New Mining Act Criticized on Some Special Points

Writers in Globe and Mail Object to a Couple of Sections.

Most of the prospectors in Timmins are well pleased with the provisions and setup of the new mining act now before the Legislature. One old-time prospector says in most points it is exactly what prospectors in this area suggested to the Ontario Mining Commission. Apparently, however, the provisions regarding the brokerage practices carried on by some firms does not meet with such general favour. Sydney Newman, writing in the Globe and Mail has a column of criticism, and Wellington Jeffers the mining editor of The Globe and Mail agrees with many of the points made by Mr. Norman. The fact is, however, that the provisions objected to are due to public disapproval and irritation at certain features. It is doubtful if established brokers will very strongly object to the provisions referred to. As a matter of fact it is the "high-pressure" salesman and the "fly-by-night" fellow that is aimed at. This class has done more harm to the brokerage business in the public estimation than any other influence. However to present both sides of the case the article by Sydney Norman is given herewith:—

About the New Mining Act

The Royal Ontario Mining Commission and the drafters of the new Ontario Securities Act, now before the Provincial Legislature, appear to have made an honest effort to evolve a law more acceptable to those of all walks of life engaged in the industry, and more in line with British concepts of law and justice, but some glaring reversals to bureaucratic autocracy have been permitted to find place and should be expunged. Otherwise injury may be expected to honest effort and expansion of Canadian boundaries of prosperity to the north.

Section 81

Section 81, which repeals all previous acts of the kind, is hailed as a return to democratic ideals. By its adoption, two formerly supposedly inalienable rights will be restored to citizens generally even those engaged in mining promotion, namely the right of appeal to the courts in cases where a party may feel aggrieved by a decision of the commission, and the right to free-bargaining by the individual—even the prospector and promoter—where honestly acquired possessions are involved. The former indefensible practice of escheating such possessions through enforced escrow of shares of stock will be stopped. Repeal of former acts is also belated admission that any attempt to evaluate mining or oil shares in the initial stages, is not only absurd, but impossible.

Section 58

It is Section 58 which proposes the most backward step and clearly trespasses upon the inherent rights of honest men. It provides that no person shall call at any residence, or telephone from within Ontario to any residence within or outside Ontario, for the purpose of trading or seeking to trade in securities, unless the recipient of the call or message is a close personal friend, a business associate a customer with whom the would-be trader has been in the habit of doing business in securities, or one who has specifically requested information in writing. It would be but one short step to denial of the use of T.T.C. street cars and buses by any one who could not prove to conductors that he was not on a stock-selling trip.

This provision transcends in autocracy, if not in absurdity, anything of the kind ever incorporated in the blue-sky laws of the United States, or the destructive regulations and rules of the Securities Exchange Commission, that super-bureaucracy of the United States. In fact, legislators of that country have been far too wise to incorporate provisions of the kind in any such laws as adopted by 47 States of the Union knowing full well that they and the acts in which they were incorporated would be declared unconstitutional as soon as competent courts could get at them. If there are any such words as "ultra vires" left in the Canadian legalistic dictionary the same fate should await them here. Attempts to deny honest men the use of the appliances of science and invention that have expedited business the world over are not only abrogation of inherent rights in any civilized country, but impractical at the same time.

Section 15 of the new act may not be ultra vires, but it may undeniably prove destructive, besides being quite unnecessary, in view of the powers the act seeks to confer upon the three-man commission. It provides that registration as broker, investment counsel or salesman shall be denied to any person who has not been a resident of Ontario for at least a year before application is made with the intention of making his permanent home within the Province, unless he has been registered for at least one year in the jurisdiction under which he last resided prior to application under the Ontario act.

This provision scorns the "good neighbor" policy and is likely to prove unfortunate for Canada, as calculated to dam the flow of mining venture money from the United States. It is generally agreed that if adequate capital is to be raised to develop Canada's great opportunities in mines and petroleum much of it must come from the United States, as Great Britain will be out of the running for years to come.

Adoption of Section 15 would mean that any citizen from south of the line, who has not been passed upon by the blue-sky commission of the State in which he last resided, even though he represented or hoped to bring in important capital, would be condemned to wear out shoe-leather tramping the streets of Toronto for one year before being eligible to enter the exclusive ranks of brokers, investment counselors or salesmen. It entirely ignores the demonstrable fact that, presumably through collusion between securities commissions and surety bond companies, registration in some States is denied unless the applicant is able to show cash assets of at least $25,000. In other words, possession of cash is placed before honesty and right-living, and Ontario is apparently bent upon following the same undemocratic path. When, and by whom, was possession of mere wealth designated as an infallible guarantee of honorable dealing or intent?

The brokerage business, if conducted strictly upon a commission basis, as it should be, is one of the very few financial occupations in which an honest man may engage with little or no capital. Besides that under the powers of the act, the commissioners are given every opportunity to inquire into the antecedents and current standings of an applicant, and it therefore seems quite unnecessary to keep an honest man—even from the United States—waiting that long before he can take direct participation in the great work that calls for the help, energy and resources of any man—any honest man—who can be induced to take a hand.

