Farmer from Hearst Fined for Potatoes Sold Over Ceiling

Other Cases at Police Court Here Tuesday.

At police court at Timmins this week Magistrate Atkinson imposed a fine of $100 and costs or thirty days on P. S. Lapenski, of Hearst, for selling potatoes over the ceiling price set by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. S. C. Platus K.C., counsel for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, told the court after the accused had pleaded guilty that Lapenski had brought a quantity of potatoes to town and according to complaints made had overcharged on each lot sold. In some cases the potatoes had been sold to people who could ill afford to pay overcharges but who had to have potatoes. Lapenski made no defence but promptly paid the fine and costs.

Probably the case that took second place in interest was the charge of assault against Nick Barlika. This case had been remanded for a couple of weeks and the complainant on the stand said that the accused had threatened her unless she withdrew the case. When on the stand in his own behalf Barlika claimed that he had not threatened the lady but admitted that he had interviewed her with the idea of having the case withdrawn. "I was willing to pay the doctor's bill and any other charges simply to avoid trouble," the accused said. The magistrate said that one way to get into serious trouble was to interfere with witnesses or to make threats. The story as told by the complainant was to the effect that the accused had started an argument with her and that she had gotten away from him, but later when she was with some friends in the Star Cafe Barlika had resumed the argument and when she would not answer him he threw the contents of a bottle of "coke" at her, following this up with the bottle itself. The bottle hit her on the head close to the temple and the mark of the bruise made was still visible. The defendant did not help his case any by the conduct of his own defence. Instead of weakening the stories of witnesses he sought by questions to throw reflections on their characters, the questions having no bearing on the assault. Dr. A. S. Porter gave evidence as to dressing the injury to the lady's head and agreed with Crown Attorney S. A. Caldwell that even a slight change in the landing of the blow might have had serious consequences. In his own defence the accused claimed that he had not hit the woman with the bottle but that she had thrown something at him. When asked to explain how the lady's head was injured he suggested that a bottle thrown at him might have accidentally hit her. As the witnesses were positive that Barlika struck the first blow, and the evidence showed him guilty of assault, the magistrate sentenced him to sixty days in jail with hard labour.

There were a number of traffic cases at the court. For failing to remain at the scene of an accident, Filmea Junka was fined $50.00 and costs, and his license suspended for thirty days. Napoleon Paimont on a charge of being drunk in charge of a car was sentenced to ten days, his car ordered impounded for three months and his license suspended for six months. A fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed for speeding. Defective brakes cost another motorist ten dollars and costs. There was a $1 and costs for another man for failing to stop at a stop sign.

Napoleon Migneault was charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency. Police entering his room above the Paradise Cafe found the shoes and other personal clothing of a girl of fourteen in the room, this young lady later coming from the bathroom to claim her articles of clothing. Police claimed that Migneault had told them that he had kept the girl in his room for some days because she had no other place to go. Both Migneault and the girl denied this and other witnesses in the case told similar stories different to what they had given the police to understand were the facts of the case. There being no direct evidence to convict Migneault, the case warned not to interfere with young girls or he would find himself in serious trouble.

There were a few plain and fancy drunks. Two of the garden variety paid the usual ten and costs. A second offender was assessed $50.00 and costs or thirty days, taking the time. A young girl was fined $10.00 and costs for consuming beer while being a minor.

A young fellow who got into a fight with another lad was fined $5.00 and costs for assault, while two young men who got into a friendly fight were fined a similar amount each for disorderly conduct.

Two dog owners paid $1.00 and costs each for allowing their dogs to run at

Funeral on Wednesday of the Late Ed. Peterson

The funeral of the late Edward Peterson, 53 Messines Avenue, took place yesterday. The funeral arrangements were under the direction of Walker's Funeral home.

The late Edward Peterson died on Sunday from a gun shot wound found by the coroner's inquiry to have been self-inflicted. The bullet penetrated the brain tissue and death followed very quickly. It is understood that the young man had been despondent for some time past. Early in the war he made effort to join the Air Force but was rebuffed from this on account of his health. Recently, he received his army call and appeared to worry over that as he had failed to pass his medical for the Air Force.

The dead body of the young man was discovered by his mother, who notified the police. The latter called a doctor who found the young man dead. He had apparently held the rifle at arm's length and fired a shot into his head at the temple.

The late Edward Peterson, was twenty-four years old at the time of death. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. P. Peterson, 53 Messines Avenue, Timmins, one brother now serving in the Canadian Army, and one sister living in Toronto.
