Globe and Mail:—How indicative of one of mankind's weaknesses is the fact that any individual who sets up a gambling place has no trouble at all in finding victims. Many people seem to delight in being fleeced.

The following from the Dominion Post Office Dept. tells its own story and gives its own moral:—

Ten parcels have just been removed from the mails by the Base Post Office with contents badly damaged — some because glass bottles of jam or pickles had broken; others because tins of jam, carelessly closed with the lids merely pressed in, had opened. One parcel containing a two-pound tin of corn syrup had opened and the sticky mess created can be imagined.

Another parcel sent to one of the men overseas containing jam merely packed inside a cardboard carton of the type ordinarily used for ice-cream. How the sender expected such a flimsy packet would withstand even ordinary handling to say nothing of overseas transmission, puzzled the Postal authorities.

The sending of perishable or fragile articles through the mails to our Armed Forces, not only endangers the other contents of the parcel but frequently damages other parcels in the mail bag, thus causing delay or total loss with consequent disappointment to the men for whom such gifts are intended. With a steadily rising volume of mails to be handled, requiring every moment of the Postal Corps time, improperly packed parcels result in extra labour to repack, recondition and readress the damaged packages — in addition to the extra time spent in advising the sender and addressee of what had occurred.

The Post Office Department again emphasizes the fact that parcels containing fragile articles or perishable goods likely to spoil within the time required for transportation and delivery, should not be mailed.

All parcels should be fully prepaid, securely packed in strong containers, wrapped in several layers of thick paper and tied with strong twine. A slip containing the address of the member of the Armed Forces and the return address of the sender should also be enclosed among the contents. The sender's address should appear on the cover. Completed Customs Declaration forms are required on all parcels for our Troops abroad. All parcels should be clearly and correctly addressed in ink — the use of the misleading abbreviations being avoided.

Speaking in commendation of Lieutenant Governor Hulse, the speaker remarked on his energy and interest and the accomplishments that resulted.

Special mention was made by Governor Hulse of his home city of Ottawa. The great building expansion in that city gave graphic realization of the intensity of the present war. He also referred to the tremendous task undertaken by the government at Ottawa to promote the war effort. He ventured the opinion that the government was sometimes criticized without sufficient thought.

To the question, "Why should we be Kiwanians in wartime?" the speaker gave the answer that 75 per cent of Kiwanians work to-day is direct war service work. Kiwanis Clubs have numerous blood clinics. Nearly half of the Ottawa Club membership, for example, had the Red Cross badge for donating blood at least three times. The Kiwanis had helped in all war services — Red Cross, Savings Stamps, Bonds, Salvage, Air Cadets, and every other activity.

Oil Stolen from Service Station by "Honest" Thief

Last week Joseph Hewitt, who operates a gas station at the north end of New Liskeard, reported to the police that his premises had been broken into by the smashing of a window and the forcing of a door. Careful investigation showed that nothing had been taken except a quart of oil and the can had been returned and with it forty cents in cash to pay for the oil.

Broken Bottles and Open Jam Tins Do Damage in Mails

The main thought in the address of Governor Charles H. Hulse, Governor of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime District of Kiwanis, on his official visit to the Timmins and South Porcupine Kiwanis Clubs on Thursday evening last week at the joint meeting at the Empire hotel, Timmins, was that during this trying time of war the chief purpose of the Kiwanis Club should be to build and maintain morale, to do all possible to hasten victory for the cause of right, and to plan for postwar reconstruction so that a better world should be built for humanity and for progress on the ruins of the present.

In introducing Governor Hulse, of Ottawa, Lieutenant-Governor W. O. Langdon, of Timmins, touched on the hard and effective work the Governor had given for Kiwanis and the inspiration to service he had shown to others. Lieutenant-Governor Langdon also made reference to the sorrow there had come to this community in the casualties reported and expressed special sympathy and comfort to Kiwanian Austin Neame, whose son was recently reported as among the missing.

Before commencing his address to the gathering of Kiwanis members from the Timmins and South Porcupine clubs, Governor Hulse presented Lieutenant-Governor Langdon with a Perfect Attendance tab.

