GORDON HEAD OFFICERS' TRAINING CENTRE

(By Capt. Bruce M. Pearce, Public Relations Officer, M. D. 1)

You don't become an officer in the Canadian Army today simply by being granted a commission and donning a smart new uniform.

Eight Public Relations Officers, including the writer, from military districts across Canada found that out recently when they were numbered in a class of 30-day candidates at the Officers' Training Centre, Gordon Head, B. C. It was an experience that we will not soon forget, giving us an insight into the many phases of training that go to fit an officer for the gruelling struggle that lies ahead.

We had the opportunity to rub shoulders with boys who had just arrived back from England after two years overseas, lads of the first and second Canadian divisions who had earned the right to qualify for commissions from the ranks. Marching side by side were boys from office, factory, farm and university, from Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and intervening points, French-Canadian lads from Montreal and Quebec, young men fresh from the Reserve Army units and some who had had little army experience but who were qualifying for the Pay Corps, Army Service Corps or Ordnance. Every officer of the Canadian Army today, must take a three-month qualifying course at an Officers' Training Centre. Those in The Dental Corps and Public Relations take a 30-day course.

For many of us the first week or two was a rather trying experience. We took considerable punishment. Six-mile route marches in full battle order and a half hour of strenuous bayonet practice do not come easily to the novice, fresh from a sedentary occupation. When you go at a steady pace from dawn to dusk, you are do-tired when "lights out" is sounded, probably long before. Once the kinks are out of the muscles and you become accustomed to the daily routine, however, camp life assumes a new attractiveness. Gordon Head is the Officers' Training Centre for Western Canada, but many potential officers are coming here from the east to relieve the congestion at the sister training centre in Brockville. Incidentally both centres are undergoing a big expansion program to take care of the constantly-increasing influx of officers candidates. Located in a picturesque setting not far from Victoria, Gordon Head, has been in operation since the spring of 1942 and has already graduated hundreds of virile, intensively-trained young men for posts of leadership and responsibility in the Canadian Army.

During our four weeks at Gordon Head, the sun shone almost unintermittently and the nights were delightfully cool. Training was carried out under ideal conditions. Having had the opportunity of visiting a majority of training centres and army schools in Eastern Canada, we are free to say that we have not seen a more orderly and efficiently-conducted camp than Gordon Head. Discipline is strict and not a waking moment is wasted. The candidates are thoroughly imbued with the seriousness of the task which they are undertaking and with their responsibility to show an example to the men, whom they will command. Certainly Lieut. Colonel A. D. Wilson D. S. O., V. D., and his staff deserve the highest praise for Gordon Head a model military training centre.

Actually it is 'going back to school' for the O.T.C. pupils. A substantial part of each day is given over to classroom lectures on map reading, military law, army organization, anti-gas protection, field engineering and allied subjects. That is the academic side. In a practical way the student learns to march, how to slope and present arms, how to handle a bayonet, to fire a Bren gun, to don a gas mask in eight seconds to dig trenches, to ride a motor cycle, to handle an anti-tank gun, to march by compass at night and to fire a pistol. In mutual instruction he becomes accustomed to handling a squad of men and to intelligently present a military lecture to his comrades. The practical work is done under the watchful eye of a Staff Sergeant, whose tongue can still carry a sharp sting. The classes are divided into platoons, with three of the students each day acting as platoon commander, platoon sergeant and platoon corporal. An O. T. C. staff of-

A Red Shield mobile canteen pills up at an English airport to give boys of the R.C.A.F. a hot drink and a snack on their arrival back from "a trip." This is but one part of The Canadian Salvation Army's Christian service to humanity... Every Army must have a base, and the Canadian Salvation Army's base, whether for work among the troops in Canada, in Britain, at Dieppe or among the needy and the sick in this community is the Home Front right here in Canada. It is this base which Canadians will support when they subscribe to the Red Shield Home Front Appeal this month.

Houston, who is leaving this month for a new home in Toronto. There were some 70 ladies present, all intimate friends of the guest of honor, and the home was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers. Mrs. Murphy, and Mrs. Houston received the guests and during the afternoon, Mrs. J. E. McCaig poured tea, while Mrs. W. C. Arnold presided at the tea table. Assisting in serving the guests were Mrs. C. F. Tuer, Mrs. Russell Murphy and Mrs. W. E. Bagshaw.

Mrs. Houston was presented with a beautiful desk set, Mrs. Arnold making the accompanying address of good wishes and regrets at the leaving of the guest of honor, and in reply Mrs. Houston expressed her appreciation of the friendship which had prompted the event. She had lived in Haileybury for many years and taken an active part in all social and community activities, and her friends and acquaintances all regret her departure."

SORTING THE SOAKS

Outside a Geraldton beer parlor a taximan was hailed by a bartender, who packed four "jolly" guests into the cab.

"That one on the left goes to Benner Avenue," he exclaimed; "the one next to him to John Street. The one on the front seat to Queen Street and the last one to the MacLeod bunkhouse."

With an undaunting nod, the taximan drove off. In a few minutes he was back at the hotel and hailed the bartender.

"Would you mind sorting out these blokes again?" he asked. "I hit a bump at Pine Ridge." — Geraldton Times.

ABOUT TURN!

The young man in the dock was charged with disorderly conduct. Eyeballing him coldly, the magistrate asked his profession.

"My client is a professional footballer," explained the defendant's lawyer; "he plays outside-right for his team."

"He does, does he?" said the magistrate sternly. "Well, he'll have to change his position. He'll be right inside for the next 14 days!" — Sudbury Star.
