the sentence be severe as previous jail sentences had done Pilon little good. The magistrate then passed sentence of nine months hard labour and warned the man that if he didn't develop better control over his impulses he would spend most of his life in jail.

Other charges of theft at Tuesday's court included a large number of charges against a band of youngsters who have been engaged in the ticklish business of dealing automobiles. Some of the band were juveniles and some were just over sixteen, the juvenile age limit. These fellows weren't making any money out of the thefts but were just taking the cars to have some fun. Lloyd Doolan, sixteen years old, was the hardest hit of all. He appeared in court just a few months ago on the same charge and at that time the crown attorney wrote to the attorney-general asking for special permission to let Doolan off with a suspended sentence. This permission was granted and Doolan was released when his father signed a two hundred dollar bond that his boy would keep out of trouble for a year.

Gerald Durocher, another youngster just out of juvenile classification, was facing three charges connected with stealing cars. Some of the charges were laid jointly against him and Doolan. He fared better than his friend when the crown attorney consented to withdraw the charges and have the police prefer less serious charges of taking a car without the owner's consent. Two other young fellows, Lucien Goulet and Real Villancourt, also had the charges against them withdrawn.

The charges against the four young lads developed from a fine bit of police work done by Constable Harold Brown. While the constable was off duty and resting in his home he happened to see a couple of cars pass the house. He immediately recognized one of the cars as a stolen automobile and gave chase, clad only with trousers and bedroom slippers. He was successful in capturing the youths and holding them till the arrival of the police. An investigation carried on from that point by Detective Ernie Gagnon resulted in tying the four youths up with the thefts of nine cars since the end of August.

Gregory T. Evans, Timmins lawyer, made a plea for leniency for Doolan on Tuesday saying that the boy's father had steady employment for the youth now and that it would probably keep him out of trouble. If the youth were sent to jail and allowed to mix with hardened criminals the ends of justice would not be served. He asked that the bond that the youth was released on before be raised and he was certain that the youth would mend his ways. The great plea for leniency didn't fall on deaf ears as the magistrate sentenced Doolan to one year on one charge of theft of an automobile. On the other charges the magistrate agreed to have the charges changed to taking an automobile without the owner's consent and then he passed sentence of six months on each of them with the sentences to run concurrently.

In juvenile court the next day it was found that Doolan had not been the guilty party in this particular case and this charge was withdrawn, so Doolan has only six months to serve on other charges.

Albert A. Portelance, charged with theft by conversion was convicted and remanded a week for sentence. He was defended by Dean Kester, who made a plea for leniency for the man and asked that the sentence be passed next week. Mr. Kester said that Portelance had spent practically all of his life here and was married with eight children and asked that the magistrate be as lenient as possible so that the man's family would not suffer.

Charges of robbery with violence against three Timmins taxi drivers were dismissed by Magistrate Atkinson at Tuesday's court when the main crown witness, the man who was supposed to have been robbed, failed to appear in court. Crown Attorney Caldwell asked for an adjournment on the grounds that the witness had seen the police only two days before the trial and at that time he was quite anxious to go ahead with the case. The strange disappearance of this witness took the bottom right out of the charge and without him there was no sense in proceeding with the case. The crown attorney asked for the remand and said that though he couldn't promise to have the all-important witness next week, he would do everything in his power to find him in that time.

Defence Counsel, Gregory T. Evans, asked that the case be proceeded with at once because it would be impossible for him to appear for another three weeks. The magistrate finally decided that the charges would be dismissed and if the witness could be located new charges could be laid against the men.

Man Convicted on Careless Driving Charge at Court

Rudolph Leonard, a miner, was in police court this week, charged with careless driving. Though he had counsel, he almost talked himself into a conviction when he took the stand in his own defence. His counsel Dean Kester, did everything he could to stop the man from talking but the words just had to come out and come out they did.

Leonard had been involved in a car accident at the corner of Elm street, south and Kimberley avenue, on September 3rd. The car in which he was driving was travelling west on Kimberley avenue and as it entered the intersection it collided with the rear end of a truck owned by Smith and Elston. The impact turned the truck around in the opposite direction. Police investigated the accident and almost at the same time that they had arrived an insurance adjuster also appeared on the scene. The appearance of the insurance adjuster on the scene was one of the important factors in giving the man a dismissal. The defence argument was that the court was being used as a collection agency.

The driver of the truck gave his evidence, saying that he had not noticed the car coming at him till he was half way across the intersection. He had then speeded up in an attempt to avoid being hit but he was hit on the back end of the truck and the impact turned the truck around in the opposite direction. The driver of the car said that he had been travelling very slowly and was in the intersection first. It was the other car that hit him, he said. He was unable to show the crown attorney how he had turned the truck around though. He said that the insurance adjuster who was at the scene was sore at him and was trying to frame him. He added that he had driven a car over 500,000 miles in four provinces and two states and had never been in trouble.

Passengers in Leonard's car were called to the stand and they testified that Leonard was driving slowly when he entered the intersection. They couldn't explain how the truck got turned around either.

In the summing up, the defence suggested that the case was just brought into court so that the insurance could be collected. After very little deliberation the case was thrown out.