Electric Light Bulb Starts Fire in Back Porch of Town Home

Timmins firemen had seven calls during the past week, four of them being for chimney and pipes with no damage resulting. Another was an imaginary fire, the manager of a local store taking no chances when he thought he smelled smoke in the building. An oil burner that became overheated at 34 Wilson avenue was responsible for a call to the firemen this morning shortly after seven o'clock, but no damage resulted.

One rather unusual cause of a fire occurred on Sunday morning at 283 Maple Street North. An electric light bulb left burning on the porch set fire to the wall of the porch. The fire was extinguished with a damage of about $75.

Timmins Man Enjoys Only Few Short Hours Liberty

The following paragraph is from last week's issue of The New Liskeard speaker:—

"Pat Cummings 23-year-old Timmins man admitted to St. Mary's on the Lake Sanatorium from the district jail some time ago, decided on Sunday that he had had enough of the institution and made his escape that evening about 9.30. He caught a bus to Cobalt, where he purchased a ticket on the T. and N.O. to North Bay, but before the late train arrived he was arrested by Provincial Constables L. Thompson and A. Souliere. Constable Thompson had been notified by the authorities and with Constable Souliere drove to Cobalt and found Cummings at the station. The officers said they believed the escape had been assisted from outside, in the matter of clothing, etc. He was brought to headquarters and held for later disposal."

Telephone Business Showing Increase at Timmins Exchange

After referring to the retirement of Mr. Thomas McCamus as president of the Northern Telephone Co., and the tributes paid to the good work of Mr. McCamus during his long tenure of office as president, The New Liskeard Speaker gives the following account of the annual meeting of the Northern Telephone Co.:

"The Annual General Meeting of shareholders of the Northern Telephone Company Limited was held at the head office of the Company, New Liskeard, on Monday, February 26th, and the Directors' Report, Financial Statement and report of the Auditor were submitted to the shareholders present. More than half the issued stock was represented at the meeting.

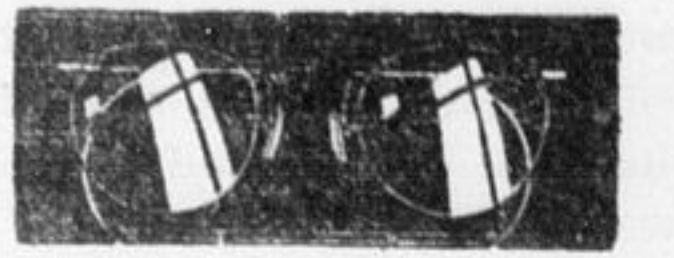

"The reports showed another satisfactory year's business in 1944 and a healthy growth in the number of telephones in use. The largest increase was in the mining areas and particularly in the Timmins-Schumacher exchange. The Company had a total of 17,060 telephones in use at December 31st, 1944.

New additions to switchboard capacity are now being installed at Tim-mins and New Liskeard and new common battery equipment is on order for Kapuskasing. It is planned to install this in the Company's own building to be erected in a central location.

"The financial statement showed total revenue of $605,479.20 for 1944 and after payment of all charges and income taxes an amount of $23,004.88 was carried to surplus. The Balance Sheet shows the cost of the Company's capital assets—buildings, central office and subscribers' equipment, pole lines, vehicles and furniture—to have now reached the sum of $1,539,660.13. Against this a depreciation reserve of $780,109.21 had been set up.

"Give me the tools and I'll get back to my Job..."

AFTER three years' ground-crew service with the R.C.A.F., Harvey Baxter was returning to civil life, to his wife and three youngsters. In peacetime an electrician, he was anxious to get back to his trade, but he had neither the tools nor the wherewithal to buy them.

Harvey Baxter was discharged before the new government provisions came into effect, enabling veterans to obtain such assistance as he needed. That is why he came to see us.

He had a modest asset in a little farm he owned, but was short of cash. Could we lend him $150 to buy the tools he needed to resume his trade?

Indeed we could—and we did... his proposition was sound and we were impressed by his determination to succeed.

Harvey Baxter set to... bought his tools, got out printed notices advertising the fact that he was a qualified electrician, and, within a few weeks, he had more work than he could handle.

This new B of M customer is well on his way with his own rehabilitation plan. His determination and self-reliance, coupled with a bank loan, have put him on his feet again.

Do You Know... that Canada's programme for the rehabilitation of her servicemen and women upon demobilization is one of the most forward-looking social schemes ever devised. This programme provides veterans with opportunities for training, completion of education, land settlement and protection against illness and unemployment. Through war service gratuities and re-establishment credits, servicemen may carry out many of the plans they have been making while in uniform.

Upon discharge... servicemen everywhere who are in need of special assistance in working out their civilian plans are turning to the Bank of Montreal. We welcome the opportunity of working with these men who have given of themselves so freely for their country, and we are determined to aid them in their return to civil life in every way we can. For these men our managers are providing sound counsel on money matters and about financial pitfalls to avoid, and, through banking services, are giving assistance—as far as they may be able—over and above that provided by the Government's programme. Call on the manager or accountant of our branch in your district. He will be interested in your plans and problems, whatever their extent may be. You will appreciate his helpful approach and sound counsel.

A folder for servicemen that is yours for the asking at any branch of the Bank. Or, you may write the Head Office in Montreal for a copy.
