New Film "How Green Was My Valley" Truly a Great Picture

Starring Walter Pidgeon and Maureen O'Hara.

A miner, boxer, soldier, actor, a transport officer, and now a writer—all of these occupations have made Mr. Richard Llewellyn one of the most colourful literary figures of our day.

He dedicated his book thus: "To my father and the land of my fathers." As you might gather from this, Llewellyn and his family were not only Welsh, but were proud of it.

management, dabbling in printing, sculpture, and film-making; five years in the Army, partly spent in India; some boxing; a little reporting; more film work, learning everything from acting to production; and anxious months with no work at all—such was the record of Richard Llewellyn up to two years ago.

It so happened that while Llewellyn was stubbing his reluctant pencil under the trees of St. James', a London publisher by the name of Michael Joseph was having his photograph taken.

Concerning the story itself, Llewellyn says, "There is not a character or incident in the book that does not have some basis in fact, although every scene and character is a composite creation."

He has used the novelist's license to rearrange Nature. His Valley is not one valley, but a dozen.

he describes it, in any one of a hundred communities. Llewellyn is now at work on a second novel which is a complete change from "How Green Was My Valley."

Humphrey Bogart in New Role in "All Through the Night"

Heroes take a beating. That's Humphrey Bogart's story and he's stuck with it. Warner Bros. decided that after viewing his heroic histrionics in "The Maltese Falcon" and his latest picture "All Through the Night," another milestone in Bogart's screen regeneration had been achieved.

"I'm just beginning to realize that this hero stuff is swell for taking bows, but for the actor it just means more work per picture," commented Bogart when a reporter visiting the set of "All Through the Night" asked for a statement on his reel reformation.

March 31st Deadline for Several Regulations

The deadline is March 31st. Not only the final date for income tax returns and the last day gas may be bought without a ration card, it is the final date that all companies and individuals who are required to be licensed under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board order No. 78.

A North Bay Regional Office statement issued today said that while for the most part Northern Ontario persons had complied promptly with the licensing regulations, there are still a number who have not done so.

Children's Party on Wednesday by "Aunt Eva"

Miss Eva Bilsky of Ottawa Entertains Children from England.

A painting autographed by seven local children, five of them from England, now making their war-time homes in the Porcupine camp, will be taken to Ottawa by Miss Eva Bilsky, or "Aunt Eva" as she is known wherever her children's stories are read.

The delicacies which are so dear to children formed the supper which was served during the afternoon. A table bearing these many goodies, was centred with the painting, and adorned with green lighted tapers and spring flowers.
