Some Stories

ARITHMETIC CHALLENGED

"Arithmetic is a science of truth," said the professor earnestly. "Figures don't lie. For instance, if one man can build a house in twelve days, twelve men can build it in one."

"Yes," interrupted a quick-brained student; "then 288 will build it in one hour; 17,280 in one minute, and 1,036,800 in one second. And I don't believe they could lay one brick in that time!"

While the professor was still gasping the smart "ready reckoner" went on:

"Again, if one ship can cross the Atlantic in six days, six ships can cross it in one day. I don't believe that either—so where's the truth in arithmetic?"

DOCTOR'S FACE WAS RED

An Edmonton doctor writes: "This happened to me when I was about to discharge a maternity patient. I told her she should take a tonic to build her up so as to permit her to come back next year for another baby. Much to my confusion, she answered, in front of three laughing patients; 'It'll have to be darned good stuff, because my husband is overseas!' Was my face red?"—Blairmore Enterprise.

SOUNDS FAMILIAR?

A man who had been very good during his earthly life died and went below. As soon as he got to the nether regions he began to give orders for changing the position of the furnaces and bossing theimps around generally.

One of them reported to Satan how the newcomer was behaving. So Satan said to him:

"Here, you act as though you owned this place."

"Certainly I do," said the man. "My wife gave it to me while I was on earth."—North Bay Nugget.

BURIED IN THE ABBEY

(Letter in London Sunday Chronicle)

Sir:—Several years ago I came across, in some paper or other, a letter from a woman who lived at Hove. It told what to me was the most delightful "kid" story I'd ever read—so I cut it out.

Today, when I looked over some old

HANDICAPPED

Said Little Bertie: "Daddy and Mummy are always finding fault with me, and between the two I'm never doing anything right."

"How's that?" asked his chum.

"Mummy wont let me stand on my head and Daddy fusses because I wear out my shoes so fast."

papers, the cutting was unearthed—and here's a copy:

I was to be taken to Westminster Abbey, where, I gathered vaguely, good people, were buried. Just then a small, beloved doll called "Ben" got smashed beyond repair. Before we started for the Abbey I managed to secrete the remains in my pocket, and, when nurse's back was turned, stuffed "Ben" as far as I could behind some huge monument, where for all I know, he may still rest.

His Heroine—"Do you know, papa can't keep his feet still when he hears music?"

Her Hero (timidly)—"Well, please don't play until I get outside."—Sudbury Star.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

"Gus," said Bill, as he caught up with Gus on the way back to camp, "are all the rest of the boys out of the woods yet?"

"Yps," said Gus.

"All six of them?"

"Yes," said Gus.

"And they're all safe?"

"Yep," answered Gus; "they're all safe."

"Then, said Bill, his chest swelling, "I've shot a deer."—Globe and Mail.

We must face these facts in '43

(1) The amount purchased by each individual will need to be much greater than in the last Victory Loan, and . . .

(2) There must be participation by many more Canadians in every walk of life. In order to reach even our minimum objective, MORE people must buy MORE bonds.

I realize that it will call for a supreme effort on the part of every Canadian to meet this demand, that the Fourth Victory Loan will be the greatest financial challenge we have ever faced. Yet we dare not falter now. Unswervingly and relentlessly, we must work and save together. For the results of this Fourth Victory Loan will be the inescapable measure of our determination, our unity of purpose, to achieve complete and overwhelming victory.

I know the strength, the discipline, and the united purpose of my fellow-Canadians. I am confident that we can, and will, meet this challenge.
