Liquor and Traffic Cases Chief Features of Tuesday's Court

Tuesday's police court was featured by liquor and traffic cases and other less serious offences.

John Rozon and Wilfred Mose were charged with keeping liquor for sale in a house in Ogden township. The police found the two men charged and six others drinking beer. Rozon was seen through a window opening what apparently were beer bottles and passing the opened bottles to others in the house. The provincial liquor squad delegation gave evidence regarding traffic to the house in question. The police were quite confident that there was illegality in regard to liquor. One constable told of one man passing something to one of the accused who put it in his pocket. The officer admitted to Greg. Evans, council for the defence, that it might have been money that was so passed. "That's what we strongly suspected," said the officer.

The defence was to the effect that the place was conducted by Wilfred Mose and that Rozon who originally rented the house had given it up, and sold the furniture to Mose. In reply to the statement that Rozon's car was constantly travelling back and forth between the house and the town, and explanation offered was that Rozon did some such travelling to transfer furniture that he had not sold and also at other times to collect a balance owed him by Mose. Rozon denied that his car was travelling back and forth in the attempt to watch the police car. Both Rozon and Mose give evidence on their own behalf. Rozon admitted that he was not working at present but that he conducted a refreshment stand in the summer time. Mose claimed to have been employed at bush work until recently. Rozon held that he had no interest in the house in Ogden, except the amount owed him by Mose. Magistrate Atkinson thought the stories told by the two accused did not agree with the facts of the case. It looked to him as if Rozon were the brains and that Mose was being used as a cover. The constant attendance of Rozon at the place which he had originally rented and equipped and his travelling the roads at all hours was in line with such a theory. Attempt was made to confuse Provincial officer Whitehead as to the colour of Rozon's car. The officer said he knew the motor by its sound as it was around so much. He said the colour of the car was gray. Then Rozon's license card was produced to show that his car was a black one. This point, however, lost most of its force when Crown Attorney Caldwell brought out in cross-examination of Rozon that the accused owned two cars. The magistrate found both men guilty and sentenced each of them to six months' imprisonment. The sentence appeared to be a shock, particularly to Rozon, who had been very ably defended by Greg. Evans.

The four men "found in" the Ogden township house at the time of the raid were each fined $10 and costs. They pleaded guilty.

Another interesting liquor case was the charge against Thompson, a man of permitting drunken police evidence was to the effect that they had found a number of them were very drunk, one woman in particular. Gagnon told the police that they were simply having a party. He could not name all present, however. The story told by a son on the witness stand was somewhat different. He claimed that, with one exception the people drinking were either relatives or friends of his. His father, he said, had not been present until a few minutes before the police arrived. He told Dean Kester, K. C. counsel for the defence, that his father was not working, having been ill. Later, he amended this statement, saying that his father had been trapping recently. Magistrate Atkinson fined Thomas Gagnon $100.00 and costs, declaring the house a public place for a year.

One of the traffic cases taking up considerable time was the charge against Mrs. Harvey of careless driving. The charge was preferred by Ovide Roy, a taxi driver. The case developed from a collision on Third avenue recently in which the taxi car was damaged. Mr. Roy and several witnesses said that Mrs. Harvey came out of a side street, did not stop at the intersection, and this was the cause of the accident. Mrs. Harvey gave evidence to the effect that she did stop at the intersection, and that she was travelling slowly at the time of the accident, so slowly in fact that she was able to stop her car altogether before the collision. Mrs. Harvey explained that the taxi driver could have avoided the accident by turning down the side street, coming to a dead stop as she had done, or travelling in a straight line past the end of her car. Dean Kester, K. C. counsel for Mrs. Harvey, showed that by taking one of these three alternatives Mr. Roy could have avoided the collision. Mr. Kester suggested that Mrs. Harvey's frank and straightforward evidence should be accepted, and in that event there was no evidence at all against her. The Magistrate dismissed the charge.

Conrad and Henry Pelletier were charged with the theft of a watch and $22.00. They pleaded not guilty. The complainant failed to bring a witness to court, and for want of prosecution the magistrate dismissed the charge, saying that if later Mr. Bretton got the necessary corroboration, the case could be relaid.