There was then one minute's silence observed in sorrowful honour for the Canadian soldiers who had recently died in the service of their country.

In opening his address Governor Hulse commented on the hospitality of the North. He had been greatly impressed by the kindness and the friendliness of the people of the North. Even those who had no connection with the Kiwanis appeared to have the Kiwanis ideal of goodwill and geniality.

He referred as an example to the reaction in the public mind when asked to make weekly contributions to the purchase of war savings certificates. Sounds Note of Optimism in Address to Local Life Insurance Association Life Insurance Has Stood the Test of Time, Wars, Epidemics, Depressions and Other Ills, says Mr. Plewman of Metropolitan Life. Sees New Spirit of Thrift Growing.

There was a strong note of optimism, supported by facts and logic, in the address given by Mr. Edward Plewman, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Life, to the luncheon meeting of the Timmins Life Underwriters' Association at the Empire hotel, Timmins, on Thursday night. "Life insurance," he said "has stood the test of time, wars, depression, epidemics. Why therefore should we take too pessimistic a viewpoint at this time when a life insurance dollar means more than it ever did before."

Mr. Plewman said that it should never be overlooked that every obstacle appears greater and graver in anticipation than it proves in reality. He referred as an example to the reaction in the public mind when asked to make weekly contributions to the purchase of war savings certificates. "It was used quite frequently as an objection to buying life insurance," he said, "but now we hear nothing of the deduction from salaries for this purpose, unless, of course, your prospect with pride, produces his certificates to show you what he has saved in the last couple of years, without any apparent effort. Has not the same thing happened in connection with the Victory Bonds? In other words the people have quickly adjusted themselves to these compulsory obligations, and the demands upon them up to now have made little, if any, difference to us in our business. On the contrary it has made the people more thrifty, which is a quality in itself essential to anyone to whom we intend to sell our product."

Mr. Plewman's address was on the topic, "Insurance Selling in the Light of the new Income Tax Amendment." He admitted that the amendment was causing some concern in some circles of insurance underwriters, but he urged all to think the matter over carefully and try to understand the new legislation from the broad outlook. He thought that they would find that people would adjust themselves to the new reduction in income. To listen to the thoughtless and ill-considered rumours of some showed little faith in the business of life insurance, in the country, or in ourselves. He asked all to recall to mind and to analyze the changes in the standards of living that have already taken place. "You will see," he said, "that your prospect is not driving his car as much as he used to do, and with the poor outlook for his future purchases of accessories, gasoline and tires, in all probability he will not drive his car very much longer. Perhaps, he will not consider it to his advantage to renew his license for next year. In that case there will be a saving by him of $300 or $400 a year, and no outlay for a new car. In view of the number of cars in operation this might be a good thought to keep in mind to meet some of the objections to be raised. Then, there are other ways of saving brought about by the fact that it will be increasingly difficult to purchase domestic electrical appliances, refrigerators, radios, washing machines, etc., which should be renewed periodically under normal conditions. Besides this people, especially in the North Country have not the outstanding debts that used to be popular, and a number of them are the recipients of the cost of living bonus recently increased."

Dealing with the local situation, the speaker said that there had been a number of changes in this town; a lot of men have answered the call to the colours, and because of this their families have moved to Southern Ontario and Quebec a number of men have found employment in war industries in the South, the resulting situation meaning a drop in rentals here. On the other hand, however, the jobs left vacant by the men leaving here and being filled by lads of 17 to 20, who, because of their youth and inexperience, provide an important field for service by the life insurance man. A number of these young men, the speaker continued, are working to help support the family while the older brothers and the fathers are overseas, making life insurance that much more important.

"With these changes, and others I have not mentioned," the speaker said, "there is only one thing for us to do, and that is to change with the times—and not against the times."

"We must also bear in mind," the speaker said in conclusion, "that we are the only salesmen on whom the Dominion Government has placed its stamp of approval, and that the Life insurance business has been accorded unique recognition. The new Income Tax Amendment gives an opportunity for us to sell insurance, as always, on the basis of need and value, and to give new policy holders insurance protection that is vital in