Wilbert Langdon was also facing a charge of careless driving and he was found guilty and fined ten dollars and costs. The evidence presented by Constable Beacock was that Langdon had pulled out from the curb in front of Bucovetsky's store without giving any warning and had collided with a car being driven by Don Pierini. The damage wasn't very much but Mr. Pierini wanted the driver of the other car to pay for it.

The defence again brought out the fact that Pierini had approached the driver of the other car and asked him if he would settle the damages out of court. According to the defence witnesses he had left the impression that if the damages were paid out of court the charges would be dropped. Defence's excuse for hitting the other car was that there was a car double parked in front of his and he was unable to see the other car approach. The crown had brought a passenger of the car driven by Langdon to the stand and she had testified that the Langdon car was stopped when it was hit. The crown contended that this was impossible as the other car would have to travel sideways in order to hit the car.

In the summing up of the case the defence contended that the evidence of the crown witness who said that the Langdon car was stopped when it was hit clinched the case for the accused. The crown countered with the remark that the testimony of any one witness didn't necessarily have to be accepted if there was any doubt in the magistrate's mind that it was untrue.

The magistrate based his finding on the evidence of the policeman who was only fifteen feet away when the accident happened and find the man $10 and costs.

Sam Pinkleman, facing a similar charge, had his case adjourned for a week. Other traffic charges included one man passing through a red light who was fined five dollars and costs. Another man had dirty marks on his car and he had the charges against him withdrawn. Three persons paid fines of a dollar and costs for illegally parking their cars while two persons facing the same charge had not yet been served and one was adjourned.

Fall and Busy Summer Season Cause Shortage of Vegetables at Market

With the coming of the early fall, the booths at the Timmins Market are no longer filled with the produce supplied by district farmers, although those who still regularly visit the market bring along very good supplies of the finest vegetables, meats, and flowers, that a shopper could hope to purchase.

Coniston Wins the Right to Meet the Bombers in Finals

Coniston Buzzers captured the fifth and final game of their play-off series with the Beattie Miners on Thursday afternoon in Duparquet when south-paw Oren Price pitched the Buzzers to their second straight shut-out over the Miners. He set Beattie batters down with three scratch hits and was never in serious trouble at any time.

The win by Coniston eliminated a fighting Beattie team who had been given little chance against the powerful Nickel Belt winners. Beattie had been given a bye into the finals by the Northern Baseball Association and they forced the strong Sudbury delegation to the limit.

While passing from the baseball picture for 1941, the Beattie team committed 10 errors. Added to those miscues, Coniston had nine safe hits from two Beattie pitchers.

The series between Coniston and Beattie was an up and down battle from start to finish. When Coniston won, it did so by a large score. In the three games the Nickel Belts took Beattie was able to score only one run. The Quebeckers won the first game 8-7, and the fourth game 4-2.

A MECHANICAL JOB

The young man decided to write a novel, his first venture, and he made inquiries concerning the requirements from an experienced author.
"How long does a novel have to be?" asked the youth.
"Oh, perhaps 60,000 words," answered the author.
"Ah," beamed the embryo scrivener, "then mine's finished!"—Exchange.

Toronto Telegram.—Many of us have a capital idea, but are short on capital.

Two members of the Timmins Police force are going to receive letters of commendation from the Timmins Police Commission. Both of the officers showed outstanding ability in recent investigations and the matter was drawn to the attention of the Police Commission by Leo H. Gagnon, Chief of Police. The two officers, Constables Harold Brown and H. C. Emerson, were the topic of discussion for some time after the Commission clerk, Art Eshaw, read the two letters that the chief had written to the Commission.

Constable Harold Brown was responsible for the recovery of nine automobiles and trucks that had been stolen in Timmins since the end of August. He had been sitting in his home while off duty, and saw a car go past; the house that he knew to be stolen. Scam'ly clad he went into the street and followed the vehicle till it stalled on a hill. When he arrived at the scene he had quite a tussle with the juvenile who was driving but he managed to hold him till other members of the police force arrived. The investigation that began with the discovery of that car led to the recovery of eight other stolen cars.

Constable H. C. Emerson was sent out to investigate a hit and run accident that had badly damaged a parked car. Arriving at the scene the constable collected a bit of paint off a pole that the car had hit and part of a door handle. With that scant bit of evidence he discovered who the car belonged to and the next court day he had the guilty party in court. A fine of fifty dollars and costs was paid by the man involved in the accident.

The Board of Commissioners discussed the two constables for some time and finally decided that, as no remuneration could be voted to the men, they could at least write a letter to each of them commending them for their fine work. The incidents will also be entered on their conduct cards.

Another matter that was discussed at length was the case of a former police officer in Timmins, Marcel Perreault. Perreault was called into the army under the National Mobilization Act a couple of months ago and since that time he has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force. The Commissioners decided that all they could do was to start counting his time as a member of the Timmins police force so that he would lose no seniority. The chief suggested that a pay allowance be granted to the man but the Board of Commissioners found that it could not be done.

Another letter was received from the Chief of Police regarding his trip to the convention of Police Chiefs of Canada, held in Winnipeg last week. The chief said that the trip was worth while taking just to hear a couple of the addresses that were given. He also mentioned that some fine films were shown demonstrating how the policemen of London act under fire. During an air raid the communications between policemen and the head office are cut off and these men are still very effective. The police were especially effective at night, he said. In another column of today's paper there will be found an account of the convention attended by the chief.