Four ordinary everyday drinks were fined $10 and costs. One second offender was fined $50 and costs. Speeding over forty miles per hour brought a fine of $45.00 and costs. For illegal parking a fine of $1.00 and costs was imposed.

Having liquor illegally brought a fine of $10 and costs.

Vimy Banquet This Year Most Enjoyable to Date

(Continued From Page One) greater part of the value and the virtue of the Legion rested in the organization's fidelity to the latter part of its title—devotion to the British Empire, its freedom, aspirations and glories, and the adding to this of Service. He pointed out the Service given by the Legion in peace and war. "No returned soldier, sailor or airman can truly claim to be friendless or alone so long as the Legion liveth," he said. He reviewed the work accomplished by the Legion for the men of the last war and being continued for the men of this war, and urged them to be patient at apparent slowness of progress at times, and simply "carry on!"

In replying to this toast President James Cowan said that the proposer of the toast had touched on every line of activity of the Legion, and the purpose of the Legion was to continue its service. "They had no desire, however, to boast of what they were doing, but rather wished like the Navy to be known as the Silent Service. He said the Legion would carry on, doing all it possibly can to help soldiers, sailors and airmen and Canada in general.

Dr. J. B. McClintock, in proposing a toast to "Our Allies," said "while the effort of all the nations was naturally appreciated, it was well to remember that for a time Britain stood alone against the world in arms and saved civilization. Other nations had had to prepare, but Britain unprepared had stood out against all the gangster nations, fearless and bold. In giving honour to our allies, he said we should never forget the great debt the world owes for its free existence to Old Britain.

Fred Wysluchuk, in replying to the toast, urged the need for unity and co-operation. Once he had felt somewhat of a stranger in this, his adopted country, but now he felt he was among friends—was one of this great group of friends. This was the feeling that would help win the war and assure a just and lasting peace, he said. Understanding and friendliness among all people of good will was the need for success.

Harry Scarth, manager of the Timmins branch of the Imperial Bank, and an officer in the Canadian forces in the last war proposed the toast to "The Imperials." He said that Canadians might be inclined to believe that they had the greatest army in the world, but after all there was reason to take off our hats to the Imperials. In the last war the Canadians learned much from these tough old soldiers. The hospitality given the Canadians by the Imperials was something to be remembered. In accordance with population, he noted, the British Isles provided two men for the Armed Forces for every one given by Canada. Mr. H. Scarth referred in words of praise to the gallant service of the Imperials in the last war, and added that the story of the Eighth Army to-day was its own proof of the glory of the Imperials.

Company Sergt-Major W. Wilkinson made a witty reply to the toast to the Imperials. He had serious belief in the Imperials, however, and thought the tough aggregation of fighting men compared favourably with any group on earth. He ventured the opinion that the Imperials would be among the first to enter Berlin and hasten Victory. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Mr. W. H. Pritchard who took occasion to give merited praise to the ladies of the Auxiliary who were doing their part so well, the notable dinner enjoyed that evening being an illustration of their kindness and efficiency. Mr. Pritchard also paid sincere tribute to women in general and the help they so gladly give to every worthy cause and every needed struggle for progress and the right. He referred to the large place they were taking to-day in every line of industry.

Mrs. J. Shaw, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, briefly but sincerely expressed thanks for the kind expressions made by the proposer of the toast.

Ed. Copps, editor of The Press, also responded to a call from the chair, making brief but appropriate reply.

Lieut. Chas. Brown, in Reserve Army uniform, first thanked the ladies for the wonderful banquet provided and then made reference to the call for the Reserve Army. There was a campaign in progress, he said, for two divisions. They may be asked to defend the East or the West coast. From Timmins it was hoped to secure 75 recruits for the Reserve Army. This was a chance for married men or men with other ties, between the ages of 26 and 50 years. The most up-to-date equipment was provided and the best of training. "If you can't go overseas, go Reserve Army" the speaker concluded.

It is worthy of note that all the addresses were well lighted with witty humour and story, and so proved doubly interesting.

Community singing, with W. A. Devine, at the piano was also featured. In this an "Old Imperial," a visitor at the Legion, did his share in leading the singing of some of the songs.

