Re-open Transatlantic Flower Service

John Hunt (right) of British FTD, brings Canada's florists immediate plan to resume overseas flowers-by-wire. Ernest S. Simmons (left) international FTD official, and Paul E. Angie, president of Allied Florists and Growers approve. At right, stylis Kay Gilber wins or a rose.

Hunt was presented at the Ontario session of growers and retailers by Ernest S. Simmons of Toronto, director and chairman of sales and advertising of international Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association whose headquarters are in the United States. Simmons announced that Hunt would go from Toronto and Winnipeg to Chicago, Washington and Detroit to re-establish overseas service also for the thousands of FTD member florists throughout the U.S. The current post-war plan for Transatlantic exchange will be formally approved at the annual board meeting of the international group in Detroit this month where Hunt will present the detailed plan Simmons said. The latter revealed that FTD expects the flower business will absorb thousands of disabled veterans—approximately 2,000 as growers, and perhaps 2,000 at various retail branches. Physicians and counsellors a service hospitals also share the opinion that the florist business is one which offers splendid opportunities for injured servicemen.

China, Too, Needs Clothes and Shoes

Rags, paper, cotton cloth and cotton padding—these were the sumptuous materials which went to make a pair of man's boots costing $800 Chinese, or approximately $48 Canadian, last winter. Back from China in an American Mission (Interdenominational), the other day, Mrs. G. H. Harris, missionary's wife tells the story of her purchase of a pair of shoes for her husband. $250, Chinese, went to the woman who sewed course paper and old rags together to make the soles. $300, Chinese, bought one square foot of black cotton cloth for the uppers. Cotton padding cost nothing fortunately, but another $250, Chinese, went to the cobbler who sewed the soles to the tops. So, for a total of eight hundred dollars, Chinese, the missionary husband was provided with a pair of boots scarcely better than bedroom slippers. And these were meagre protection against the cold in northern, mountainous Kansu province where the temperature drops well below zero in winter. Cut off by the invading Japanese armies, with a young son interned by the Japanese in the occupation zone, M. and Mrs. Harris shared with the people of China the fruits of fourteen years of invasion. Systematic looting by the Japanese of everything useful to their war machine created shortages, prelude to inflation. And inflated prices of even the most primitive necessities meant a standard of living so low that it is difficult for us in Canada to visualize conditions. Tea—the Chinese necessity—was $70 a pound (Canadian) when the Harris' left, and sugar hadn't been seen for years. Candles cost several hundred dollars (Chinese) each so that it was customary to rise with the sun and go to bed at dark. Oil for the lamps had been unprocurable for years. Conditions in China generally are desperate, according to Dr. Isaac Page, Secretary of the China Island Mission. Multiple conditions in Europe by ten, says he, and you have some idea of what the reconstruction job in China is going to be. The need for clothing is acute. China's one-time flourishing silk and cotton industries were destroyed by the Japanese and the raw materials sent to Japan. It has been impossible to import cloth from other sources such as Britain, India, and the United States. Home weaving by the peasant farmers of cotton and flax grown on their own farms has supplied cloth for only a very small percentage. United China Relief has assisted in setting up the beginnings of textile industry in certain liberated areas. But these have been a mere drop in the bucket for the vast majority of China's four hundred million people, many of them literally stripped of all possessions by Japan. Homeless, bereft of parents and other relatives, thousands of babies are being cared for in "warphanages" organized under the sponsorship of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek. For these, every stitch of clothing must be supplied. The National Clothing Collection, sponsored by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund on behalf of United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration appeals to us in Canada to give all we can spare without replacement to help reclothe the destitute peoples of China, as well as our other Allies who have borne the brunt of the war. This winter, men women and children in Belgium, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Greece, Luzembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Russia, and Yugoslavia, face death and disease from exposure if help is not forthcoming from us in Canada. A common pool of used clothing will be found from which the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will distribute suitable clothing free to the needy and destitute of these countries without discrimination. These are the types of clothing for which an appeal is being made—suits, odd coats, shirts, trousers, dresses, skirts, blouses, overcoats, jackets scarves and shawls, footwear and blankets. Clothing for both winter and summer wear is needed. Al-

Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944

The Industry and Labour Board which administers The Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, considers, in view of the termination of hostilities and the cancellation of war production, the acute manpower shortage which existed during the war years will be minimized, therefore the postponement as to working hours previously provided shall be cancelled and effective November 1st, 1945, the working hours of an employee in any industrial undertaking shall not exceed forty-eight (48) in the week.

1. Regulation 4 of Ontario Regulations 8/44 is amended by adding thereto the following subregulation:

(1a) Notwithstanding the provisions of subregulation 1, an employer may adopt one or more overtime work periods in his industrial undertaking between the 1st day of November 1945 and the 31st day of December 1945 without a consent in writing of the Board, but the overtime shall not exceed thirty hours in the aggregate.

BLACK FLAGS on U Boats

When Nazi U-boat commanders hoisted black flags of surrender, it was a "go ahead" signal to the three out of every eight Canadians who normally depend for their livelihood on export trade.

For five years the flow of foreign trade has been largely a government responsibility. But now, to help create peacetime jobs, Canadian enterprise must do its full share in finding customers abroad. This means doing business all over the world, in strange and distant cities, in a hundred languages and currencies.

Canadian banks have a key role in this complicated but essential peacetime task. Every day their foreign branches and correspondents arrange credits, handle documents and perform other intricate operations to bring buyers and sellers together across the obstacles of distance, language and custom.

This banking service is of primary importance to business and to every Canadian worker as Canada turns to the task of re-creating trade abroad to provide jobs at home.