For the musical programme after the toast list, Comrade Fred Curtis made a very effective master of ceremonies. W. A. Devine opened the programme with a classical piano number which was heartily enjoyed. Ron Jones, as usual, was a favourite, singing in fine voice popular numbers like "Old Fashioned Mother of Mine," and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." The theme song of the last Victory Loan was sung by Lieut. W. Roberts of the Algonquins, and in response to the encore, he gave "There'll Always be an England," the gathering joining lustily in the chorus. Capt. Ben Davis, by special request, gave his mirth-provoking rendition of the "Laughing Song," and in response to an encore, obliged with another happy humorous number, "All for One and One for All" was rousing rendered by Comrade Al Martel, and won marked encore. "While London Sleeps," was contributed by a Veteran, formerly in the Coldstream Guards. Capt. Ben Davis, by special request, gave "Rose of No Man's Land." Step-dancing, yodelling and singing by Comrade Mose Jasmer also added to the pleasure of the evening, while one of the big hits of the night was the prelude to an impassioned speech by hysterical Hitler, moustache and all. This amusing impersonation was ably done by Lance-Corp. Thomas of the Algonquins.

A point worthy of note on the musical programme was the fact that every number given received hearty encore on merit. Though much of the programme was impromptu, it was all well done.

The singing of "God Save the King," brought the musical programme to a close, after which adjournment was made to the club rooms downstairs where more community singing was enjoyed.

Prices Board Official Urges Necessary Goods be Purchased

(Continued From Page One) The Wartime Prices and Trade Board was to see that all goods were fairly distributed. The retailer in his turn had to follow the same line. In case any retailer felt that he was not receiving his proper share of any time of goods he should take the matter up with his local branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Working together the Board and the business men could keep the situation in check and assure a square deal for all.

In closing his helpful address Mr. Foreman said that the merchants had a big part in the work of keeping affairs on a fair footing. "You can stop black markets," he said, "and assure a square deal for all while the economic interests of the country are protected for the common welfare," he said.

At Thursday's event, Mr. A. R. Harkness, president of the Timmins Retail Merchants Association, occupied the chair in able way. He welcomed all to the gathering, and introduced the various numbers on the programme.

Mayor J. Emile Brunette complimented the retail merchants on the large and enthusiastic gathering. He hoped they would continue and expand their organizations so that not only would it help conditions in the time of war, but also be of service in the adjustments necessary after Victory comes.

Councillor J. W. Spooner in a brief but effective address introduced the speaker of the evening.

Mr. M. B. Corman, in thanking Mr. Foreman for his helpful address, assured him that not only was he taking away with him the regard of the retail merchants of the town and their appreciation for his address, but also that all retailers here would continue to give full co-operation to the Board in its work.

Mr. J. E. H. Chateauvert moved a vote of thanks to the entertainers whose talented work had added so much of pleasure to the evening.

The entertainment features of the evening were unusually attractive. The first of these numbers, a solo by Mr. L. Jutras set a high standard of excellence. Mr. Jutras has a notable tenor voice of much richness and expressiveness. His first number, "Without a Song," delighted the gathering. As an encore he gave "Sweet Mystery of Life," which was equally well presented. Mr. James Ormiston played the accompaniments.

Another musical feature of the evening were the pleasing selections presented by Gene Mariscotte on the accordion and Jas. Ormiston at the piano.

Outstanding in the entertainment of the evening were the charming dance numbers given by pupils of Mrs. Margaret Easton Shields, "Doty Polkas," with Charlene Corlette, Nancy Ruan, Patricia Thompson, Jacqueline Lyle and Jeanette Bertrand as the graceful little dancers made a genuine hit. Then the solo tap by the charming little Valerie Montgomery won all hearts. The talented little lady, Raywette Brochu, in the "Sweetheart Tap" presented a pleasing number with an ability and grace that made it a very decided success. The same clever group of young ladies that presented "Doty Polkas" also favoured the gathering with "Pickaninny Prance." A solo dance "Shim Sham Shuffle" was given with outstanding spirit and talent by Lois Doolan.

Mrs. Margaret Easton Shields and each of her talented pupils were called to the head of the table and presented with a gift as a token of the appreciation felt for their talented contribution to the programme.
